ART CHARLEBOIS.

Showing how the name of noteworthy engineers is being painted on the insignia of C. P. R. locomotives.

NO new policy undertaken of recent years by the C. P. R. has received such widespread expression of approval as that of naming passenger locomotives after the engineers, who by reason of their fine service or deeds of exceptional heroism have earned special distinction at the hands of their Company. If the engineers themselves are pleased, still more so is the general public, which realizes that an admirable system has been discovered for paying due tribute to a splendid race of men who have hitherto hid their lights under a bushel. The C. P. R. is displaying these names in no nigardly fashion. They are incorporated on the newly adopted insignia of the railway—a circular band enclosing a beaver mounted shield on which is painted a Maple Leaf. The name of the engineer is shown in letters of gold upon a blue ground, while the green leaf, the white shield and the brown beaver afford a color combination exceedingly striking and effective. This insignia is painted under the windows of the engineer's cab, the most conspicuous, and at the same time most appropriate position that could have been selected.

Jack Hartney, who runs the President's engine when the head of the great system leaves Montreal for the West, has such skill in starting a train that the passengers would not know it is in motion unless they looked out of the window.

Arthur Charlebois has been forty-two years in railway service, and comes of a family of engineers—his father, Pierre Charlebois, having been the eldest conductor in Canada when he died. The tradition is being kept up for he has a son a fireman on the C. P. R. to-day. Arthur Charlebois was one of the founders of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers in Montreal.

Tom Turner is well known and exceedingly popular at North Bay. He has been in railway life since 1882, when he worked with an extra gang on the Brockville, Ottawa and Canada Central Railways. In 1887 he was promoted to locomotive engineer, and in 1888 to run out of North Bay, where he is still running.

The following is the first list of engineers on Eastern Lines who have been selected for the honor of having their names painted on a locomotive:

Letters That Were Taken From Captain von Papen Show Guilt of Prussians

REPEATED declarations of the German Emperor and Hindenburg and Ludendorff that the war was forced upon Germany, and assertions from the same sources that Germany was taken by surprise by the Russian mobilization, attaches particular interest to certain papers taken from Capt. von Papen, late military attache at Washington.

Among the papers which have been published by the British Government in a white book appears a letter from R. von Wild, of the German War Ministry in Berlin, to Capt. von Papen, seeking information regarding the best means of blowing up railroad trains "in the event of a European war." The significant point is that this letter was written March 12th, 1914, about five months before the outbreak of war. This letter says:

"According to newspaper reports several railway trains were blown up by revolutionaries during the troubles in Mexico. In order to form an opinion whether, in the event of an

CAPT. VON PAPEN.

European war, explosions of this kind would have to be reckoned with, it is requested that, if possible, information should be obtained as to how these attacks have been carried out. Were mines and explosives placed on lines which were little guarded, or were the attacks carried out on the train by igniting a charge of dynamite, or by the employment of infernal machines?"

Capt. von Papen, replying from Mexico, where it is now known that he was industriously planting the seeds of German propaganda and establishing connections for Germany to use in the event that she should war upon the United States, did not regard the operations of the Mexican revolutionaries as of any particular value. For, four months later, he wrote from Mexico City:

"I am convinced from personal evidence that all the recent cases of destruction of railway lines by explosion were brought about by burying dynamite under the line itself and then igniting it by an electric current as soon as the train has reached the appointed place. I consider it out of the question that explosions prepared in this way would have to be reckoned with in an European war. They are only possible on lines that are ill-guarded, which, as in this country, often pass for miles through revolutionary districts, and have no protection other than pilot trains. Infernal machines, so far as I know, have never been employed."

Another letter to von Papen from the manager of the Potsdam branch of the Disconto-Gesellschaft, has this postscript:

"P.S.—We have never before seen such preparations for war as are being made at present. German Government stocks fell to-day one per cent. Kind regards,

"R. Mimel."

This letter was regarded as of particular interest by the British compilers of the correspondence in view of its date—July 25th, 1914, while negotiations were still in progress to avoid war.

Negro In Belgian Colors.

A coal-black negro, a citizen of the Belgian Congo, dressed completely in red, propelling a push cart painted yellow, may be seen on the boulevards of Brussels, says Libre Belgique, the Belgian newspapers which the Germans have been unable to suppress. The negro is selling shoe polish. Belgians who still possess shoes take great pleasure in buying from the negro. He is doing a rushing business and will probably continue to do so until it filters through the German's thick cranium that the quality of the shoe polish is not the reason for the negro's popularity with purchasers but because as he perambulates down the boulevards his black visage, red costume and yellow cart represent a living Belgian flag. Then it will be the "Kommandantur" and the cool shade of St. Giles' prison for the black, red and yellow man.

OUR KHAKI SETTLERS

SOLDIERS SEE PROSPERITY AHEAD FOR KAPUSKASING.

Although Veterans Are Unused to Bush Life, They Find the Change Agreeable and the Germans Imprisoned In Neighboring Internment Camp Prove a Source of Entertainment.

THERE is profit and pleasure, labor and loss ahead of the soldier settlers at Kapuskasing, but they only see peace and prosperity ahead. Across the river from the soldier settlement the finest band in Canada played magnificent melodies Sunday afternoon. The bandsmen are interned German musicians, who plan a triumphal tour through the Fatherland when, as they hope, the Kaiser wins his final victory, but the soldier settlers only enjoy the triumphant strains, and pay little heed to the expressed desires of the alien artists.

Seventy returned men are there to-day. Forty-four of them have selected one-hundred acre lots in the township. Five of them are already in their log cabins on the farm sites, and twenty more will be settled this month. They are clearing stumps as rapidly as old-time bush farmers did. White spruce, tamarac, silver birch and balsam is easily removed, but the snaky roots of the Balm of Gilead (white poplar) are hard to pull out. French-Canadian Roman Catholics in this section of the north land regard the last named tree with almost superstitious awe. They will not use this timber for building purposes. They believe it was from a tree of that kind the cross of Calvary was made. The soldier settlers lack superstition. They use the wood without fear of evil result.

One settler, who fought with the Princess Patricias, is the live stock king of the settlement. He has six pigs, twenty-five chickens, and two hundred rabbits, and will soon have horses and oxen. He already figures on $200 profit on his pigs. Since December 10th last his hens have laid an egg a day. He has designs on the vegetable market. If his present plans are successfully carried out he will produce from the virgin soil of his farm this season forty thousand head of cabbage, besides crops of other kinds.

They have no complaints, the soldiers who have settled beside the Kapuskasing. Early discomforts and winter cold have been forgotten since the ice broke on the river. Their cleared lands are almost ready for the plough. Those already settled on their lots labor cheerfully from daylight to dark. They feel they are working for future prosperity, making a place for their children's children.

Those blessed with foresighted vision even see the time when their descendants will boast of their ancestry as proudly as the descendants of the U. E. L. do in older Canada to-day.

Few of the men ever worked in the bush before they went to Kapuskasing. Their wives and families have taken as kindly to it as they. The twenty-year-old daughter of one says she will never return to the city, even if the settlement is not a success and all her kin are driven back to old Ontario. She works as hard as her father works, and he is the oldest man of all there. For twenty years his one ambition has been to own a farm. His dreams are becoming realities at Kapuskasing. He has fought all over the empire, during thirty years of service.

The market for the produce of the soldier settlers is assured. A two-million-dollar pulp mill will be erected in the near future. To operate the plant twenty-eight to thirty thousand horse-power will be generated at the Big Beaver Falls, where the waters of Kapuskasing leap 45 feet in three successive strides. The flow is certain. The river takes its rise in the lake of the same name 75 miles above the settlement. It joins the Mattagami miles below, later links up with the Moose river and then finds entrance to Hudson' Bay by way of James Bay.

The rugged beauty of New Ontario cannot surpass in any place the picture presented where the Kapuskasing flows. The waters to-day are tinged with the stain of the bush. Watching them where they glide above the falls, one is impressed by the deep, rich dark brown flood sliding over the rocks and there breaking into cream-crested billows of beauty. There are 650 interned aliens at Kapuskasing. During the first year of the war, Col. Fred Clarke, who has since won the D.S.O. with the railway troops in Flanders, succeeded in getting them to clear seven hundred acres of land and construct thirty-five miles of Government road. About the time of his giving up that command, Germans joining their brethren there brought a story of great punishment for those Huns who labored for the good of the enemy. Work was abandoned and it seemed that till the end of the war Canada would have to provide all the labor required to keep our interned enemies content.

Peaceful persuasion has induced 50 per cent. of them to do the necessary work of the compound. Germany and Britain have agreed that civilian prisoners of war may volunteer for work of that nature in the vicinity of their place of imprisonment for their own needs and not to benefit their guardians. The Canadian Government is observing that agreement in its treatment of the aliens at Kapuskasing. Their movements are restricted, the guard is strict and few dare to venture a break for freedom, because they fear the miles of bush they must penetrate to win clear.

The bodies of twelve of them who did not die in the bush, lie in a graveyard east of the camp. Those who are left in captivity believe that the day will come when the Kaiser himself will set them free again

Canada's Registration

Its Purpose and Application

CANADA faces the gravest crisis in her history. Four years of war have taken from the Dominion a heavy toll in talent and labor; yet despite the shortage of man power, our Allies still depend on Canada to maintain her own fighting forces at full strength and to increase her exports of food and war materials, so vital to them, and to the successful prosecution of the war.

Every ounce by which Canada can increase her food production and every ounce Canada can save in her food consumption is needed for export to the Allies.

Should the war continue for another year, food cards and a rationing system may have to be instituted. It is the duty of Canada to be prepared for whatever situation circumstances may force upon her.

It is quite probable that before the war is won our Government may have to place restrictions upon the occupations in which men and women may engage. In such an event the Government wishes to be in a position to render all possible assistance in keeping our population usefully and profitably employed.

Registration Day, June 22nd

These conditions point to the necessity of Canada knowing the exact capabilities of her men and women at home.

All persons residing in Canada, male or female; British or alien of 16 years and over, will be required to register on June 22nd and truthfully answer the questions set forth upon the registration card.

It is not the Government's intention to conscript labour in any form, but to assist in directing it wisely, so that every available unit of human energy may be utilized to the best advantage.

The information procured through registration will be used—as an aid to the Military Authorities in procuring the men necessary to maintain "Canada's First Line of Defence"—to mobilize all units of available labor in the Dominion and direct them from less essential to more essential occupations—to establish and intelligently administer a system of food rationing should that become necessary.

POPPY AS AN EMBLEM.

Decorates the Graves of Heroes In Flanders Fields.

There is only one real rival to the Maple Leaf as a possible national emblem that could be grown on Flanders Field and be used to make beautiful the graves of the fallen Canadians, and that is the poppy, according to Mr. Percival H. Mitchell, president of the Toronto Horticultural Association.

"In my opinion," said Mr. Mitchell, "nothing should be considered as a national emblem other than the Maple Leaf. We are at present wrapped up in the Maple Leaf, and I do not see any reason why we should ever change it. If we consider a flower which has been introduced into Canada and which through several generations has become a wild flower, why not the poppy? No Canadian who has ever read 'In Flanders Field' will ever look at a poppy again without thinking of the graves in Flanders. Surely there has been sentiment wrapped up in the poppy that, through Col. McCrae's poem, will keep it very close to the hearts of Canadians. Many of the suggested spring flowers would be very lonely looking. If you could have something to carpet the graves like the phlox (subulata) it might be better. You want something that will mass. I am inclined to suggest the ox-eye daisy or black-eyed Susan, and, if those listed are grown, there should be several varieties planted so as to prolong the blooming season. Any flower or flowers selected should have the following points: They should grow under all conditions; they should have a long blooming season and the flower, when out of bloom, should still have some substance to the plant; they should be hardy and perennial; they should be decorative; they should not have been chosen by any other country or state, and they should be typical of Canada."

Mr. Mitchell said it would be difficult to mass the columbine, and that its habitat was the woods and shaded places. He was inclined to speak a good word for the aster and said there were altogether fifty-nine species and a standard form might be found. The bunch-berry seemed to be rather an insignificant little thing for such a purpose, and though it grew far north it might not grow in Flanders, and it would be difficult to get the hepatica and the trillium to grow in the open. Only the columbine and the perennial aster seemed in any way to meet the case and they did not seem very promising as they are mostly short-lived and do not present much of an appearance after the time of inflorescence.

But Mr. Mitchell returned to the Maple Leaf and pointed out that now it is strengthening its traditions more than ever. It has passed through the war. It is on the crests and badges of the battalions and can be worked effectively into design.

When Salt Was Expensive.

"As cheap as salt," is a common expression even in these days of high prices, but there were times across the line when salt was not any too cheap. Col. W. T. Gregory, the Leamington patriotic worker, possesses a well-preserved document which was a receipt for $520 in gold in payment for 520 pounds of salt. His father was the purchaser in the south in 1864, requiring the salt for the curing of meat—"and it had to be carted from Petersburg," remarked Col. Gregory. "Some people here are complaining about war-time prices, but there were real war-time prices on this continent in those days. What would they say if they had to pay a dollar a pound for salt?"

These Warm Weather Days—Make Milk Your CHIEF Diet

For Health and Economy—For Children and Grown-Ups

Warm weather demands a change in diet. Health and happiness is related to pure food. Over taxing the stomach in warm weather robs you of energy. Nature urges you to use concentrated foods Chief of these is milk. It is nourishing. It contains all the food elements the active body craves. It is delicious either as a beverage or as a food. It does away with the need for many other foods. It is easily digested and helps to digest other food more readily.

Children especially need more milk in warm weather, for milk nourishes without distressing. Children who drink lots of milk in warm weather keep fit for both school and play. Their growth is encouraged. They are happier--less likely to get peevish.

Another thought—sleeplessness often is only hunger which you can quickly satisfy with a glass of milk. Double your regular milk order for the summer months

Most important of all—use Pure Milk from the Peterboro Milk Products Dairy—milk that is rich in cream, that is scientifically pasteurized and clarified in a most up-to-date dairy, that is delivered to you regularly in time for each morning's breakfast—that costs no more than ordinary milk.

Good Road Systems Would Connect Peterboro County With Provincial Highway At Whitby

Deputy Minister of Highways Deals With Another Phase of Good Roads System and its Application to Peterborough County—Financial Advantages.

THE ROAD SUPERINTENDENT

Two previous articles by Mr. W. A. McLean, Deputy Minister of Highways, have dealt briefly with the ordinary class of county roads, in which it was shown that the provincial grants for construction and maintenance are substantial; and that no great additional burden is imposed on the county. It was also pointed out, and emphasized that the cost of each mile of road is largely in proportion to the amount of traffic over it. This brings us to the consideration of two additional classes of roads for which still further provision is made, to the advantage of the county, viz.: "Provincial County Roads" and "Suburban Roads."

Provincial County Roads.

Provincial county roads are a class of roads carrying much traffic between cities or other important terminal points. As much of this is urban motor traffic, for which the townships should obtain consideration the provincial grant is raised to 60 per cent. for construction and 60 per cent. for maintenance.

It is only fair to assume that one such road would connect the City of Peterborough with the Provincial Highway at Whitby; and as at present contemplated, we might expect another such road to run easterly from the City of Peterborough across the country thereby taking care of a substanial part of itner-urban traffic. Such roads, carrying much motor traffic, will necessarily require a wider and better road-bed than the average rural highway, in order that they may be reasonably safe and durable. The higher provincial subsidy is therefore provided in order that townships and counties may be relieved of what would be the unfair charge involved in providing for this class of traffic.

Suburban Roads.

Traffic is at a maximum density adjacent to cities. The City of Peterborough occupies an area of 2,822 acres, and has a population of 22,426. If a farm one or two miles distant from a county road is required to contribute to the cost of the county road, it is obviously fair that the area and population comprised in the city should contribute in some degree to the cost of county roads.

In the United States cities are not separated from the county organization in which they are situated, and thus contribute on the basis of assessment to road improvement. In Ontario, where cities upon incorporation automatically become separated from the county, this inequality is overcome by organization for "suburban roads."

Under this plan, a special commission of three members would be formed to deal with county roads immediately adjacent to the City of Peterborough; one representative to be selected by the City, one by the County Council, and the two commissioners so selected choose a third.

It would be the duty of this Board to determine the roads to which the city should contribute; determine the amount to be spent each year, and direct the expenditure. The levy upon the city for construction is limited to one-half mill annually. The total spent each year is subject to the approval of the County Council. It is evident that the city and county are equally represented in the control of this expenditure. The provincial subsidy on the combined expenditure is 40 per cent. for construction, and the city and county 30 per cent. each. For maintenance, the province contributes 20 per cent. and the city and county each 40 per cent. The result of this levy upon the city is that, for heavily travelled roads within the suburban or "Metropolitan" area, expenditure can be doubled at no greater cost to the county than for the ordinary type of county road. The total provincial subsidy is also doubled, as it is based on the combined expenditure of city and county.

The City of Toronto has voluntarily contributed to the county roads of York on this basis since 1910. Other cities, Windsor, Brantford, Hamilton, Kingston and others have organized under recent general legislation. When the County of Peterborough decides to undertake a system of county roads, this is a matter which this Department would immediately take up with the city authorities of Peterborough, and the reasons for this co-operation would be more fully outlined.

Financial Advantages Summarized.

County road systems are, in general, granted a provincial subsidy of 40 per cent. for construction and 20 per cent. for maintenance. In addition, a liimted mileage of more heavily travelled roads would be classed as "Provincial" County Roads, and would receive 60 per cent. for both construction and maintenance. The City of Peterborough would be required to co-operate with the County in developing a limited mileage of "Suburban Roads" carrying heavy traffic immediately adjacent to the City.

The expenditure on which the provincial subsidy is estimated includes all general road construction, bridges, culverts, machinery, gravel pits, and wages of the County Road Superintendent. No charge is made by the Province in connection with services or expenses of engineers of the Highways Department.

The total of grants paid to the end of 1917 to some of the counties which have been operating under the system, are indicative of what the provincial subsidy means:

Wentworth has received	$ 170,246
Peel has received	147,091
Oxford has received	202,848
Lanark has received	76,386
Wellington has received	129,145
Prince Edward has received	107,266
Frontenac has received	66,816
Waterloo has received	74,437
York has received	257,765

The Road Superintendent.

County road work is placed under the direction of a County Road Superintendent, who acts as "manager" for the County Council, and gives all his time to the work. The best type of superintendent is usually a man of good practical ability, energetic, accustomed to handling men and machinery, with an ordinary education and some business ability— a man with the qualifications of a contractor's head foreman. He should be a man who can get work done. The average superintendent in the Province is paid $1,500 a year; of which the Province contributes 40 per cent or $600, so that the cost to the average county would be $900 a year.

The four lowest expenditures made by County Councils last year, with cost of superintendence in each case, were as follows:

County.	Total Expenditure	Superintendence
Victoria	$6,727.59	$ 712.39
Peel	5,517.47	1,230.10
Elgin	5,517.47	937.05
Norfolk	9,685.12	398.30

The Province paid 40 per cent. of the cost of superintendence in each case; so that the cost to the above counties for superintendence would be reduced in Victoria to $427.43; in Peel to $738.06.; in Elgin to $562.23; in Norfolk to $238.98. Victoria, Elgin and Norfolk systems were created in 1917, and were in process of organization. Peel has an old system, and work was largely confined to repair.

Other matters relating to motor vehicle revenue, the advantage of good roads, and the reasons why County Councils are entering upon this work at the present time will be dealt with in a further article.

INCREASE IN PRICE OF GAS TO CONSUMERS IN PETERBOROUGH WILL TAKE EFFECT TO-DAY

Cost of Manufacturing Artificial Gas Has Been Steadily Increasing —Coal is Hard to Get.

EXPLANATORY LETTER

A few days ago it was announced that Peterborough would be visited with another increase in gas rates. The increase will take effect to-day. The letter addressed to City Clerk Armstrong announcing the intention of the Commission is as follows:

Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, 190 University Avenue, Toronto.

May 22nd, 1918.

L. G. E.

S. A. Armstrong, Esq., City Clerk, Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir:—

Re—Gas Rates.

For the past three years, the cost of manufacturing artificial gas has been steadily and rapidly increasing, and in addition to this, supplies of all kinds, including hard and soft coal and gas oil, have been very hard to procure, as well as being of a quality inferior to that which was formerly obtained. These factors have all tended towards less efficient operation and steadily mounting costs, until at the present time, the rates which are being charged to consumers, are entirely inadequate to cover operating expenses and fixed charges.

The Commission has been very loath to request any further increases in price from its customers and has withheld taking action for several months, in the hope that conditions might improve and that it would not be necessary. However, matters have now come to such a stage that it is impossible to continue the manufacture and sale of gas at the present retail prices and it is, therefore, necessary to advise you that the Commission is compelled to put into effect, an increase in the price of gas to $1.75 net per M cu. ft., for all consumers, beginning June 1st.

We feel sure you will understand that this action is taken solely with the object of protecting the Commission from continued heavy financial losses in the operation of its gas plants.

Yours truly,

Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

(Sgd.) F. A. GABY,
Chief Engineer.

BE READY FOR EMERGENCIES.

The best way is to always keep a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house, ready for emergencies. Then when croup or colds come suddenly they can be promptly cured before they have time to reach an acute and dangerous stage. To meet this requirement we have put the syrup up in family size bottles which contain nearly three times as much as the 25-cent bottle and sell at 50 cents.

Y. M. C. A. Work For Soldiers

That the resolution passed by the G.W.V.A. does not represent the feeling of all returned men is evidenced by the following facts, as furnished by the local Y.M.C.A.:

One returned man who was in the big battles of the Somme and Vimy Ridge said that he received free coffee and that at Vimy the Y.M.C.A. canteen was established at the east side of the Ridge less than two miles from the front line within forty-eight hours after the Ridge had been taken. This is also verified by a letter from the General commanding the Canadians congratulating the Y.M.C.A. officer on his promptness in following up the attack and thanking him for the services rendered. The sports conducted by the Y.M.C.A. were also mentioned, such as baseball, football, volley-ball, tennis, etc., the equipment for which has cost, and is costing, the Y.M.C.A. thousands of dollars. The concerts were free except where it was necessary to rent a French hall, when a slight charge was made.

Another returned man stated that while he had been overcharged at one Y.M.C.A. canteen he realized that this might have occurred through the dishonesty of the man detailed for the duty of serving at the counter, of which the Y.M.C.A. was perhaps ignorant. He said that in spite of this one experience he found the Y.M.C.A. was doing excellent work.

Another returned man who wore four blue chevrons stated that his experience in meeting Y.M.C.A. officers was a helpful one. Still another returned man who figured in the Somme offensive stated emphatically that he was served free coffee in that drive from a Y.M.C.A. stall right up at the front.

These facts are indisputable evidence that the military work of the Association is proving of the greatest value, and each of these returned men stated that the Y.M.C.A. was the soldiers' best friend in France, or expressed the same sentiment.

SPLENDID ADDRESS IN ST. JAMES' CHURCH BY DR. JESSIE BIRNIE

"The Great Drama of the Life of Napoleon," the splendid address given by Dr. Jessie Birnie in St. James' church last evening, was well attended and the proceeds which will be devoted by the Mothers' Club to patriotic purposes, were gratifying. Mrs. Sargison, president of the club, occupied the chair. In congratulating Dr. Birnie on her address, Mr. Greatrix spoke of the wide reading and study which she must have done to weave so clever, interesting and instructive a speech.

A bright programme was given by Master Ashton Sise, a six year old boy, who rendered a remarkably fine solo, and Miss Florence Emmerson also sang.

Insomnia Cured Without Drugs

INTERNAL BATHING RELIEVES THE CAUSE.

If you do not sleep there is always some cause. Don't start dosing with drugs. Nerves can't consume them. Relieve the cause and a good, sound sleep will be the result.

The system cannot be right if the Colon or large intestine is not kept clean, and free from all waste matter. Bathe internally if you want perfect health.

Mr. F. C. Voight, Rapid City, Man., writes: "For several years I suffered from Indigestion, Nervous Debility, Insomnia, and Constipation. Had no appetite, and the doctors did not expect that I would live throughout the winter. Your book interested me. I got a 'J.B.I. Cascade,' and in a few days obtained remarkable results I now sleep and enjoy my meals better than for years before. I regard the 'J.B.I. Cascade' as a God-send to me."

The "J.B.I. Cascade" as a perfected appliance for Internal Bathing invented by Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell of New York, and has been the means of restoring thousands to perfect health. It is shown and explained by the Warne Drug Co., who will be pleased to give you an interesting book called "The What, The Why, The Way of Internal Bathing," on request. Ask for it.

INCREASED PATRONAGE FOR PETERBORO PUBLIC LIBRARY

Many of the Best Known and Most Prominent Business Men Have Never Been Inside the Four Walls—Fourteen Hundred New Books Are Purchased Annually.

THE REFERENCE LIBRARY

Steadily growing in popularity since its opening in February, 1911, the Public Library constitutes an important asset to the city.

INCREASED PATRONAGE.

At the end of the first year, the report of the Librarian, Mr. Dela Fosse, showed an output of 42,737 books. At the end of the past year the number taken out totalled 56,025, representing an increase of patronage of nearly fifteen thousand. One peculiar feature of the patronage is the fact that many of the best known and most prominent business men in the city have never been inside the library walls. The outside circulation increases perceptibly weekly, and would be even greater if the farmers were alive to the benefits to be gained from the reference library of farm books kept. This department would be extended if the demand were greater.

1400 NEW BOOKS YEARLY.

1400 new books are placed yearly on the shelves, so that Peterboro readers are in touch with, broadly speaking, every publication of any importance on the continent. Mr. F. A. Morris is chairman of the Selective Committee; Mr. A. Mowat, of the Library Board.

REFERENCE LIBRARY.

A new feature of the library is the changing of the old reference room into the Librarian's room.

MR. F. M. DELA FOSSE

Whose work as Librarian has met with a large measure of success.

The reference library is steadily growing in value by the addition of some much needed books. Always courteous and most pleased to help the knowledge-seeker, Mr. Dela Fosse and the assistant librarians, Miss Dorothy Aylmer, B. A., and Miss Genevive Sullyan, all of whom are eminently qualified to assist in any branch of education, are kept very busy with the different visitors, who represent practically every branch of study and activity.

GRATIFYING FEATURE.

One of the most gratifying features, as well as the most important, is the work done by the Library staff to assist the Normal, Collegiate and Public schools pupils of the city.

The reference and general library is also an important branch in education and assistance to the University students and teachers during the holiday season.

READING ROOM POPULAR.

Mr. Dela Fosse spares no effort to make the visitor at the reading room very much at home, but has his own troubles in maintaining absolute silence, which office at times is taken as a personal affront, while it is in reality a necessary and kindly action in the interest of the general public. The reading room is thronged from 9 o'clock in the morning until 10 at night, and is the only place where a percentage of the public ever see a newspaper. The children's library is at all times most popular, while Saturday sees a steady stream of the school children, who remain until 10 o'clock at night.

FEES OF $200.

The public generally is fairly prompt in returning books, and only $200 was collected last year in fees for over time.

CATALOGUING BOOKS.

The books have been re-catulogued this year so that at a moment's notice Mr. Dela Fosse can lay his hands upon any book or reference needed. He has instituted a new feature in the keeping and cataloguing of clippings from the daily papers, through which articles dealing with subjects ranging from "How the Victoria Cross is Won," to "Mother Shipton's Prophecies." By request a full newspaper account of such events as the sinking of the Empress of Ireland, or the outbreak of the war, can be secured from Mr. Dela Fosse.

BUSINESS CENTRE.

The Library is the centre of a great deal of business activities. The Red Cross Headquarters are in the building; the Medical Association holds its monthly meetings down stairs where the medical library is kept. The Board allows meetings of public interest to be held in the building at any time.

ATTRACTIVE SPOT.

As a beauty spot few public institutions can compare with the Library with its well kept grounds and cheerful interior. The staff has a genuine interest in making the place attractive in appearance as well as in service.

REPAIR DEPARTMENT.

Lastly the repair department is a very busy spot. Happily, however, the conscientious person who borrows one books does his best to do as little harm as is possible to the books he takes out.

Battleplane "Ontario," presented by the Government of Ontario, through the Canadian Aviation Fund, to His Majesy's Government, and now operating in France. The machine is known as the Bristol Fighter, 1917, and has a Rolls-Royce engine. It is built by the British and Colonial Aeroplane Company of Bristol, and designed by Captain Barnwell, a pioneer of flying in Scotland. This is one of the most largely used and successful fighting machines at present in operation.

Canadian Hospital Was Demolished By Germans In Recent Bombing Raid

Nurses and Patients Were Caught In a Fiery Furnace—Many Unconscious Forms Were Carried Out.

A DESPERATE SITUATION

Canadian Press:

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, June 1.—Early on Thursday morning, when German airmen bombed another hospital, it was a Canadian institution that suffered. The Huns exacted a considerable toll of casualties, including nursing sisters and patients. Among those killed by the explosion or flames was an American medical officer, who was administering an anaesthetic to a British officer in the operating room when that part was blown up. The raid occurred at 12.30 o'clock in the morning.

A LARGE HOSPITAL.

The hospital attacked was a large one. It had been in existence since the early days of the war, and was marked by huge Red Cross signs. The German airmen, working partly by the light of the moon, dropped four bombs near the hospital, and then apparently not able to see exactly where they were hitting, lighted a brilliant flare, which was let fall to illuminate the surroundings. As the place was lighted up by this flare, another bomb or two, which dropped separately, struck a large wing of the hospital. In this wing there were three floors, the bottom one of which was the operating room. On the storey above were the office and patients' rooms, and above them were members of the hospital personnel. A part of the wing was demolished by the terrific explosion, and many unfortunate people were killed and wounded when the building collapsed and burned them.

HAD BETTER LUCK.

Strange to say, those who were on the top floor had better luck than those below them, and several escaped because they fell on the top of the debris. The surgeons were just about to operate on an aviation officer, and an American was standing by with the anaesthetic when the crash came. All those in the room were buried under an avalanche of brick and woodwork. The demolished wing caught fire and burned fiercely, with many victims still pinned in the wreckage. Nothing more awful has occurred in the annals of the hospital service since the war began. Every available person in the neighbourhood was called out to assist in the rescue work, and two fire brigades were called in. With the assistance of ladders and other fire apparatus, the hospital proper was rapidly emptied of patients and personnel. It was a desperate situation. A roaring furnace represented what was left of the big wing. Scores of people worked frenziedly at the flaming mass of twisted timbers in their attempts to reach those entombed, and many unconscious forms were carried out by heroic men, who risked their lives to reach them. The excellent work on the part of the firemen finally resulted in the fire being extinguished, but there were still many people buried in the ruins. There was no hope that they were alive.

HUNDREDS KILLED.

The raid caused the death of hundreds.

Rupture Is Curable

Results Not Influenced by Age or Length of Time Standing, Reports Expert.

Rupture is not a tear or breach in the abdominal wall, as commonly supposed, but it is a stretching or dilation of a natural opening says J. Y. Egan, of Toronto, the noted rupture appliance specialist who will visit Peterborough, Empress Hotel, Thursday, Friday (all day and night) 2 days only, June 6-7.

The "Curatus" as now used and approved will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, affording immediate comfort, but is intended to assist nature to close the opening in the shortest time known. This appliance has received highest award wherever shown, producing results without harmful injections or other aids. Mr. Egan has testimonials from our own section for inspection. Valuable Freight Was Destroyed At Niagara Falls

Two Cars Loaded With Automobiles Were Included in the Loss.

Special to the Examiner:

NIAGARA FALLS, June 1. — A spark from a locomotive caused a fire which burned the stock pens in the Grand Trunk eastbound yards here. The pens were completely destroyed, along with about twenty freight cars standing nearby. The cars were nearly all loaded with valuable freight for the eastern states. No cattle were in the pens at the time, though to-day or to-morrow a big consignment of cattle from the West was expected. The value of freight destroyed is hard to estimate, but the loss will reach sixty thousand. Two cars were loaded with automobiles.

MONTHS GRACE FOR EATING HOUSES

Prosecutions Will Not Be Instituted Until After July 1st.

OTTAWA, June 1.—The date after which prosecutions were to be instituted against public eating houses for not having secured licenses from the Canada Food Board has been postponed from June 1st to July 1st. The postponement is due to the fact that many eating houses only applied for their licenses at the last moment, and that owing to the congestion there has been some delay in issuing licenses.

The dimensions of the building will be 200 x 150, and it will be seven stories high.

Changes Are Not Substantiated

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 1.—Charges from overseas to the effect that huge quantities of Oliver equipment supplied to Canadian soldiers prior to their departure from the Dominion has been scrapped and left to rot round ordinance depots in England, and that such equipment is still being supplied only to be changed for the Webb equipment when Canadians leave for France, are not substantiated.

ONE OF NATURE'S COMMON TRICKS

Acts just like a wireless message and "ouch" is the answer

Press an electric button and you form a contact with a live wire which rings the bell. When your shoes press against your corn it pushes its sharp roots down upon a sensitive nerve and "ouch" you get a shock of pain.

Instead of trimming your corns, which merely makes them grow, just step into any drug store and ask for a quarter of an ounce of freezone. This will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. A few drops applied directly upon a tender, aching corn stops the soreness instantly, and soon the corn shrivels up so it lifts right out, root and all, without pain. This drug never inflames or even irritates the surrounding skin.

GENERAL FOCH WON'T STRIKE BACK UNTIL OCTOBER.

FRENCH EXPERT SAYS UNTIL THAT TIME ALLIES MUST MEET ATTACKS.

Paris, June 1. — The allied counter-blow will come in October, according to Marcel Hutin, the military critic of the Echo de Paris, and one of the few French writers who foretold the possibility of the Aisne attack, which he is now witnessing.

"Next October," writes M. Hutin, who cautions patience, "the Americans will have 1,500,000 men on the western front. Between now and then as Premier Clemenceau so frankly explained, we and our allies must meet all German attacks. We must economize in our reserves and hold the enemy in check, even at the cost of a few miles of ground."

Yes, I Intend To But Not Now

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 21.

Besides while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fate that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

Spring Colours And Materials

Embroidery For Distinction and Tucks For Style

NEW YORK, June 1.—Oh, the delightfully, deliciously dainty things one may wear this summer! Along Fifth Avenue the shops fairly dazzle one with frocks and accessories, so simple and bewitching. Each thing one sees on thinks the very loveliest until a glimpse is caught of the next one. There are heavenly shades of voile, made into fairy creations with tucks and tucks and tucks, by way of emphasis. There are tucks in the skirt, tucks on the waist and on the sleeves, in fact whenever it is possible to put a tuck! The collar and cuffs may be of filet lace, or baby Irish, for there is a decided turn in favor of this latter trimming. The girdle and perhaps the ribbons at wrist and neck, are of a wonderful contrasting color.

More About Organdy.

When all is said there is nothing more charming for summer days than organdie, crisp and cool. About every other dress is made of this material, or there is a touch of it for the collar, cuffs or sash. Often organdie is combined most effectively with voile or linen, sometimes even gingham is chosen as the comple ment of organdie. It is rather unusual to see a plain organdie, there are so many other kinds. Stripes of varying widths, from the narrowest pin stripe to the quite wide ones ones are favored. There are crossbars and plaids and tiny checks. Here, too, one sees the invasion of gingham, for the quaint old-time patterns of this material are being reproduced in organdies.

Old Colours for New.

Volumes could be written on the combinations of colour and the old-time favourites that are being so widely used to-day. Ever since the Government asked the patriotic women of our country to refrain from the use of khaki, there has been a veritable riot of colours. Flaming rosy pinks, corn-flower blues with that marvellous touch of violet in the blue, greens that seem to have stolen their tints from the April trees, and yellows and tans, and grays and lavenders, by way of contrast to the more intense hues. All white promises to be very smart for summer, as well as black-and-white.

Just a Touch of Embroidery.

If one wishes to be very elegant, one puts just a touch of embroidery one one's very best dress. Of course, the embroidery may, in reality, be beads or braid, but it all comes under the general title of embroidery. On the dress illustrated here, the simple design is on the waist. The dress is of French gray voile, and the design is worked up in white beads and silk of a darker shade of gray. The long lines of the dress are very good, as are the tree-quarter tucked sleeves, and the tucks in th skirt.

Bordered Materials and Flouncings.

The styles this year are o very appropriate for the bordered materials and embroidery flouncings. The short little Eton jackets have straight lower edges, so the narrower flouncings may be used, and the tunics can be made of the wider flouncings. The tight little underskirts and the waist usually match the material of the flouncings chosen. There are bordered voiles and crepes, as well as challis and silks, which are most attractive developed in the simple styles of this year.

CONSERVATORY CONCERT

The Conservatory of Music's annual closing concert at the Grand Opera House last night revealed a general excellence that left a deep impression upon the large audience, and must have brought a very large measure of satisfaction to Mr. Gliddon and his staff and to the students and their friends. It was a highly creditable closing, and the year of study that it presently terminates may surely be regarded as one of the most successful in the history of the Conservatory. One of the most encouraging features of the evening lay in the striking evidences that, despite the war and its uncertainties the musical education of the young folk, the men and women of to-morrow, is apparently not neglected. The first two numbers brought out this welcome and heartening fact, and the rest of the programme emphasized it. The children's chorus and the junior orchestra deserve every commendation for the musical beginnings that have already been made in so many of the little ones. The fresh, sweet voices carried a strong appeal, and the two numbers were sung in a manner that showed the fruits of the first lessons.

The orchestra played clearly and with good precision, shaded their effects nicely and worked up quite a forte for their numbers. Eleven of these young musicians were boys, three clarinets, two cornets and six violins. The presence of more boys than girls in the orchestra was reassuring that at least there are some boys to-day who, with their parents' encouragement, have talents and ambitions that run deeper than the undirected inclinations of the average boy of to-day. The "Gloria" tried the technique of the youngsters and found them readily responsive, accurate, and possessed of the spirit of the music.

Sam Swartz is but a little fellow a pupil of Miss Logan's, but he is fast gaining confidence and a command of his violin. His mazurka was well played, and with experience and the assurance it will bring the talent that shows in his present efforts will become more articulate.

Only two numbers allotted to the Conservatory Orchestra was delectable food, but the portions were of war-time proportions. The Carmen number suggested a Bizet treat, but a closer reading of the programme might not have aroused too great expectations. It plainly stated "selection," whereas the first hope grasped the plural. The orchestra well sustained its laurels. The brass hesitated for a moment, but was otherwise satisfactory, and the strings and reeds were exceptionally good. The orchestra has a depth of tone, orchestral strength, that is most gratifying to those who follow its work from year to year. Its members are to be congratulated upon their fidelity to the organization, realizing something of a duty in keeping the flame of music burning in these dark days. Besides there example is undoubtedly an inspiration to the students who will shortly graduate from the junior ranks.

Miss Florence Scott and Miss Helen MacLaren delighted the audience with the only vocal numbers on the programme. Miss Scott sang "Spring's Awakening" with a blithe effect, and in splendid voice and control. Her technique easily met the exactions of the second number, and her tone was rich, especially in the upper registers. Miss MacLaren more than pleased her audience. Her voice not only ranges widely, but its changing colours from mezzo that prano have merging beauties that alare altogether satisfying.

Miss Lora Logan's apparent preference for reflective music finds approval in her host of admirers. The Reverie she played last night touched the depth of feeling that was remembered from selections in a similar mood from Massenet, Godard and others she has used from time to time. Fullness and clarity of tone that is rich and round is only one of the qualities of her art, apart from the personality that vitalizes it. And this same musical instinct or personality is budding with the brilliant pianoforte technique of her sister, whose playing of Webber's concerto in F minor was the outstanding feature of the evening.

Miss Agnes Logan has already won recognition that cannot be amplified locally. In long curls and the short dress of a school girl, she astonished her audience last night by the sheer brilliance of her performance. The effect she created was heightened by the ease and grace with which the most difficult passages of the movements were met. Her shading is lovely. In the forte parts, she showed a surprising strength of tone, that contrasted with a light piano that was equally effective. This tone or touch control is a striking quality of Miss Logan's work. But it is only one. Her playing is marked by great fluency, well defined phrasing and an expressiveness that will develop with her years. A dreamy presence at the piano conveys the impression that she is actually part of the music, that it flows from her and not that it is something she has acquired. It is the personal touch, the sign of true musicianship which it is hoped will bloom into the splendid flower that famous pianists have predicted. The long concerto was followed with rapt attention partly because of the skill Miss Logan displayed, but to the majority of the audience because of the spell she worked with it. Her years are surely full of promise and Peterborough will watch her progress with hopes of great fulfillment. And the encouragement of music lovers goes out to her.

PETERBORO WILL HAVE A CITY BASEBALL LEAGUE

An Enthusiastic Meeting Was Held Last Evening and a Number of Teams Entered—Lindsay Will Be One Victim

At the baseball meeting held in the reception-room of the Empress Hotel last evening, the following officers were elected:

President—Ward Patterson.
Vice-President—A. T. Johnston.
Secretary-Treas.—Horace Walkey.
Grounds Committee—J. J. Soloman, A. C. Miller.

The booth privileges on the grounds will be donated to the Red Cross. All returned soldiers or anybody in khaki will be admitted free to the grounds. Their uniform will serve as a pass.

The first game will be a double-header on Saturday, June 15, at Riverside Park.

A parade will likely be organized before the game, headed by the 57th Band.

All games will be played after 6.30 o'clock at Riverside Park. One baseball enthusiast suggested "City Twilight League" as a good name for the new aggregation. So far four teams have been entered—De Laval, Thistles, Order of Foresters, Riverside.

J. J. Solomon of the Water Street Bowling Alleys, has been working for over two weeks getting the park in shape. The jungle grass has been cut and the diamond rehabilitated. He says the diamond is now in good shape. The school league is still going strong and the championship game will be played next week at Riverside.

Getting Into Shape

The four teams of the league are rapidly getting into shape. At present the Oddfellows practice at Riverside every Tuesday, the Riversides every Wednesday night and the Thistles clout the ball every Friday night.

Roy Charrett of last year's junior O. H. A. will captain the Thistles and J. J. Solomon will look after the Riversides, while the Oddfellows will likely have Art Johnson as captain, and the De Laval, E. J. Ruyter. Anybody may put a team in the league. This would be a good chance for the Bankers with their new hours and the Great War Veterans Association to enter a team. The Quaker Oats too, with such a large percentage of Americans ought to put a fast aggregation in the ring. Baseball has taken a slump in Canada, the past two or three years.

Knotty the former manager of the Hamilton Tigers tried to fan up enough enthusiasm to start a semi-pro league among Hamilton and Brantford and some of the towns of the fruit district. But Knotty's plans failed owing to the lukewarm attitude of some of the old baseball fans.

The Toronto League

Toronto has made a great success of the city league scheme. One of the six teams the Wellingtons especially have made a name for themselves while they held the Toronto Leafs to one run in an exhibition game at the Island. The second baseman and a pitcher, Burton have been offered berths in the big show of McCaffery.

Peterboro should under the circumstances be able to show a pretty good brand of baseball this coming season. Some of the baseball fans even stand around and watch the "kind" cavorting on the corner sand lots.

Games will be played with Lindsay and perhaps the lake shore towns. In that case a team would be picked from the league to represent the city.

JIMMY DUFFY AND IRISH PATSY CLINE CLASH ON MONDAY

Cline is Most Dangerous of Benny Leonard's Rivals.

BUFFALO, June 1.—Irish Patsy Cline, who has beaten two men in the last few days and whose last effort in Buffalo ring was the defeat of Rocky Kansas, will come back for a return engagement next Monday night before Q. A. C. members. His opponent will be Jimmy Duffy. The bout was closed last night.

When Irish Patsy came to Buffalo last he showed all the skill that was boasted for him, and many thought he was letting up on Kansas because he confined most of his efforts to the last minute in each round, but Patsy had been on the cars, riding from New Bedford, Mass., where he had fought two days previous, and wanted to be sure of himself. On that occasion Patsy weighed 141 pounds, and showed signs of growing into the welterweight class, like Benny Leonard. Before he left town he issued a defi to Jimmy Duffy, and it was accepted, contingent on a date when Patsy would again be in the fighting game.

Duffy, who has been training for the last two weeks, anticipating a bout with Rocky Kansas, was peeved when he found Kansas unavailable because of illness, and when Cline was suggested immediately acquiesced. "I wanted a bout with Cline," said Jimmy, "and this may as well be the time as any other. I'll gladly meet him, and I'll show to those who have been shouting that I have gone back that I'm still to be considered among the welters."

Clear Weather For Big Event

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 1.—Clear weather and a fast track are promised for the sixth running of the Kentucky Handicap at a mile and a quarter, the stellar racing attraction of the day in this country, at Douglass Park to-day. An even dozen thorough-breds of the highest class in older division have been made ready for the issue which will decide the supremacy in their class and net the owner of the winner about $13,000. Cudgel is regarded at the top of his form. "Overnight" maintained supremacy as favourite. "Rancher," which defeated "Cudgel" in the handicap at Latonia last fall apparently has the shade the best of it, and is regarded as a dangerous rival.

BRITISH MUST LEAD THE WAY

Empire Is Chief Champion of Liberty.

WILL MAINTAIN THE ROLE

Gen. Smuts Makes a Stirring Speech In England, In Which He Tells Why the People of Dominions Must Maintain Their "Home Front."

THE British Empire must continue to be the chief champion of liberty until the very end of the war, declared Gen. Smuts in one of his inspiring addresses delivered recently in London. He dwelt upon the point that Great Britain had been playing a great part in the struggle, particularly during the past twelve months, and it must maintain its strength in the great crisis of the struggle, especially on "the home front." He set forth the duty of the citizens of the Empire in the following thrilling words: "The struggle has lasted a long time and the decision is yet to fall—perhaps the most fateful decision in all history.. Will the end of this war see a new free world—a world in which freedom, honor and co-operation among the nations will flower on the immeasurable sacrifices of this war? Or will it see a fresh instalment of militarism, fresh scheming and preparing, and the arming of this generation for the greater struggle that will engulf the next generation? The world is at last thoroughly awakened. Our European allies are now straining every nerve. America is speeding up at a rate which will bring a huge American army to Europe long before this year is over. But I do not wish you to lose the position of honor which you have occupied for the past twelve months. To the very end the British Empire must remain the principal protagonist for liberty in this war for the world's freedom. The home front in the soul of the nations that make up the British Empire stands just as sure and unbreakable as the battle front of their armies in France. For us everything is at stake in this war, and therefore we shall bear every sacrifice willingly and cheerfully to the very end. May the end mean peace and honor — a lasting, fruitful peace, for the sorely-tried nations of the world.

Prophets Foretold War.

Prophesying in time of war is a subject of wide latitude, ranging from when the war will end, to how soon a particular trench will be taken. The subject is discussed by Prof. Fernand Baldensperger, in the Columbia University Quarterly, wherein he recalls many old prophecies by way of salt to the great variety of modern ones he offers. He writes:

"By the so-called prophecy of Mayence, a gypsy woman, telling fortunes in 1849 to Prince William of Prussia, foretold by three simple additions the date of the formation of the new German Empire, the date of the formation of the new German Empire, the date of his death, and the last year of that new empire—that is 1918.

"Another Mayence prophecy of 1854 gives the field of Birches between Ham, Woerl and Paderborn, in Westphalia, as the theatre of the decisive battle putting an end to the German Empire.

"A Polish Jesuit named Robola announced in the seventeenth century that his native land would, after disappearing, be restored as a kingdom at the same time when the Turk will be driven out of Europe."

"A prophecy which goes back to the Low Empire foretells that when a Constantine, a King of Greece, shall marry a Sophia, their son will reign in Constantinople."

Use Christian Hymns.

Many Christian hymns are sung in the Buddhist Sunday schools of Japan, the name of Buddha being substituted for that of Christ and of God the Father, in such songs as "Jesus Loves Me" and "God is Love."

CHAOS IN SIBERIA.

Citizens Terrorized by Red Guards and Killed by Protectors.

By Jan. 5th the situation in Harbin was reported as having been "cleaned up." One incident of this process was the deportation of the Bolshevik soldiers across the frontier where they were delivered into the hands of the commander of a Cossack train guard. One particularly troublesome Bolshevik Commissary who had been arrested for an attempt to blackmail the Mechanics Club in Harbin, and who had attempted to induce the militiamen to rise in a body, disarm the Cossacks and take possession of the train, was promptly court-martialed and shot. Meanwhile, on Dec. 20, 1917, the Bolshevik fever had penetrated to Irkutsk, a thousand miles west of Harbin, the chief town of the government of that name, a rival of Tomsk for the title of the most important place in Siberia, and in a close race with Vladivostok for the distinction of coming second with a population already reckoned at a little over 100,000. On Dec. 21 the Bolsheviki began to use armed force which was partially resisted by military cadets, artillerymen and Cossack troops, the barracks of the latter being, however, outside of the town. Thus the Bolsheviki were able to wreak their undisciplined will on Irkutsk—looting and destroying the museum, hospitals, banks, theatres and many of the principal shops. The plight of the terror-stricken populace was not greatly improved by the shelling of the town with artillery fire by the non-Bolshevik military force. The destruction wrought by the ruffianly element inside the town and its would-be protectors outside continued for a week, leaving the principal buildings of Irkutsk a heap of ruins and putting to flight all of its population who were able to get away.—Asia Magazine.

Beef Costs $1.25 Per Lb. In Italy.

Owing to the scarcity of live stock and the high cost of fodder, the maximum price of beef in Italy has been fixed at $1.25 a pound. The consumption of animal food has already been greatly reduced in Italy, and only a comparatively small section of the population can now afford to pay prevailing high prices. As the shortage of wheat prevents people from running for a remedy to macaroni the food problem is rendered more complicated. The only remedy appears to consist in rationing meat so as to insure its regular distribution.

CANADIAN WATER POWERS

By H. P. TIMMERMAN, Industrial Commissioner, Canadian Pacific Railway.

The following estimate is given by the Dominion Water Power Branch of the water power available in each province, showing to what extent this already has been developed.

The pitch at Grand Falls, N.B.

Provinces	Power Available	Power Developed: Electrical Energy	Paper and Pulp	Other Industries	Total
Ontario	5,800,000	632,063	83,375	74,008	789,446
Quebec	6,060,000	370,000	109,000	50,000	529,000
Nova Scotia	100,000	3,062	12,650	5,700	21,413
New Brunswick	300,000	5,890	2,000	4,450	13,339
Prince Edward Island	3,000	50		450	500
Manitoba	3,500,000	76,200		50	76,250
Saskatchewan				100	100
Alberta		32,850			32,850
British Columbia	3,000,000	216,345	40,000	4,275	260,620
Yukon	100,000	12,000			12,000
Total	18,803,000	1,348,490	248,075	139,033	1,735,598

It will be seen from the above that of some eighteen million horse-power available, and which further exploration will enlarge, less than ten per cent has so far been developed. Nevertheless, with but few exceptions all our principal cities, and by far the greater number of our towns and villages are supplied with hydro-electric energy, and the surplus production permits of the exportation of considerable power from New Brunswick to the State of Maine, from Quebec to New York, from Ontario to New York and Minnesota, and from British Columbia to Washington. The bearing which this exportation of power has upon the imports of coal, especially into the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, the source of two-thirds of the available current, may be surmised. Since the war resulted in a scarcity of vessels for transportation of Nova Scotia coal up the St. Lawrence River to the industries of Montreal, there have been converted to the use of electrical energy in that vicinity no less than one hundred and fifty private steam plants, with a demand load of about as many thousand horse-power; while many others are considering a like transformation.

Having mentioned Montreal, it may further be said that with a population approximating three-quarters of a million, that city and vicinity, according to one of the principal power companies, was supplied by it alone last year with slightly under a billion kw-hrs., the equivalent of the amount available to the city of New York, with a population of five millions, and to have got all it up on one-fifth or less, providing also for traction purposes, indicates that the manufacturing enterprises of that great city must have gone somewhat shy on power, excepting such as may have been produced from coals that would otherwise have been available for heating.

A similar comparison doubtless might be made between Toronto and Chicago, or any other Canadian and American city of relative position, a comparison sure to become more striking as time passes and the upward tendency in the cost of coal, as contrasted with the lowering cost of hydro-power.

The relative cost of steam and hydro-power being subject in the case of coal to labor, transportation and other variable expense is at present rather difficult to estimate, but admittedly the advantage in economy is with the latter source of energy, while in many cases for the mere ease of distribution and control, the electric current is secondarily made use of, being first generated by steam produced from coal. Hydro-power being the one necessary commodity which paradoxically decreases in cost in inverse ratio to the demand for it, this clearly is to be the manufacturing force of the future, and as coal is not at all likely ever to revert to pre-war prices, many industries supplying the world's markets will take advantage of this fact by locating in Canada where also raw materials are plentiful, and whence the same are now to some extent imported. In fact, some of the larger users of heat and power, such as the electro-chemical and metallurgical plants, already have divined the coming situation and are flocking to the vicinity of potential sources capable of providing adequately for not only their present needs but for all possible future development. In this they are not forestalled nor inconvenienced by the enormous expansion of the pulp and paper industry, which finds its requisite timberlands themselves to be the means of the conservation of immense supplies of water, affording adequate floatage as well as such mechanical force as it necessary to their development as other favorable conditions arise.

The same current of water having turned the wheels of one industry, in many cases passes along to drive still another, and on its further course to the sea bears the burden its own restless energy has helped to produce. No natural resource useful to the future or to any other purpose is sacrificed and no accretion of human toil destroyed.

Canada is gifted by providence in almost every form of the basic elements of manufacture and the natural powers by which these may be developed, having at the same time the lands suited to diversified agriculture, by which a greatly increased industrial population may be sustained. Her products already are in demand wherever known around the world, and geographically she is on the trade routes of the world.

PRISONER'S VOLUNTARY STATEMENT USED AGAINST HIM AS EVIDENCE

Important Judgment That Establishes Practically a Precedent in the Admission of Evidence.

A HAMILTON CASE

An important judgment, involving the admission as evidence, voluntary statements made by prisoners who have not been warned that their statements may be used against them is reported in the April issue of the Canadian Police Bulletin. On December 3rd, 1917, George Rodney, of Hamilton, was tried before Judge J. F. Monck, of Wentworth County, upon the following indictment: "That the said George Rodney, within six months last past at the city of Hamilton, did unlawfully steal a number of street railway tickets and several sums of money, the property of the Hamilton Street Railway Company, his employers."

When Rodney was arrested by detectives and taken to the police headquarters he was searched, and some street railway tickets were found on him. He was then asked by the detectives where he got the tickets, and he then voluntarily made the statements given in the evidence by the detectives. No promises were made, or threats used by the detectives, to the prisoner, who was not then under arrest. He was then detained on the above charge.

Judge Monck, in his decision, said: "I believe the detectives' evidence and I disbelieve the prisoner's evidence. No warning was given him by the detectives that what he might say would be used against him. I admitted as evidence what Detectives Shirley and Smith testified was said by Rodney at the police headquarters to them, and convicted the prisoner of the offence charged, and judgment on the said conviction was postponed until the questions hereinafter stated should be decided.

The questions reserved for the consideration of the Court (Appellate) are:

(1) Was I right in admitting the evidence of Detectives Shirley and Smith relating to admissions made by Rodney to them at police headquarters?

(2) Had Detectives Shirley and Smith any right to question Rodney at police headquarters without having first warned him that what he might say would be used against him?

(3) Was I right in holding that he was not under arrest?

The Appeal Court's Decision.

The Appellate Court consisting of Justices McLaren, McGee, Hodgins, Latchford and Kelly, in giving judgment in April, gave the answer "yes" to questions (1) and (2). To question (3) they made no finding. The conviction was affirmed.

The Police Bulletin comment follows in part: "The above case relative to statements by accused persons is one of the most important of the kind that has arisen in Canada for years. The judgment of the Ontario Appellate Court is in conformity with the famous decision of the Imperial Privy Council in the Hong-Kong case. To use it appears clear that a voluntary statement made regarding an offence to a police officer or a private citizen by any person, and even if the statement is made in a police office, it can be used afterwards at the trial as evidence against the accused, although before the statement was made the accused was not warned that it might be used as evidence against him. In view of the fact that the Appellate Court answered "yes" to Judge Monck's two first questions, it did not seem necessary to answer the third question.

Officers should be careful to note this case and also the Hong-Kong case, for they do not know when they may be faced with similar difficulties. Of course it is always wise to caution an accused person. The trouble is that persons arrested, or who imagine they are under arrest will often blurt out a statement before an officer or any one else has a chance to warn them."

It is unnecessary to supplement this review by referring to the fact that voluntary statements by accused persons who have not been warned by police officers have been rejected in the past as evidence. The Rodney decision is not only of interest to police officers but also should be known by the public.

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, June 1.—The following story is told to-day, illustrative of the confidence of the Allies' Generalissimo in his armies. When Gen. Foch recently visited Dunkirk the Mayor said to him: "General, you saved Flanders in 1914. You won't leave it in danger in 1918."

Foch replied: "When one remembers how we stopped the enemy four years ago, one must entertain no doubt—with that means we have at our disposal to-day."

A largely attended meeting of the manufacturers of the city was held on Thursday evening and a very strong organization formed. Practically every manufacturing concern was represented and matters of special interest to this important branch of the city's life will be dealt with at future meetings.

At the close of the war Peterborough, with every other point in Canada, will be called upon to do its share to take care of the great demands that will be asked of it in every line, and the manufacturers of this city believe that organization and preparedness to meet the new conditions that have arisen, and are bound to arise in the future, is the only way by which Peterborough will be able to cope with the situation and allow Peterborough to give its utmost in production.

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, June 1.—While the Allies are fighting gallantly between the Aisne and the Marne against a second powerful German offensive, comparative quiet continues for the Canadian troops. Our men have secured repeated successes of a minor nature against the enemy. In raid and patrol operations they have repulsed one German attack in strength, with heavy losses to the enemy, but outside of such activity there is so far only a marked increase in the enemy's bombing and shelling of our rear areas to indicate any increased hostile activity.

Raid Was Repulsed.

Outstanding amongst recent individual actions is that of a corporal of a Western Ontario battalion, who crawled through wire entanglements under the protection of riflemen and rifle grenadiers and worked around the hostile post which was in the neighbourhood of a very strong pill box. A German was shot here and the sentry who was called to his assistance, was also killed. Another man was frightened away with revolvers. The corporal then rushed his prisoner back to our lines under a heavy fire. While our men have been constantly disturbing and harassing the enemy in such operations, the Hun under cover of a heavy barrage has made one unsuccessful attempt to raid our trenches.

NO SPECIAL CURTAILMENT OF THE AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY

Definite Cut in Car Production Not Asked By War Board

Washington, D. C., June 1. — There will be no special curtailment of the motor car industry. Car manufacturers have agreed with the government officials that war needs demand 100 per cent. priority on steel and other materials required for munitions manufacture. The committee composed of W. C. Durant, General Motors Co., John Willys, Willys-Overland Co.; John Dodge, Dodge Bros., and Walter Flanders, Maxwell Motor Co., completed negotiations with the War Industries Board, with the understanding that the government will take steel and whatever other materials it needs up to 100 per cent., and the motor car manufacturers will arrange their programmes accordingly. They will use their proportion of what steel is left over pro rata with other non-war manufacturers.

Each company has been advised by the committee to consider its production and programme problems in view of this arrangement. The committee was informed by the War Industries Board that there had been no official attempt to set the curtailment to 75 per cent., as has been indicated by the newspaper despatches. The committee denied all responsibility for this statement.

CAR MAKERS' ARGUMENT.

The conference included arguments on the part of the motor car committee to the effect that labor would be thrown out of work, huge organizations disrupted, making them inefficient for war work, and the financial disaster of a $2,000,000,000 industry would result from a drastic curtailment. When the War Industries Board officials recommended a severe reduction in passenger car manufacture it was pointed out that they had been in error previously, that the shortage situation might clear up in the next 90 days and that the government did not actually know its own requirements for steel and other materials, and that a severe curtailment might mean the destruction of the huge industry unnecessarily.

Sergt. Kidd Goes To Parry Sound As Chief

Police Sergeant Kidd has accepted the position of Chief Constable of Parry Sound. It is not only a responsible post, but also remunerative. The population of Parry Sound is about 8,000 and there is plenty of work for the Chief. Sergt. Kidd's experience in the Old Country and in Canada should thoroughly qualify him for his new duties in the undertaking of which he will have the best wishes of his many friends in Peterborough.

Boys Fined $10 Each For Stealing Wine

Four south end boys who stole copper wire from the Exhibition Grounds were fined $45.16 in police court this morning. The assessment will, of course, fall upon their parents, who have to contribute $10 each for this fall of their "hopefuls" from grace. The boys cut down the wire at night several weeks ago and sold it to the Toronto Metal Co., Harry Ambrowitch, Lansdowne street, and spent the proceeds on candies and ice cream.

Charged With Receiving.

Ambrowitch, charged with receiving the stolen wire, declined through his counsel, Mr. G. N. Gordon, to elect or plead. Harry Beatty, foreman of the Utilities Commission, testified that he examined the wiring in the Exhibition Grounds and discovered that 2,700 feet of no. 4 wire and 1,200 feet of No. 6 were missing. At the junk yard he identified 900 feet of No. 4 as that which he had strung on the posts at the Exhibition Grounds.

MUSIC IN THE SCHOOLS.

The local board of education has decided to re-introduce the teaching of music in the public schools of the city, says the Woodstock-Sentinel Review.

Better late than never; but as it is the Woodstock schools are very far behind in this respect, far behind the Woodstock standard of years ago, as well as far behind the standard of other places. It may be accepted as an evidence of either ignorance or indifference that so little value has been placed on music in the work of our schools. In this respect the people of Canada are far behind the people of the United States. It is nothing short of astonishing to learn what up-to-date schools in the United States are doing, and then compare their work with what our own schools are doing.

The simple fact is that for years the educational system in Ontario has been suffering from the dry-rot. However, let us hope for better things in the future. There is much that is very good about our system, and in one way or another it produces some excellent results; but there is room for great improvement.

SEASON HAS BEEN BACKWARD

The Examiner has received a letter from Mrs. Chas. E. Foster, Schumacker, New Ontario, in which she states the spring in their district has been a very backward one. On May 2nd and May 4th two inches of snow fell on each day, and for the three days previous to May 27th it had rained.

Garden Party Was A Success

The garden party and lingerie sale yesterday at the home of Miss Bessie Read, given in aid of the Prisoners of War Fund by the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E., was a great success, and over $50 realized. Mrs. J. G. Campazzi, who was in charge, was assisted by the Misses Dorothy Hill, Gladys Mulholland, Hazel Austin, Georgie Stevenson, Robina Cummings, Phyllis Young, Agnes Carmichael, Genevive Sullivan, and Leone Walsh.

Miss Margaret Eastwood poured tea, while Mrs. Fordyce Strickland had charge of the lingerie sale, and Miss Marjory Hatton, Miss Jean Hill and Mrs. Birnie of the flower table. The arrangement of prettily decorated tables on the spacious lawns was particularly attractive.

Musical Programme.

In the house a musical programme was supplied by Miss Phyllis Dawson, vocal solo; Miss Shearer and Miss Edith Richardson, piano solos.

Woodstock War Veterans Pass Resolutions Against the Organization.

WOODSTOCK, June 1.—At a recent meeting of the local G. W. V. A. the following resolutions were passed:—

"We, the executive of the committee of the Woodstock branch of the G. W. V. A., do place ourselves on record as being of the opinion that the profits made and money collected by the Y. M. C. A., are altogether out of proportion to the free comforts distributed by that organization."

"We do petition the Woodstock '5,000 Club,' the trustees of the public of the district to hold any moneys collected by them for the Y. M. C. STORY FROM THE TRENCHES.

The Irishman and the Scotsman are usually very good chums in the trenches, although they are miles apart in the matter of temperament. The Irishman is all for the present and let the future take care of itself, but the Scotsman is full of care for the future and in every way cautious and canny. Here is an example of their different temperaments.

Pat and Sandy, reconnoitring round an old farmhouse, found a war-weary chicken. Pat was overjoyed. He was sick of bully and biscuits.

"That's a bit of luck," said Pat. "Sure we'll have a dacent supper to-night."

"No, no," said Sandy. "Let's keep it till to-morrow. It may lay an egg."—Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

TURNIPS.

This is the week to get Swede turnips planted. They do best in good loam soil that is retentive of moisture. Like most of the root crops, they develop best during the damp, cool fall weather and the advantage of late seeding is that they make little growth during the hot summer months. They develop a succulent tissue in the fall, however. If planted too early Swede turnips are very liable to be checked in their growth during the hot weather, developing a foot containing much fibre and lacking in quality.

The turnip rows should be from 12 to 18 inches apart and three-quarters of an inch deep. They should be thinned to about three inches apart. The small white varieties are sweeter for early use. The others need frost and can be stored in the same manner as carrots and beets.

Combinations of materials are the vogue.

NOTED LECTURER ON TEMPERANCE ENDORSES TANLAC

Mrs. Martha Stone Was For Years Associated With Founder of W. C. T. U.

One of the features that distinguished Tanlac from all other proprietary medicines is the large number of prominent people who everywhere are giving it their unqualified endorsement. Among the statements recently received at the Tanlac office is one in particular that is sure to arouse widespread interest throughout the country, having been made by Mrs. Martha R. Stone, of 7225 Third Ave., North West, Seattle, Wash., noted temperance lecturer who for many years was associated with the late Frances B. Willard, founder of the W.C.T.U. In relating her experience with Tanlac, Mrs. Stone said:

"I think it is the duty of everyone who has been relieved as I have to do what they can to help others; therefore it gives me much pleasure to tell of the benefits derived from the use of Tanlac.

"I was a great sufferer for many years with nervous trouble, which became so bad that I had to take to my bed, where I lay for six weeks entirely helpless and unable to move. The least little noise would upset me and I was not allowed to see anyone for fear it would excite me, and I was told that my entire nervous system had suffered a total collapse. You see, I had passed through the great San Francisco fire in which I lost everything I possessed, and the experience was a severe shock to my already overwrought nerves. When at last I was able to get out of bed I would have such awful dizzy spells that everything in my room seemed to spin around as though I was in the centre of a whirlpool. My stomach was so weak and my appetite so poor that I hardly ate a thing and what little I forced down soured and formed gas that pressed up into my throat and in my chest and made me so hoarse that it was an effort for me to speak. I also suffered much pain in the lower part of my body from this same gas pressure. My liver too, was all out of order and my kidneys gave me no end of trouble.

"When my son-in-law saw that the medicines I was taking were doing me no good, he induced me to try Tanlac, as he said it had done so much good he believed it would help me too. To oblige him I got me a bottle and the first few doses soon convinced me that it was just what I needed, and my first bottle put me right on my feet. I am now on my second bottle and am in splendid shape, for my nerves are practically in a normal state for the first time in all these years, which I consider a remarkable thing. I have a fine appetite and can eat most anything. I want without suffering any unpleasantness afterwards. Tanlac is fast helping me to overcome my troubles, and I feel that I am getting on just fine ever since I began taking it."

"Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd. In Havelock by A. C. Denike. In Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd. In Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter. In Gelert by A. J. Scott. In Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

WHY MONEY IS SCARCE.

"Do you know why money is so scarce, brothers?" the soap box orator demanded; and a fair sized section of the backbone of the nation waited in leisurely patience for the answer.

A tired looking woman had paused for a moment on the edge of the crowd. She spoke shortly.

"It's because so many of you men spend your time telling each other why instead of hustling to see that it ain't."—Augusta Chronicle.

Rupture Is Curable

Results Not Influenced by Age or Length of Time Standing. Reports Expert.

Rupture is not a tear or breach in the abdominal wall, as commonly supposed, but it is a stretching or dilation of a natural opening says J. Y. The "Curatus" as now used and approved will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, affording immediate comfort, but is intended to assist nature to close the opening in the shortest time known. Twenty Hun Divisions Against Allied Seven

German Drive Regarded Very Seriously in U. S. Senate —Forty Per Cent. of Americans in Europe Are Non-Combatants

MANY NOT FIGHTERS

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Members of the Senate Military Committee at their weekly conference Saturday with War Department officials were told by General March, acting Chief of Staff, that opinion here is that the Germans have reached their present objective—the Marne—and that they probably now will dig in and prepare for a later drive, perhaps on Paris.

With the Germans within forty-five miles of Paris, the situation the Senators were told, is serious. Military experts here, they were advised, are a unit in realizing the dangers confronting the allies.

The Senators were told that the rapidity of the German advance since their offensive began last Monday was unexpected by virtually all allied military experts. Twenty German divisions, it was said, were thrown against seven of the allies. The territory taken during the last few days had been regarded as easily defended and a comparatively large force has been left to hold it.

Gas Shells Effective.

Although few new types of gas offensive have been developed, the Senators were told, the Germans are employing former types to much better advantage, using nine-inch gas shells, to shell territory from seven to eight miles back of the allied lines. This it was explained forced an extensive retirement. The French it was said found their second line eight miles to the rear untenable.

Present enemy successes and prospective renewal of the offensive the Senators were informed emphasized the necessity for urgent transportation of American forces abroad. The schedule for shipment of men in May was exceeded, the Senators were told. More than 200,000 Americans—and these exceeding the usual ratio of fighting men which has been sixty per cent.—were sent. In June it is planned to send even larger numbers, with larger percentage of combatant troops.

40 Per Cent. Not Fighters.

None of the Americans, the military committee was advised, will be sent into active service until after expiration of at least thirty days further training abroad.

The statement of Senator Lewis, of Illinois, that there now are one million fighting men in the American force was said by a military committee member to be "about thirty per cent. exaggeration." Of the Americans so far transported, it was stated, about forty per cent. are non-combatants.

Great improvement in production of aircraft, ordnance and other war materials was reported to the Senators. The airplane situation, it was said, has reached a stage of substantial production both of planes and engines.

A Poser.

Head Coach Horse had at the Yale training table a football story.

"The English," he began, "are crazier over football than we are. Why, there will sometimes be nearly 100,000 English at a single football game.

"Two Englishwomen of the lower class were drinking 'four ale' in a 'pub' one afternoon.

"'What's the matter with 'ee Bess?' said the first woman.

"'I'm puzzled,' said the second.

"'What about, Bess?'

"'Well, ye see, me George's on the football team an' when the team wins he treats me to free fish an' the movies, but when it loses he gives me a beatin' up.'

"'Well, Bess, I know all about that. But what's puzzlin' thee? That's what I asked.'

"'Well, you see, today's match ended in a draw.'"—Minneapolis Journal.

STRENGTHENS THE THROAT ASSISTS PUBLIC SPEAKERS

Catarrhozone is the Greatest Invention of the Age for Weak Throat, Hoarseness, &c.

Strongly Endorsed by the Clergy.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal cords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. The most eminent speakers, and prima donnas are seldom without Catarrhozone, and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from that terrible disease known as CATARRH.

"Being a professional singer, you can readily understand that Catarrh would be a serious hindrance to my professional skill.

"One year ago I read in the "Progress" a convincing testimonial from one who had been cured of this disease through using your God-sent invention, Catarrhozone.

"Believing in the merit of Catarrhozone, I tried it.

"Catarrhozone cured me, and has been the means of my success.

"You are at liberty to use my name if it will help relieve some from suffering, and I will always remain,

"Bob Bixley, New Glasgow, N.S."

Mr. Bixley is one of the best known singers and entertainers in the Maritime Provinces. Everyone knows him, and his testimonial for Catarrhozone is the best sort of evidence of what great benefit Catarrhozone is to those suffering from throat weakness or catarrh.

HEART WAS BAD NERVES ALL GONE

Very important it is in this age to have a clear cool head, a strong heart and steady nerves.

Too much rush and bustle, work and worry, fall to the lot of women attending to their household duties and social obligations. The constant strain under which they continue day in and day out will soon shatter the strongest system. Before long the heart gets weak, flutters and palpitates, the nerves become unstrung, you start at the least sound, the pulse becomes weak and irregular, then finally comes physical breakdown or nervous prostration.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the remedy you require to strengthen your heart and steady your nerves.

Mrs. Jackson, 457 Bolivar St., Peterborough, Ont., writes: "Fifteen years ago I was so bad with my heart I could not walk across the house, my nerves were literally all gone, and I was frightened at my shadow. I commenced to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and was soon able to do my own work. I have told dozens of people about them, some as bad as I was, and to-day they are also doing their own work. If more people would take them there would not be so many weak hearts."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

IN NEW YORK

CHAPTER LXXXII.

We travelled at night, George had to be back in Morelands in three days, so he said he would save time that way. Upon our arrival, he took us to the Holland House, a Fifth Avenue hotel, and installed us in lovely rooms on the fourth floor. Then he said:

"Have a good time—go where you please. Shop a little, if you want to. I'll try and spend the evenings with you, but I won't be be able to see you through the day. You better handle the cash, David, if you are to be the escort," he handed David a roll of bills that made the boy's eyes pop.

"You don't expect us to spend all this?" he asked.

"I shall be surprised if you don't need more," George replied in the tone he always used when speaking of money.

"As though it didn't amount to shucks," David said.

We started right out. David and I. We visited the museums; we rode on the buses; we lunched at Sherry's; and then we took a taxi and drove through the park. When we reached our own hotel, at five o'clock, we were so tired we could hardly speak.

I found a note on my dresser.

"I shan't be able to join you tonight. I have left theatre tickets for you at the news stand."

Dinner in the Room.

"David!" I called. "Come in here a minute."

"What is it?"

"George can't be with us, but he has left theatre tickets for us. Let's have dinner up here, then we won't have to hurry to dress."

"That's the idea. We'll eat now, then take our time handsoming up.

Sore Eyes Granulated Eyelids, Eyes inflamed by exposure to Sun, Dust and Wind quickly relieved by Murine Eye Remedy. No Smarting, just Eye Comfort. At Druggists or by mail 50c per Bottle. Murine Eye Salve in Tubes 25c. For Book of the Eye write Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

I wonder if he has a box, again?"

"Call down and have the tickets sent up, and we'll see. If he hasn't, we won't fuss very much—oh, yes we better," I added, "we might see some of his friends and he wouldn't like it if I wasn't properly dressed."

"Just as you say, Sis. I think it is silly to tog out like that, when it's just you and me. But you're the doctor!"

We had just the nicest, cixiest dinner imaginable. We ordered just what we liked, with total disregard for the fitness. George had given as his reason for going to the Holland House, that it had a good cuisine even though it was an old house.

We each had two dishes of ice cream after we finished, then we started to get dressed. We had plenty of time, and were rested because of the comfortable way we had had our dinner. About five minutes before we started, the telephone rang and George told me;

"I'll try and come for you, Helen, after the play, and we will go to some gay place for supper."

"You see how right I was to dress," I said to David, after I put down the telephone. George would have been furious if I hadn't.

"He gets 'furious' pretty often doesn't he?"

"No—not very often."

"Have you ever asked him, Sis, who the woman was he had with him, the day he passed us in the car?"

"No. He has been so nice, since, I had about forgotten it. I think I know who she was—I may ask him some day, I don't know."

"You're a queer little girl, Sis. You've changed dreadfully in some ways."

"Dreadfully!" I laughed.

"Oh you know what I mean. You are so careless of what George does and says. You didn't used to be that way with us boys."

"That's different!"

"So I see."

After the Theatre.

We had two good seats in the eighth row in the orchestra. The play was lovely —a musical extravagazna. David enjoyed it immensely. George was waiting for us and took us to the Palais Royal to see the cabaret. Neither David or I had ever seen anything at all like it. It seemed so odd to have such a biz show where people supposedly went for food. The place was packed, and when the people at the tables danced I begged George to let me dance either with him or with David.

"No, you will not dance in any public place," he said so sternly that it almost brought the tears to my eyes. He had really been so kind for two days, that I felt the sting in his tone more than I did when he was consistently severe.

"He don't make you do what pleases him, or anything," David remarked as George left us a moment to speak to an acquaintance—a man accompanied by the loveliest woman I ever had seen.

"That woman's a lolly-pop!" David said, following my look.

"What a name for a woman!" I laughed. "She's lovely!"

"A lolly-pop's sweet, and she's sweet enough to eat. So what's the matter with the name?"

"What a lovely woman!" I said to George, when he returned.

"She is as charming as lovely," he said. I knew he meant her manner.

To-morrow—Sight Seeing Again.

British Airmen Have Done Splendid Work In Palestine.

The airmen who have been the eyes of the army in Sinai and Palestine can look back upon their record as a great achievement. Enormous difficulties were faced with stout hearts, and the Royal Flying Corps spirit surmounted them. It has been one long test of courage, endurance, and efficiency, and so triumphantly have the airmen come through the ordeal that Gen. Allenby's army may truthfully be said to have secured as complete a mastery of the air as it has of the plains and hills of Southern Palestine. One cannot refer to the whole of the work of the air service, because while most of it is done in the light of day a good deal of it is secret, but those of us who have watched the airmen 'carrying on' from the time when their airplanes were inferior to those of the Germans in speed, climbing capacity, and other qualities, which go to make up first-class fighting machines, till the position to-day, when few enemy aviators dare cross our lines, can speak of the wonderful advance our airmen have made. Their victories grow, and last month's record is the best of all.

With comparatively few opportunities for combats, because the enemy knows our superiority, and declines to fight unless forced, the Royal Flying Corps accounted for eleven airplanes in January, five of these falling victims to one pilot. The last of these victories I witnessed. In a single-seater the pilot engaged two two-seater airplanes of a late type, driving down one machine within our lines, the pilot killed by eleven bullets, and the observer wounded. He then chased the other plane, whose pilot soon lost his taste for fighting, dropped into a heavy cloud bank, and got away. No odds are too big for our airmen. I have seen one airplane swoop down out of the blue to attack a formation of six enemy machines, sending one crashing to earth and dispersing the remainder. In one brief fight another pilot drove down three German planes, while on four recent occasions a pilot had forced down machines almost to the ground away from enemy airdromes. The airman does not talk of his work, and we know what we see are but fragments in the silent records of great things done. Much that is accomplished is far beyond our visual range high up over the bleak hills of Judea, above even the rain clouds driven across the heights by the fury of a winter gale, or skimming across the dull surface of the Dead Sea, flying some hundreds of feet below sea level to interrupt the passage of foodstuffs of which the Turk stands in need.

All through the army's rapid march northward from the crushed Gaza-Beersheba line the airmen's untiring work was one of infinite value. And before Beersheba fell the patrol work was so effective that though it was impossible to prevent the enemy from crossing the lines, only one machine succeeded in penetrating the area from which he could see the movement of troops about to attack the town, and this was brought down, and the pilot and observer prevented from carrying information of the highest importance. If that machine had got back the enemy would not have mistaken our intentions at Beersheba. When the Turkish retreat began the enemy was bombed and machine-gunned for a full week, the railway, airdromes, troops on the march, artillery, and transport being hit time and again, and five smashed airplanes and a large quantity of aircraft stores of every description were found at Menshiyer alone. The raid on that airdrome was so successful that at night the Turks burnt the whole of the equipment not destroyed by bombs. Three machines were also destroyed by us at El Tineh, five at Ramleh, and one at Ludd, and the country was covered with the debris of a well-bombed and beaten army. After Jerusalem came under the safe protection of our arms airmen harassed the retiring enemy with bombs and machine guns. The wind was strong, but defying treacherous eddies, the pilots came through the valleys between steep-sloped hills and caught the Turks on the Nablus road, emptying their bomb racks at the height of a few hundred feet, and giving the scattered troops machine-gun fire on their return.

In Palestine, possibly to a greater extent than in any other theatre of war, our mapmakers have had to rely on aerial photographs to supply them with the details required for military maps. The best maps we had of Palestine were those prepared by Lieut. H. H. Kitchener, R.E., and Lieut. Condor, in 1881, for the Palestine Exploration Fund. They are still remarkably accurate, so far as they go, but "roads," to give the tracks a description to which they are not entitled, have altered and villages have disappeared, and newer and additional information had to be supplied. The Royal Flying Corps furnished it, and all important details of hundreds of square miles of country which survey parties could not reach have been registered with wonderful accuracy by aerial photographers. To such perfection did the Royal Flying Corps photographic branch attain that maps showing full details of new or altered trenches were soon in the hands of generals.

Livelier and More Durable

Spring is here. Soft breezes stir the buds on the trees and baby shoots soon will be thrusting through the warm soil in the garden. Then they'll want a gentle shower from the garden hose each day to insure the garden-glory of June and July.

But what of dainty frocks water-spotted and wrinkled. And what of temper tried by bursted hose. Not if you have Goodyear Cord Hose! Hose so seamlessly welded into one crack-proof, leak-proof, kink-proof unit. Hose so tug-free and tangle-free, so glide-easy and wear enduring.

For the same reasons lively and more durable. Long-life makes it economical. Freedom from bursting means freedom from trouble. Pliant strength eliminates kinks.

These features of goodness in Goodyear Cord Hose more than offset its slightly greater cost.

Built like the Goodyear Cord Tire is this hose.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

On the Eve of a Wedding

Mistaken Identity Caused a Complication

By JOHN Y. LARNED

Arthur MacKnight left his office at the conclusion of business hours and went to his bachelor apartments with a light heart. He would sleep that night in those apartments for the last time, for he was about to be married.

MacKnight's love came at first sight. He had made a flying trip abroad the summer before, had seen an American girl in the Kursaal in Lugano, Switzerland, had followed her to Lucerne and had secured an introduction. After two weeks going about in the same party he became engaged to her and the day after his engagement was obliged to leave her at Montreux to catch a steamer for America.

His fiancee, Miss Leona Denton, remained abroad three months longer. Her home was in a different city from that of MacKnight, and since he was very closely confined to business the lovers saw very little of each other. Therefore when he succeeded in arranging for a wedding to take place in the near future he was made a very happy man.

Consent that their daughter should ally herself with a man of whom she had seen so little and about whose antecedents so little was known was given by Miss Denton's parents with reluctance. MacKnight had been able to give no information about his family, had not a relative that he had ever seen, and his statements about his childhood were conflicting. The truth was that the poor fellow was a foundling, he knew he was a foundling and shrank from admitting the fact. Nevertheless he finally did so to his fiancee. But she who had come to love him with as much fervor as he loved her did not dare to communicate the fact to her parents lest they insist upon her breaking off the match. Consequently he was to be married with this secret kept by himself and Miss Denton from those who had a right to know it.

MacKnight reached the city where the Dentons lived too late to see his fiancee till morning. Before going to bed he sat smoking in the lounging room of the hotel where he stopped. It was not a first class house by any means. He had chosen it because it was the only hostelry that was not at a considerable distance from the Dentons. While he was smoking a man entered the room and looked about him uneasily. His gaze fell upon MacKnight, and he seemed surprised. MacKnight was also surprised. Between the two men there was a striking resemblance. Their complexion, hair, height, build were the same. Their clothes were entirely different, MacKnight's being plain, those of the other flashy.

The man passed out of the room, and soon after MacKnight went upstairs and to bed.

He was awakened by a knocking at his door. Rising, he opened it, and there stood a couple of policemen. They entered the room and directed MacKnight to dress himself. He asked what it all meant, but the only information he received was that he was wanted for various offenses. There being nothing for him to do except to obey, he turned to a chair on which he had left his clothes and began putting them on. He was so rattled that he did not for a few moments notice that the clothes were not those he had taken off. Then he saw that the suit was the exact counterpart of the one worn by the man he had seen in the lounging room.

Gradually it came into his head that this person had been hunted by the police and, having noticed the resemblance between himself and MacKnight, had conceived the idea of throwing the officers on a false scent. The supposed criminal could easily have learned the number of his room, opened the door with a skeleton key when all in the house were asleep, purloined MacKnight's clothes and left his own in their place.

Holding up the suit he was ordered to put on, MacKnight gave the policemen the above explanation. They looked at each other as much as to say, "Have we been fooled?" Then, without even consulting, they ordered MacKnight to put on the clothes, first taking the precaution to go through the pockets, in which they found articles to identify the owner with a prominent criminal. The prisoner was taken to a police station and locked in a cell.

To be placed in such a position only a few days before his expected wedding was, to say the least, distressing. MacKnight, who had had no experience in criminal law, did not doubt that he could prove his identity as soon as given an opportunity. What he dreaded was that the episode would strengthen the doubts concerning him held by his fiancee's parents and that they would withdraw their consent to the marriage.

He spent a night of torture, and the next morning early sent for an attorney, who assured him that he could secure an examination at once and, by giving bail for his appearance when the case came to trial, he would be liberated. This was done, and before noon the prisoner, having signed his own bail bond, was released from custody. Calling a cab, he drove at once to his fiancee's.

He had been expected much earlier, and his not coming had occasioned some worry. He proposed to give his explanation to Leona privately, and his not accounting for his delay at once made a bad impression on the rest of the family. As soon as the young couple were left alone he told his bride to be the story of his arrest. She listened eagerly and at his conclusion seemed much dejected. Her parents had not ceased to hold up to her the risk she ran in marrying a man she knew so little about, who had no family connections and whose childhood he had failed to account for. She dreaded lest they would now refuse to permit the wedding to come off as had been arranged.

The pair, after consultation, joined Mr. and Mrs. Denton and made a clean breast of what had occurred. It was evident that both the father and mother regarded the matter as a confirmation of their fears. MacKnight was informed that the wedding day must be put off indefinitely, by which he understood that it would not take place at all with Mr. and Mrs. Denton's consent. After further consultation between the lovers, they agreed that the wedding as arranged must be abandoned. Leona was too distressed to talk about the future, but she surely would not go back on her lover without the best of reasons.

The next morning MacKnight went to the office of his lawyer and was much surprised and disheartened to learn that it would be difficult to prove that he was not the man he was supposed to be. True, if he were the criminal, MacKnight must be accounted for. But might not MacKnight be both himself and the criminal? Persons had been known to lead double lives before, and why not in this case? At any rate, there must be a trial, which would attract a great deal of attention, and, even if the prisoner were acquitted, many persons would believe him guilty.

Leona had an interview with her parents, in which her father expressed the opinion that there was something wrong about her lover and that his arrest was fortunate in that it had saved her from a union with a criminal. The girl came from this interview feeling that no matter what verdict a jury might give with respect to the charge against her lover her father would believe him guilty.

Such was the situation of this young couple on the eve of the wedding day that had been set, with all the attendant expected happiness. But three days intervened before the intended nuptials. A compromise had been effected between Leona and her parents that the invitations should be recalled the next day. The lovers went for a final conference with the lawyer. He advised his client to jump his bail, go to a foreign country under an assumed name and begin life anew.

MacKnight, heartsick over the affair, dreading a trial and his inability to account for his past childhood, decided to act on this advice. It therefore remained with Leona whether she would share his fate or endure a lifelong separation from the man she loved. It was a question which suffered the more, MacKnight or the girl, whose life would be wrecked if she stood by him and would be blighted if she gave him up. A few hours of deliberation were sufficient for a decision. She agreed to marry her lover secretly and to go into oblivion with him.

MacKnight was leaving her home after receiving this decision when he met a man coming up the steps. The comer said he was looking for one Arthur MacKnight. "I am Arthur MacKnight." "I desire to confer with you." The two went back into the house, and the man said:

"I am John Eldredge of Barker, Smith & Eldredge, attorneys, of your city. A few years ago a matter concerning you was left with us, you not to be informed of it till you came to be twenty-five years old. But this charge against you which we have seen printed in the newspapers has seemed to warrant our communicating with you earlier. You were born in wedlock, but your father and mother are dead. Circumstances stood in the way of your mother acknowledging you. Shortly before she died she left a will in our care leaving you her property, you to be paid a part on reaching the age of twenty-five and the rest at thirty. If you need money for your defense of this charge against you I think we can enable you to borrow on your prospects."

Leona, who had heard her lover return to the house, at this juncture entered the room, curious to know what brought him back. MacKnight sprang toward her, folded her in his arms and covered her with kisses.

"The tide has turned," he cried. "All will yet come out as we wish. This gentleman has solved the mystery of my childhood."

It appeared that MacKnight was the son of persons of refinement and that he was heir to an estate of some $50,000. The mystery of his birth having been solved, Mr. Denton's suspicions were allayed, and he sympathized sincerely with the young couple. Considerable money was spent on detectives for the purpose of hunting down the real criminal, and he was found before the date fixed for the trial.

But long before this the lovers were married, for the invitations to the wedding were not recalled, and it occurred on the day that had been fixed.

After his marriage MacKnight took pains to hunt up more minute information of his parents and the reasons why he had been abandoned. All he could learn was that there was a secret marriage, with circumstances that prevented his acknowledgment till those nearest of kin to him were dead. His inheritance came from his mother, who lived under her maiden name.

Wealth.

I may not write a large sized check,
A mercer I have never floated,
I own no yacht with polished deck,
And I am not fur overcoated,
But I go singing on my way,
Of joy and happiness I've plenty;
One touch of wealth I know today—
A Turkish rug for room 320.

Fine pictures may not deck my walls,
Fine wines my palate may not tickle,
And very oft the time befalls
When I go borrowing a nickel,
But I'm content, though life is not Completely "dolce far niente,"
I'm in the high brow class—I've got
A Turkish rug for room 320.

The Squall.

"Ah, yes," murmured Mrs. Screecher after the first selection at the musicale, "I have had some exciting experiences. Coming home from Europe a terrible storm arose, and I had to sing to quiet the passengers. You should have seen the heavy sea running."

And the big, rude man in the pink necktie gazed out of the window.

"I don't blame the sea," he muttered. —Fun.

Cheer Up.

If you have an old lead dime
Pass it on.
Do not fuss and waste good time,
Pass it on.
You may feel sort mean, it's true,
But in just a week or two
It will come right back to you.
Pass it on.
—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Why?

Tutter (looking out in the front yard) —That dog of yours seems to be very frisky, Miss Clara.

Miss Pinkerly—Yes, he is simply delighted. Just after you came pa took off his muzzle.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

The Discreet Lover.

His breast was all aflame with love,
And when they had to part
He slyly took her dainty glove
And wore it near his heart.

Of all the fair she was the fairest,
Or so she seemed to be;
Her beauty was the richest, rarest;
Her gladness gave him glee.

He took her dainty little glove
And pressed it to his lips.
With tenderest and deepest love
He kissed the finger tips.

With passion such as knights of yore
Were nobly agitated
He kissed her glove—but not before
He had it fumigated.

Most merchants have shoes with Neōlin Soles. But you are sure of getting them wherever you see this price-ticket in the window. But when you buy Neōlin Soles be sure you see the Neōlin trademark underneath. If it is not there the sole is not Neōlin.

Choose "Every-Day" Boots By Their Soles

Formerly, when you bought work-boots you gave little thought to the soles, providing they were thick and rugged-looking. And little thought could you give, for science had not yet created the modern, better sole.

To-day millions of people select their shoes largely by the soles. For to-day they can secure Neōlin Soles—modern soles, longer-wearing and easier on the feet.

Shoe-service and shoe-comfort are much dependent on shoe-soles. And to-day school-boots and work-boots are built on Neōlin Soles.

Substantial Neōlin Soles in keeping with heavier boots, yet not so thick, stiff and hard-to-break-in as the soles you've worn before.

Long-wearing Neolin Soles cut your yearly shoe-costs.

Waterproof Neōlin Soles keep you foot-dry through sloppy days.

Flexible Neōlin Soles make new shoes as easy as the old.

Do now the two things that will mean so much to you in shoe-comfort and shoe-value. First, go to your regular shoe-store and ask to see sturdy boots with Neōlin Soles. There are various weights in black and tan. Then take your present shoes, your wife's and the children's to the repairman and have full-soles or half-soles of Neōlin put on.

The one way to be sure you are getting genuine Neōlin is to see the word Neōlin on the bottom of the sole.

KEEPING UP THE LIE.

Germany Displays Efficiency In Deceiving the People.

Will Irwin has something to say in the Saturday Evening Post about "The Age of Lies." The following shows a German cross-current:

"'What is Germany?' said the primary geography. 'It is your Fatherland, entirely surrounded by enemies.' At the time when this lie was being recited by rote, those enemies, groaning under the armaments that Prussian military preparation had forced upon Europe, were looking for some way to get permanent peace with Germany and to lay down their arms. The Prussian state preacher of the official Prussian Church, who advanced in his profession according as his views and expressions matched Junker ideas and plans, preached from the pulpit the lie that a hostile world was waiting to strangle Germany; the state-endowed teacher echoed from his desk.

"The German national concert, which has given us many a laugh, was worked up by these same agencies. Germany was a heaven. Nowhere in the world was the working class so well off as in Germany. All this in face of the facts that the German average wage was as low as the lowest in Europe; that German hours of labor were the longest in Europe; that the German tuberculosis rate and infantile death rate—those two barometers of poverty — were the highest in Western Europe; that half of the working-class families of Berlin lived in one room. These lies were swallowed as a whole—accepted as gospel by a people as accustomed to absorb untruth as their rulers were facile in giving it forth.

"Yet that second stage in the moral breakdown of Germany was not completed until the second stage of this war. The plan of a quick sweep-up in France, a decisive blow against the heart of Russia and a complete victory after three months of intensive warfare was foiled by the French victory at the Marne and the British stand at Ypres. After November, 1914, the German military caste saw that this was going to be a long war. They mobilized to that end all the resources of Germany, and nothing was more thoroughly mobilized than the forces which control public opinion, such as the press, the pulpit and education.

"From that time on army press committees in every district of Germany issued daily and weekly bulletins, telling the editors just what tone to adopt toward any and every topic concerning the war, forbidding discussion of a thousand matters outside the legitimate scope of an army censorship. By this elaborate machine they insured free circulation for any lie that would keep up the morale of the German people or serve to quiet troublesome consciences."

Worry the German Navy.

"If it is possible for an enemy submarine to operate in Liverpool Bay and to enter the Mersey, it is surely possible for our submarines to show equal enterprise; in fact, some of them have done so in the Bosphorus and in the Baltic.

"The failure, I am sure, does not lie with the officers and men of the royal navy afloat."

Thus declared R. P. Houston, British millionaire shipowner and authority on shipping problems., Mr. Houston is, incidentally, a member of Parliament.

To put Mr. Houston's question about Liverpool Bay in another form, a form in which it is being put by constantly increasing numbers of people, if it is possible for German submarines to come into the Irish Sea, the Bristol Channel, the very mouth of the Mersey and all the narrow waters about the west of these islands, why is it impossible for British submarines to get into the waters of Heligoland Bight and provide trouble for the German navy there? If conditions were reversed, is it not probable that the Germans would adopt an aggressive anti-submarine policy?

PIMPLES AND RUNNING SORES

Would Hold Head Down Face Was Such a Sight

Pimples are caused by the blood being out of order. Those festering and running sores appear on the forehead, on the nose, on the chin and other parts of the body, and although they are not a dangerous trouble they are very unsightly to both you and your friends.

There is only one way to get rid of this obnoxious skin trouble, and this is by giving the blood a thorough cleansing by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters.

This sterling remedy has been on the market for over 40 years, during which time we have received thousands of testimonials as to its curative powers over all skin diseases.

Mrs. Victor G. Fry, North Battleford, Sask., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters when I was about eighteen. I was so bad with pimples and running sores, that when I went down town, I would hold my head down when I would see anyone coming, my face was such a sight. I got two bottles, and my face began to clear, so I kept on until I had a beautiful complexion. I have recommended it to everyone who is in a run-down condition, as it builds up the blood, and when the blood is A1 the face is clear."

TERRIBLE LOSSES.

Paris, June 1.—The French troops have inflicted terrible losses on the Germans near Soissons. The enemy is attempting to reach Chateau Thierry from two directions.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at very little cost. Every body uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

ABOUT THE CAMEL.

Old World Animals Originated In America.

There seems to be little doubt of the fact that camels, of which we are accustomed to think as Old World animals, originated in America. Anciently they were perhaps the most numerous of mammals in the territory between the Mississippi river and the Rocky Mountains, as proved by their bones dug out of rocks, some of them being no bigger than jack rabbits.

We have to-day on this continent four species of the camel tribe, all of them native to South America. Largest of them is the Llama, which in that part of the world is extensively used as a beast of burden. The others are the gudnaco, the vicuna (which is the smallest, hardly bigger than a sheep) and the alpaca.

Nobody has ever seen an alpaca on this continent, unless in a menagerie or "zoo," but we have long been acquainted with its wonderful fleece, very fine and lustrous, which fetches nearly four times the price of the best merino wool. Indeed, it is commercially rated above mohair — the wool of the Angora goat.

In suitable regions (which we do not lack) all four of these "camelaids" could doubtless be introduced and bred within our borders and turned to useful accounts. The vicuna in South America, is as yet virtually a wild animal though not hard to tame, and the alpaca is only partly domesticated.

The alpaca industry reaches its highest development in southeast Peru and northwest Bolivia, in and around the valley of Lake Titicoss, which is more than two miles above the sea. It is an arid region with great diversity of climates, ranging from subtropical at the lake level to arctic on the lofty mountain slopes. But the alpaca selects its own zone of temperature by going higher in summer and descending to lower altitudes in winter.

Conditions very similar in respect to climate, elevation and vegetation are found in the vast area between the Rockies and the Sierras. There alpacas would doubtless multiply greatly, the herds (in which they are accustomed to wander, maintaining themselves on coarse grass and herbage, for the consumption of which the peculiar construction of their mouths and stomachs adapts them. The succulent vegetation of warmer and more humid climates does not suit the health of any species of the camel family.

Alpacas are remarkably active and vigorous beasts, thriving where cattle and sheep could hardly exist. They have two-toed feet, like the camel, and similar teeth.—Rene Bachean in the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Chinese Cleverness.

In making confectionery the Chinese are very skillful, and possess the reputation of having many secrets. They are able to empty an egg and fill it with an almond nougat without one being able to find the slightest break in the shell. They also take the entire pulp from an orange and fill it up with fruit jelly without leaving a trace of an incision in the rind.

To Clean Brass.

To remove marks and discolorations from brass or gilt ornaments, picture frames, etc., dissolve a piece of soft soap the size of an egg in a pint of boiling water, then add a tablespoonful of ammonia. Wring a cloth out of the solution and gently wipe the article to be cleaned; then sponge it with care, using cold water. Finally dry with a soft cloth.

FRENCH ARE DEVELOPING A STRONG RESISTANCE

THE ENEMY FINDS IT VERY DIFFICULT TO ADVANCE

GERMAN SUBMARINES OPERATING OFF UNITED STATES COAST

FURTHER ADVANCES BY GERMANS WILL MEAN USE OF HINDENBURG'S RESERVES

The New German Line Has Begun to Bulge at the Middle ---Six Thousand Additional Men Needed For Each Mile By Which Enemy Extends New Salient---Strong Resistance Being Developed by the French Forces.

French and British Official Reports

(United Press.)

(By J. W. T. Mason.)

New York, June 3. — The fatal lure of Paris in enticing Von Hindenburg into an extravagant extension of his front that will prove far beyond the means of the German army to support when America's major offensive starts for the Rhine.

The front between Soissons and Chateau Thierry, which is the nearest line to Paris, has begun to bulge in its middle, like the stomach of a glutton. Hindenburg's own blood gluttony is now being forced to feed itself only at this one sector of the front. The other areas are held secondary to the deep necessity for reaching the environs of Paris.

Each mile by which Hindenburg extends the new salient towards Paris means the German general staff must find six thousand more men for its protection. Each mile therefore of Hindenburg's new advance means six thousand men must be taken from the German reserves and placed permanently along the battle front, where they can no longer serve for surprise attacks such as were used in the Picardy, Flanders and Aisne offensives.

FRONT HAS BEEN EXTENDED 30 MILES.

The German front has now been extended for about 30 miles from the beginning of the Aisne attack. This means that 180,000 Germans have been permanently transferred from the reserves to the trenches.

If the German casualties last week be placed at 100,000, the total depletion of Hindenburg's reserves must be placed at 280,000.

With this number removed from participating in future surprise operations, Hindenburg's power for developing new offensives by sudden shock operations, has been seriously impaired. A few more miles of German advance toward Paris, therefore, contains no element of alarm for General Foch, as long as Hindenburg is permanently halted at a reasonable distance from the capital. It is he and not General Foch who should do the worrying about the future.

The strong resistance now being developed by the French is not to be regarded as a major counter attack, but only as formal defensive fighting. Only as a desperate resort to save vital positions would a major counter attack be jusified while America is unable fully to participate. When that time comes, "counter attack" will be too meagre a word to describe the allies' operations.

THE BRITISH OFFICIAL REPORT.

London, June 3.—The British last night gained ground slightly in a local operation on the northern side of the Flanders salient, the war announced. Nearly two hundred prisoners were captured.

The official statement follows:

"Successful local operations were carried out by our troops last night in the neighbourhood of Vaux Berquin and Morris. Our line has been advanced slightly at these points, and one hundred and ninety three prisoners, and a number of machine guns and trench mortars have been captured by us. Our casualties were the capture of twenty prisoners, three light. Successful raids resulting in machine guns, trench mortars, were carried out by us also southeast of Arras, northwest of Lens and west of Merville. A hostile raiding party was repulsed south of Villers-Brettoneux

THE FRENCH OFFICIAL REPORT.

Paris, June 3. — The French held the Germans everywhere last night. The enemy losses were heavy. The French took prisoners. The war office reports the French counter attacked along the whole front between the Ourcq and the Marne and made progress at a number of points. A violent German attack on both sides of the road between Chateau Thierry and Paris was broken up by the French.

The official statement follows:

"Our troops continued their counter attacks during the night along the whole front between Ourcq and he Marne and gained ground at several points. A violent German attack delivered on the side of the road between Chateau Thierry and Paris was broken up by French fire southeast of Boureseches. Everywhere the French maintained their positions. The losses suffered by the enemy in these attacks were heavy. The French took hundreds of prisoners."

BOMBING WARFARE ON A LARGE SCALE.

With the British Armies in France, June 3.?—Bombing war fare on the most colossal scale thus far seen is in progress on the British front each night. The Prussians and the Allies do not stop dropping high explosives from sunset to sunrise.

Astride the line and far into the back areas the countryside literally rocks with stunning super-concussions while the starlight sky is allicker with archie bursts.

ENEMY HOLDS THE NORTHERN BANK.

Paris, June 3.—The enemy now holds the northern bank of the Marne for a distance of about fifteen miles. Further advance in this section seems to have been prevented, although Germans may feel out the opposite bank of the river by making efforts to cross at various points. The principal object of the enemy however appears to be to make such progress westward as is possible before he is compelled to accept battle on a grand scale.

BRITISH RE-CAPTURE FORTIFIED TOWNS.

(Canadian Press.

With the British Army in France, (By the A.P., — In their operations last night on the northern side of the Flanders salient, the British wrested two fortified farms in the neighborhood of Vieux-Berquin, from the Germans, after a brief engagement. About one hundred and fifty prisoners were taken including three officers. The British casualties were slight.

The German artillery bombarded the section south of Scarpe with a heavy fire, and also turned their guns on Villers-Bretonneux.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK June 1.—Associated Press War Summary says today:—Bitterly defending every barrier in the nemy's path the French resistance on the west side of Aisne salient is increasing. Sunday apparently was poorest German advance has had since offensive was renewed a week ago today.

PLOT TO OVERTHROW RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT HAS BEEN DISCOVERED

The Scheme Includes a Plan to Drive the Russians Into a Famine

CZECHS MUTINY

(Special to Examiner)

LONDON, June 3. — Widespread plots to overthrow the Bolshevik Government, has been discovered in Petrograd and Moscow, according to a wireless report from the latter city. Moscow has been declared in a state of siege.

The plots are said to extend throughout Russia. In the Kuban and Don regions the counter revolutionary movement menaces the flour depots. This, added to the loss of the Ukrain Granarier, is seen as part of a plan to drive the Russians into a famine.

Many arrests have been made. A special call to arms has been sent to workmen and peasants in the Petrograd, Moscow, Don and Kuban districts to combat the counter revolutionaries.

The mutiny of an army corps af Czechs-Slovaks, who captured several important railways and junctions is attributed to the spread of the plots.

Vain To Try To Buy Groceries In Large Quantities Now

Grocers report that some customers still try to place orders for staples in quantity lots as in the unrestricted days of plenty. They demand a hundred weight of sugar, or a hundred of flour, or otherwise suggest purchases that the present law prohibits. To these householders, the grocer replies that not only is he observing the law because it is the law, but also because the penalties are extremely severe. For infractions of this regulation there is a fine of $100, at least, and worse than that the government may cancel the grocer's business license, and thereby close up his store.

Hence the people need not waste efforts in trying to buy staple foods in large quantities while the present drastic law is in force.

THE WEATHER

The highest temperature during the month of May was 86 degrees; the lowest 28 degrees. The month was warmer than the average, and the rainfall, which was 1.96 inches, was only about one-half the usual amount. June came in with a temperature of 86 degrees. In this connection there was a lengthy article in a recent issue of the Scientific American, by an official of the Boston weather bureau, who has been delving into records for the past 50 years, and claims to have discovered a scientific basis for long-range forecasting. He states the weather repeats itself in cycles of 12 and 14 years. He prophesies exceptionally warm weather for June and July, and a particularly cool August. Seasonable weather for the remaining months of 1918, and an average winter are promised. While his forecasts have been close in the past, he has not been long enough in the field to fully establish his reputation as an unfailing long-distance forecaster. — W. P.

Drive Is Checked

Allied Resistance is Stiffening at All Points and Enemy Progress Has Been Checked

RESERVES ARRIVE

(United Press Service.)

(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES ON THE MARNE, June 3.—The Germans' progress having been checked to the eastward and southward, they are now concentrating their efforts southwestward on the front between Noyon and Chateau-Thierry, seeking to advance among the three valleys of the Oise, Ourcq and Marne. But along every one of these routes now that the intentions of the German High Command are revealed, the resistance is increasing hourly. As a result, the enemy's progress is proportionately decreasing.

A National Fortress.

In the battles on the extreme left of the new front, the German's efforts to reach the Oise are barred by an immense chain of high, forest covered hills, including the forests of Laigue, Compiegne and Villers-Cotterets, which constitutes a natural fortress. The Rheims defences are barring the German progress on the extreme right.

On the western flank the Germans are thrusting simultaneously on the Audignicourt, Fontency line, and on the Crise river line, farther to the south, with the double object of attaining the Oise valley and encircling the Villers Cotterets Forest. The latter now constitutes the Boches' immediate principal objective. Here they are employing their famous infiltration methods, consisting of attacking not where the French resistance is strong but in seeking out the points where the French effectives are fewest, and then, by means of their vast numerical superiority, in filtering into intervening valleys, ravines and other natural cover until they can outflank the French resistance.

The steady arrival of French reserves, however is strengthening the entire front and rendering infiltration constantly more difficult. This is particularly noticeable at Chaudun, where the Germans sought to filter through the gap between the Forests of Compiegne and Villers Cotterets.

With their efforts to reach the Oise thus checked and their advance westward along the Marne meeting with determined resistance, the Boches naturally are throwing the bulk of their efforts into the Valley of the Ourcq.

The entire battle front now measures 120 kilometres (74.82 miles), divided into three sectors, Noyon to Soissons, 30 kilometres (18.63 miles), Soissons to Chateau-Thierry, 45 kilometres (27.945 miles), and Chateau-Thierry to Rheims 45 kilometres.

The Germans to date have engaged fifty divisions (600,000 men).

Military Writers' Opinions Of The Present Drive

One German Critic Says Developments Will Be Influenced by the French Reserve Forces

CONCENTRIC MOVEMENT

((Special to Examiner)

AMSTERDAM, June 3. — German military writers believe that Hindenburg plans to halt at the Marne and carry out a concentric movement westward, over the Carlepont Plateau, towards Paris. Gen. Ardenne writes that the theory of the battle is the same as penetrated Armours Plate, many hits, close together, tending to weaken the power of resistance.

Major Schreibers Fhofen, in the Kamburger Nachrichten, declares that developments will be influenced by the French force which Foch has brought up from great distance and which he hesitates to throw into the battle.

SHIPS WERE SUNK BY GERMAN SUBMARINES OPERATING OFF COAST OF NEW JERSEY

Paris Remains Calm In Spite Of Air Raids

There is No Sign of Panic in the City Although Germans Are Only 45 Miles Away

NON-COMBATANTS KILLED

(By William Philip Simms.)

PARIS June 3.—Paris continues to be the wonder city of the war. While the Prussian Crown Prince's armies under Gen. Von Below and Gen. Von Boehn, forty-five miles away, hurl their desperate masses in their third drive against the city, there is no sign of panic here.

People are going about their business with no sign of any fear that the Germans may continue their advance. Absolute confidence prevails everywhere, and the same feeling exists through all the territory behind the Allied lines.

Raids Continue.

The long range gun continues to send shells into the capital daily, and each night brings its airplane bombing raid, so Paris is as much attacked as some parts of the western front, but the people have long since become used to it.

I heard one business man remark casually to his partner as he took his hat from its peg and started to dinner: "Well, I'm off. I'll be back in time for that conference and after that we can watch the air raid."

These raids, of course, kill mostly women and children, and because of this everybody detests them. But the people are far from being panic stricken.

Business as Usual.

I strolled up and down the boulevards while a raid was on expecting to see a great scurrying for shelter. But when the alarm sirens began wailing like all the demons of hell let loose, nobody paid the slightest attention to that. Folks continued to stroll quietly as if nothing had happened. Young soldiers on leave from the front walked arm in arm with their sweethearts all unperturbed. To all appearances they have not heard the warnings. Older men walking homeward with their wives and daughters after a dinner in a restaurant, went on at a leisurely pace. Groups still collected around the newspaper kiosa to buy the latest editions, and amongst them was a heavy sprinkling of American buddies from the trenches, calling for American magazines. Old ladies selling these periodicals adjusted their spectacles with untrembling hands and made change by the dimmest candle light, despite the menace of German airplanes fighting to win the skies over the city and loose their cargoes of murder bombs.

Paris After Dark.

Taxicabs careened through the avenues with their usual reckless speed, dashing at a great rate down darkened streets. On the sidewalks the humane procession moved on the same as always, only now it marched in the deepest shadows. Now and then one heard a girlish voice raised in protest after a "spook," which gave some French boy's secret away. There were notes of merry laughter and a soldier's jest about the delights of Paris after dark.

Then the aerial barrage began, shells burst flickeringly high over head. Now and then it was possible to hear the purring German motors. Bombs drop and thunder rolls through the streets, but still there is no sign of panic.

Paris has grown used to war. Neither the Crown Prince struggling desperately to the east, nor his goth as buzzing above the boulevards has frightened her.

I left her confident and calm.

United States Naval Authorities Admit the Loss of Three Schooners Off the United States Coast--Two Submarines Were Sighted---Crew of Schooner Given Ten Minutes to Leave Vessel.

Ships Were Blown Up

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, June 3.—One steamship, one schooner and two or three other vessels have been sunk off the Jersey coast by submarine.

Unofficial reports said fifteen vessels had been sunk by German submarines which operated off New Jersey coast Sunday night. The crew of the schooner Cole, 1,700 tons, has been landed here. The United States naval authorities admitted three schooners sunk. No vessels were allowed to leave Atlantic ports this morning. It is supposed that the German Admiralty, finding itself outwitted in European waters hoped to stop the transportation of troops right at American ports of departure. Boston reports say the United States Navy has captured one submarine, but there is no confirmation of this.

TWO SUBMARINES ATTACKED SHIP.

Two submarines attached the Edward H. Cole, according to the commander of the vessel, Captain Newcomb. They appeared simultaneously, one on each side of the vessel, and signalled the captain to heave to. The commander of one of the submarines then boarded the schooner in a small boat and gave the crew ten minutes to leave the ship.

The crew took to their own boats immediately and the German sailors then planted bombs on the vessel and blew her up. Just before the explosion occurred an American steamship appeared in the offing and another u-boat immediately gave chase. The last Captain Newcomb saw of the steamer she was making off at full speed. The crew of the Edward H. Cole was subsequently picked up by an American auxiliary naval vessel brought to an Atlantic port last night, and then sent here by train.

They were taken in charge by naval officials. The auxiliary vessel carrying Edward H. Cole's crew was pursued by a submarine but escaped by taking refuge in an Atlantic port.

NEW YORK, June 3. — Eleven members of the crew of the American schooner Edward H. Cole, arriving here to-day, asserted their ship had been destroyed by two German submarines 75 miles off the Jersey coast.

PORT HAS BEEN CLOSED.

BOSTON, Mass., June 3. — The port of Boston was closed this afternoon on account of submarines operating off the coast.

ON THE LOOKOUT FOR CREWS.

(Special to The Examiner.)

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., June 3.—Life-saving stations along the Jersey coast this afternoon were ordered to be on the lookout for castaway crews of German submarine victims.

An ATLANTIC PORT, June 3. — Two tank steamers were sunk by German submarines about 150 miles off Sandy Hook between 7 and 8 o'clock last night, according to the captain of a Canadian Pacific passenger liner arriving here to-day.

The liner carried 150 passengers, on her maiden voyage. She was travelling in a slow convoy. Last night at 7 o'clock when the passengers were giving a dinner to the captain, a wireless message was received saying:

"We are being attacked by a submarine."

The sender of the S. O. S. flashed the name of his vessel and its exact location also, but it was not disclosed.

A few minutes later came also the wireless: "We have been torpedoed."

The captain ordered his liner to leave the convoy and make with all speed for the nearest port. Several other ships also broke away from the convoy, and with all lights dimmed, made a dash for safety. The dinner to the captain broke up. Passengers donned their life belts and were ordered to take their stations behind the lifeboats.

Half an hour later, as the liner was speeding through the night another wireless message came: "We are attacked." This message gave the names of another of the tank steamers, also its location.

The liner could not turn from its course to go to the rescue. The last heard from the second vessel was a brief flash, very faint: "We are sinking, S. O. S."

The captain of the Canadian liner heard nothing further about the submarines until he entered the harbour here.

TWO MORE SUNK.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Two more American vessels, the Hattie Dunn and the Samuel L. Hathaway have been sunk by German submarines.

It became known here that naval authorities have suspected the presence of at least one submarine off the northern Atlantic coast for more than a week, and that a diligent search had been made for it by naval vessels. In the opinion of responsible a naval officer, the submarine having failed to get the prey she sought, American transports, and getting low on supplies, launched an attack yesterday on any vessel that came within her vicinity, knowing that she would be unable much longer to remain away from her base.

STEAMSHIP SHELLED.

NEW YORK, N.Y., June 3. — 3 o'clock despatch — Word that the steamer Carolina with 250 passengers on board was being shelled by a submarine was received this afternoon by the New York and Porto Rico Steamship Company. The Carolina is en route here from San Juan, Porto Rico.

WASHINGTON, June 3. — The Navy Department received a wireless S.O.S. this afternoon saying the Porto Rican steamer Carolina was being attacked off the coast to the south of the point. Three other vessels were sunk.

TWO TANKERS ATTACKED.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, June 3. — A British steamship which came into port at full speed to-day reported having picked up wireless appeals for help from two American tank steamships which were being attacked off the New Jersey coast. Both the tankers are reported they were sinking.

ALLOWED TO MAKE WINE FOR OWN USE

New Order-in-Council Will Become Effective Next December.

Many people in the city have been making wine for their own use, and wondering whether they were permitted to do so under the new regulations. Word comes from Ottawa saying that there is nothing to prevent a man making wine for his own use whether from dandelions, grapes or any other article, provided he does not sell the same, if it is over 2½ per cent. proof spirits.

After December 31 next under the Order-in-Council of the Federal Parliament, it will become illegal to manufacture.

Merchants Urged To Display Flags

The Council expects that the business men and citizens in general will fly their flags to-morrow to recognize the formal opening of the Trent Canal. Mayor Duncan and his assistants from the Council, the Board of Trade and other bodies are attending to other details, but the Mayor places upon the citizens the duty of giving colour to the streets to-morrow. A few flags were out this morning, but by noon to-morrow the others should appear.

TICKETS FOR LUNCHEON.

The informal luncheon at the Empress Hotel to-morrow evening at 7 o'clock promises to be a fitting reception to Hon. Dr. Reid. Ald. Taylor is in charge of the sale of tickets. This morning there were quite a number disposed of, and other citizens who purpose attending the luncheon may secure tickets at the City Clerk's office.

SWORN TO AND GUARANTEED

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

MONDAY, JUNE 3RD, 1918.

AN UNFORTUNATE CASE.

The recent action of the Government in regard to the pay of civil servants who are in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, will prove a hardship in many instances, and the protest of the Great War Veterans in this regard should be strenuously pushed by the Association. The case of a Peterborough letter carrier who went overseas two years ago illustrates the effect of the new order. The soldier in question was rejected in England as far as service in France was concerned but was held for duty in England and has been carrying on there ever since. He has been in receipt of part of his pay as letter carrier and of his military pay, without, however, any separation allowance for his wife or any Patriotic Fund allowance. The new order-in-council cuts off his civil pay from June 1st because he is not on duty in France, and as a result his wife and family will be left with a total income of $20 a month assigned pay to maintain themselves. It is manifestly impossible for them to live on that sum and the government should at once grant a separation allowance to the wife and the Patriotic Fund should award the usual allowance or else the soldier himself should be promptly brought back to Canada, discharged from military duty and reinstated in his civil position.

SHOULD BE JAILED.

An incident reported by several of the returned soldiers who assisted the Progressive Club in their campaign on behalf of the Prisoners of War Fund, shows that there is at least one man in Peterborough who is pro-German and disloyal and who should be behind the bars. He will land there, too, if the returned men can identify him. On Friday the Veterans, in uniform, visited a local factory selling tags to the workmen as they came out. While engaged with a group of employees another workman rode out on a bicycle, and one of the soldiers, waving the collection box in his direction said: "Don't forget the prisoners of war." The only reply was, "To hell with the prisoners of war," and the man on the bicycle made good his escape leaving behind an indignant little squad of khaki-clad men.

The individual who, living safely at at home and drawing doubtless a big salary would make use of such an expression about fellow citizens of his who went bravely out on the great adventure and are now suffering in a German prison camp, is of too low a nature to be left at large. A jail term would be too mild a punishment for such an apology for a man and it is to be hoped that the War Veterans will be successful in their efforts to locate the guilty party.

CAMPAIGN MATERIAL

If Capt Burnham, has any difficulty in discovering subjects to talk about in his "Red Triangle Campaign of Truth" the Examiner would suggest that the member for West Peterboro might find in the two cases outlined below, some interesting material for a lecture before the Great War Veterans on the subject of finding employment for returned men.

Case number one deals with the question of the caretaker of the lights at Stoney Lakes—a position that requires no technical skill and calls for little exertion of any kind, and would be a splendid berth for a war-shattered man. The appointment was held before the war by a young man who went overseas with the first contingent. Quite properly the position is being held open for him and will be his when he returns. In the meantime, however, the work must be done and therefore a returned soldier, a member of Capt. Burnham's own battalion by the way, who was badly wounded by machine gun fire in France applied for the temporary appointment, being quite willing to step out when the original holder returns from overseas. The request was a reasonable one, but has been abruptly turned down and the position is being filled by a younger brother of the former official, a man who is apparently quite capable of doing heavier work, and who is not handicapped from earning his living as is the soldier applicant by reason of having his hip shot away.

The explanation may possibly be found in the fact that the father of the man now holding the position has been known as a most active worker in the interests of the Conservative party.

Case number two deals with the Peterboro post office, where a vacancy on the staff, left an opening for the appointment of a returned soldier. It has been understood that men who have been overseas are to be given the preference in all such positions, but no returned in all dier was appointed in this case. Instead the appointment has been awarded to a young lady who is undoubtedly qualified for the position, especially as she is the daughter of one of Capt. Burnham's chief lieutenants in the recent election campaign, a man who had charge of Capt. Burnham's nomination paper and the recuring of signature to that important document.

Incidents such as these are inclined to make returned men wonder if service on the battlefield must take second place to service in political campaigns. Capt. Burnham's explanation of the two cases referred to would furnish an interesting evening for the G. W. V. A.

TRUST TO FOCH.

Serious as the situation on the western front may seem, as a consequence of the initial success of the German smash on the Aisne front, the nature of the news does not justify the gloomy forebodings expressed by many people. "If the boys over there lost heart as quickly as the folks at home the war would have been over long ago, and we would be learning the goose step now," was the emphatic comment of a returned soldier the other day, who's sizing up of the situation is one that contains much food for thought. It is necessary that the people at home should have confidence in the leadership of General Foch, and in the valour of the British, French and American troops, and it is also necessary to understand the nature of the campaign which Foch is conducting. His strategy is interpreted by the allied military writers to consist of saving his forces by defensive warfare, at the same time taking the greatest possible toll of casualties from the enemy until the time comes when he can counter attack with the momentum necessary. Time is fighting on the side of the allies, and Foch so far has refused to be hurried into an offensive. As one newspaper puts it: "Faith in him should be increased and not shaken by the fact that he is holding back until he can hope to win what will be the most fateful battle of this or any other war."

Hilaire Belloc, the greatest of all British military writers, predicts that if the German offensive fails to separate the British and the French armies and is as costly in casualties as its predecessors, "there will be left no offensive strength with which to obtain a decision." And meanwhile thousands of American soldiers are arriving each week in France, adding constant strength to he allied armies. As Germany's striking force decreases, the punch of the allies is growing from day to day. The United States army now numbers 2,078,222 men; in the first ten days of last month 90,000 American troops were sent overseas, and on the anniversary of the first landing of Americn troops in France, it is officially announced that there will be one million fully equipped and supplied United States soldiers at or behind the front in France. These are figures that explain the Germans' desperate efforts to secure a decision at the present time; these are also figures that spell defeat and disaster for Germany, if her present gamble with her last stake fails.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

God Save King George V., and may his next birthday see the Allies victorious, and peace restored to the stricken world.

The excuse offered by the Hun airmen in regard to the first raid on British hospitals, that they did not know the nature of the places attacked, will not serve in the case of the latest rage, when they lit flares that illuminated the whole area, and then continued their murderous assault.

Don't forget to decorate your premises to-morrow for the opening of the Trent Canal. It is an historic event for Peterboro and should be fittingly recognized.

Lighter jackets are to be supplied the Canadian troops in training this summer, but the heavy serge tunic must be worn for walking out purposes. The United States' plan of allowing troops to doff their jackets in the hot weather, would be welcomed by the Canadian Tommy.

A Canadian soldier just escaped from Germany, says the prisoners are being fed "on a corn soup, black bread and small potatoes, cooked and mashed with their skins, and it seemed a liberal concoction of sand mixed with them." And yet there is a man working in a Peterboro factory who says: "To hell with the prisoners of war!" when he is asked to help them.

May the second battle of the Marne and even more favorably than the first for the Allies!

A coffin seized at Huron, S. D., was found to contain twenty gallons of whiskey. It had been shipped from the East, and a grave had been ordered dug in the Huron cemetery. Some people talk of whiskey sending a man to the grave, but this seems to be the first case on record of a man sending whiskey to the grave.

Germany must force a decisive battle; Foch must avoid a decisive battle. Thus the Toronto Telegram sizes up the situation on the western front.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

No Excuse for Gloom

(Toronto Telegram)

There is neither excuse nor reason for the WAR WEARY talk of civilians who wag their heads in gloomy diagnosis of the ills suffered by the allies on the western front.

When It Comes to a Show-Down

(New York Sun)

The Kaiser has drawn four Kings for parts of what used to be Russia. But the ultimate fates hold four aces still—England, France, Italy and the United States.

Did Hearst Know?

(Toronto Globe)

What evil counsellor advised Hon. Dr. Cody that the pulpit and the Legislature could be combined? Did Sir William Hearst know when he chose the rector of St. Paul's as Minister of Education that the new Minister intended to remain rector?

Should be Sacrificed

(London Advertizer)

There's no pleasing some people. There are actually papers complaining about Henri Bourassa's present silence. Surely silence is the best that can be expected from the man to whom the Borden Government allows such license.

On War Footing.

(Hamilton Herald)

Now that everybody in Germany is being urged to help save leather by going barefoooted, Germany can be said to be really on a war footing at last.

The World's Job.

(New York Tribune)

The business of swearing in a posse of nations to round up the world's worst bad man goes on despite the German army's terribleness on the western front. Guatemala, nineteenth nation to declare war against the German empire, does not add any military strength to the Allies. Her presence in the Allied camp is a moral victory of importance, at which this country may feel especial satisfaction. The solidarity of the new world in opposition to the German threat to all the world fails of completion by several important gaps. The cause gains however, steadily.

It is no longer a quesiton of one group against another group. In the first place, the central allies have ceased to be a group, they have become an empire. In the second place the Allies have broadened their list until it comprises nations of every continent and clime. It is now the world against Germany. Precisely as a western community in the old days took arms and to a man did sheriff's work to rid itself of a horse thief, so the world today arms itself against the German. The task may be tedious and costly. The duty is inescapable if homes and families are ever to live in peace. And the issue is inexitable.

Romantic Career of Chinese Actor.

Deur Shin-pan, the king of the Chinese actors, was the possessor of a very interesting character, and came to quite a disastrous end. He was the leading actor in China for forty years, receiving as much as $10,000 for monthly salary at times. He was born in Hupeh province in Woug Chow Fu seventy years ago, and began studying to become an actor at the age of ten. He was a very bright boy and had an excellent voice,—sweet as an organ. Deur tried three roles before he finally decided on the Lau Sang, or impersonator of emperors, a part which he kept until his death. The mother of Emperor Kwong Zi was very fond of Deur and invited him to come to her palace and act as chief instructor to her private actors. It was she who persuaded him to stop smoking opium. For the past few years he was living in retirement, taking part in very few plays. Recently, when Premier Tuan Chi-jui called all the military governors to Pekin to discuss the war proposition, great celebrations were held all over the city. Lou Yung-ting, the military governor of Kwangtung, prepared a great entertainment for his friends and invited Deur Shin-pan and Mei Lei-fong, the two greatest actors in China, to entertain his friends. Deur refused this invitation but Loh would not accept his excuse, as he had made all arrangements to have the popular play, Voo Jah P'oo, presented to his guests and he knew that there was not another man in China who could take the leading part as well as Deur Shin-pan. So he sent another messenger to Deur's Shin-pan. So he sent another messenger to Deur's house requesting him to accept the role. Deur's second refusal so angered Loh that he got in his automobile and went to Deur's house. He caught the actor and by main force put him in his car and carried him to the theatre. There he insulted and abused him and threatened his life if he did not play his part in the performance. Deur played his part but with a heavy heart. His suffering was so great that many people in the audience wept from pity und sympathy. As soon as the play ended Deur escaped to his home. He was so deeply hurt by the disrespect and insulting manner in which he had been treated that he smoked a large amount of opium and that, together with his old age and feebleness, so weakened his constitution that nothing could save him and he died on the seventh of last May. All the Chinese papers paid glowing tributes to this honored and renowned man, and did not hesitate to lay the blame for his death at the feet of the overbearing official, for whom the ideal of perfect government lies in individual power.—Frank S. Williams, in Asia Magazine.

ORGANIZE TO FIGHT

Baboons Make War Very Much as Do Human Beings.

Ample Proof That Intelligent Beasts Recognize the Value of Co-operation—Also Capable of Self-Sacrifice in Aiding the Young.

If we are to credit the testimony on the subject offered by naturalists, man is not the only animal who carries on his warfare by means of organized bands, and calls in the forces of nature to assist him. There have been witnessed in Africa fights that were conducted in as orderly a manner as if the warriors had been really men, instead of only somewhat like them in form, i. e., baboons.

One naturalist was stoned out of a pass in a very few minutes by these creatures, who sprang upon ledges and stones, looked down for a few moments on the valley, growling, snarling and screaming, and then began to roll down stones with so much vigor and adroitness that the intruders took to flight. The baboons evidently knew the value of co-operation, for the naturalist saw two of them combine their efforts in order to set a particularly heavy stone rolling. One monkey, bent on making the most of his missile, was seen to carry a stone up a tree, that he might hurl it with greater force.

Once, while some baboons were crossing a valley, they were attacked by dogs, and, as is usual during a march, the females and young were in the center, the males heading the column and bringing up in the rear. As the dogs rushed upon them the males turned and faced their enemies, growling, beating the ground with their hands, and opening their mouths wide, so as to show their glittering teeth. They looked so fierce and malignant that the dogs—Arab greyhounds, accustomed to fight successfully with hyenas and other beasts of prey—shrank back. By the time they had been encouraged to renew the attack, the whole herd had made their way, covered by the rear guard, to the rocks, one six-months-old monkey excepted.

This little monkey sat on a rock surrounded by the dogs; but he was not long left in his perilous position. An old baboon stepped from a cliff near by, advanced toward the dogs, keeping them in check by threatening gestures and sounds, picked up the baby monkey, and carried it to a place of safety on the cliff, while the whole crowd of baboons watched the act of heroism and shouted their battle cry.

Peanuts Up a Peg.

Until recently the peanut was regarded as a casual—one might almost say sportive—article of provender. It has been looked upon as appropriate to the small boy and the circus. The "peanut gallery," though but a memory to the present generation, is a not-forgoten term for the cheap seats at the top of a theater.

But now it is different. The long-despised peanut is coming into its own. It has the emphatic indorsement of Mr. Hoover. Our people are advised to eat peanuts.

You see, the peanut is not a nut at all, properly speaking. It is a kind of pea; and, like other legumes, it is rich in tissue-making stuff. A paper bag of peanuts (even nowadays, when somewhat reduced in size) affords a fairly square meal.

The peanut, however, may be utilized to advantage in cookery—for soup, for "peanut loaf," and in other ways. If you want the recipes, you can get them from the food administration at Washington.

Thought He Was "Setting 'Em Up."

A young Topeka army officer, now in France, was seized while in Paris with a desire to send his sister a present, and finally decided on a waist, says the Kansas City Star. He entered a fashionable shop and selected a waist, but not knowing the size his sister required, singled out a pretty Parisian clerk who looked about his sister's size, and asked her to try the waist on. When she returned the fit was pronounced perfect, and the young officer nodded approvingly and paid the cashier. As he turned back to claim the article, the clerk flew into his arms and kissed him again and again, exclaiming, "Thank you, thank you." All the other clerks in the store then caught the idea that the handsome young American was "setting them up" generally to girls who wanted new waists, and begged him to buy for them also. The officer finally excused a retreat in some manner or other, but the sister in Topeka has not yet received any present.

Her Horrible Suspicion.

We are all to be oversuspicious, just now, of everything and everybody. An instance of this regrettable tendency is furnished by an edifying food queue story which is going the rounds here.

A queue had formed up outside a butcher's shop in a London suburb and, in order to make things easier for all concerned, the shopman adopted the plan of letting his customers in in parties of eight or ten, and of letting them out from the rear of his premises. One old woman, noticing that, though many went in, none came out, marveled greatly, and, when it came her turn to enter, she hesitated about doing so.

"Hurry up, madam," shouted the butcher, who didn't want to lose time.

"But what have you done with all the other people?" was the startling inquiry.—London Times.

"Boloism" a New Word.

Far more than Germany has gained by her mischief-making propaganda in various countries, she is losing by the exposure of such propaganda. For instance, we are now aware that much of the mysterious antagonism of recent years toward the United States, in several of the Latin-American countries, was due to the official expenditure of German money in subsidizing and maintaining anti-American newspapers printed in the Spanish language and pretending to represent Latin-American interests. We are further aware that much of the mysterious hostility to the United States disclosed in Japan was fomented by German agents expending government funds to inflame the readers of sensational Japanese newspapers.

There has come into common use throughout the world a new word, "Boloism," that will stand for generations to come in testimony against German official methods. The German Foreign Office, using its embassies and legations and its army of agents and spies, was pushing a propaganda, through the corrupt use of large sums of money, in neutral countries and extending it from the neutrals to the allies. The man Bolo while posing as a loyal Frenchman and a Parisian man of affairs (who had originated in Turkey or somewhere on the Eastern Mediterranean coast), was in point of fact a German agent. He was in close touch with several prominent journalists and politicians at Paris; and one of Clemenceau's immediate tasks as Prime Minister is to secure the punishment of high-priced Frenchmen who were in the Bolo conspiracy. From New York Bolo conducted negotiations with the aid of German money for the purchase of Parisian newspaper support, the plan being a subtle undermining of French confidence and courage. "Boloism," in South America, in France, in Great Britain, in Spain, in Scandinavia, in the United States, in Japan, has all been mischievous; but all of it has begun to react even more harmfully against Germany's honor and reputation. Meanwhile the new word "Boloism" is fixed in all languages and carries in condensed form a chapter of loathsome history. The climax is in Russia.

Women Waiters.

Are women waiters more frank than men in the way of letting their customers into the secrets of their employers? I have wondered, since I heard a smart waitress at a restaurant giving advice to a diner as to the dishes he should choose. She was frankness itself. "Salmon? Let's see, how much is it? No—it's not worth that—very small portions. You'll get more value for your money if you have so-and-so!" And so it went on, right through the menu. The old-fashioned waiter would suggest to an accustomed diner that such-and-such was very good to-day, thus delicately indicating that it would be wise to choose it; but I doubt whether he ever indulged in such appalling frankness as to the relation between price and value. None the less, there may be wisdom in the woman's way. Above all, diners like to feel that their attendant is taking a personal interest in their meal; and it is flattering to them to think that the waiter is putting their interests before those of the establishment—whether she is really doing so or not.

Early Methods of Curing Skins.

The original process of curing skins was probably the simple one of cleaning and drying them. Removal of the hair by maceration in water seems to have been common among the very early tribes; and one writer has suggested that the idea was obtained from the natural process of decomposition. They must certainly have been familiar with it in the case of drowned animals, where maceration can be plainly observed. Following this smoke, sour milk, oil and the brains of the animals themselves were found efficacious. Many of these primitive methods are employed in remote places at the present time.

MEAN FARMERS ARE FLAYED BY METHODIST LAYMAN

GEO. WEDLAKE BLAMES THEM FOR NOT PAYING MINISTERS ENOUGH.

Guelph, June 3. — At a session of the Hamilton Methodist Conference here, George Wedlake, of Brantford, the newly elected president of the Laymen's Association, found fault with the low salaries which were being paid to the ministers in the country districts, declaring that the present minimum salary of $900 to a married man, was a disgrace to the Methodist Church. He also said that many of the ministers did not have parsonages which were fit to live in, and many of them could not get their meagre salary when it was due. He flayed the farmers unmercifully, placing the greater part of the blame for this state of affairs on their shoulders, pointing out that they were never getting such high prices for their products as now, yet they were getting more niggardly in their givings to the church.

A resolution moved by Thomas Hilliard of Waterloo, and seconded by H. St. Clair Fisher of Queenston, was passed, recommending that the General Conference make $1200 the minimum salary for married ministers, and that single men's salary be increased along the same lines.

Four Heads.

The pastor divided his sermon under four heads—Christ the interpreter of human life, the revelation of God in human life, the substitute for human sin, and finally the advocates at the throne.

Special music of a very high order was rendered by the choir and organist, Mr. Nicholls.

CENTRAL POWERS SUFFER LOSS OF POPULATION

Great Britain and Allied Countries Have Been Holding Their Own In Spite of Heavy Losses.

GERMANY'S LOSSES

Canadian Press.

LONDON (British Admiralty wireless press) June 3.—Drain of man power fall, in number of births and loss of population brought about by sickness and under fed, is felt more severely by the central powers than by peoples of the entente. Where as the annual gain of population in Germany, in Austria and in Hungary, has given place to serious loss, the peoples of the entente have suffered very small diminution in comparison Great Britain's total population has so far remained at about the same figure, the gains balancing the losses.

INCREASE IN STATES

The rate of increase of the United States, has not been affected at all. As war goes on this growing disparity in losses of population between the central powers and the peoples fighting them is likely to increase.

If the war goes on into next year, the population of the German empire on which reliance was placed for the enlargement of Germany's prosperity and industry, the injury to trade and commerce after the war will have lost ten per cent. of its numbers and still greater proportion of its industrial value. Germany has already lost three million of her best men in battle.

Hon. Dr. Reid And Party Will Be Here Tuesday Afternoon

Left Trenton This Morning and Will Remain at Healy's Falls This Evening—Simple Programme For To-morrow

Special to the Examiner:

BELLEVLILE, June 3.—Hon. Dr. Reid, accompanied by Mr. E. G. Porter, K.C., M.P. for West Hastings, and other Parliamentary men in this section, and a number of prominent citizens of Trenton, this morning left Trenton by steamer to formally open the Trent Canal. This canal is now opened from Lake Ontario to Lake Simcoe. The officials of rivers and canals left Ottawa for Trenton on Saturday via water, and to-day started on their trip up the Trent waterway to Peterborough, where they will arrive on Tuesday. On Wednesday morning Hon. Dr. Reid will continue his trip up the Trent to Lake Simcoe, advertising this route, and completing the sail on Thursday afternoon. The outlet from Lake Simcoe to Georgian Bay is all that remains of this project to be finished.

At Peterborough on Tuesday evening the Ministers and members of the party will be tendered a banquet at the Empress Hotel.

Here in the Afternoon.

Hon. Dr. Reid is expected to reach Peterborough to-morrow afternoon. He will visit a number of the factories, including the new Quaker Oats mills, and at 6.30 will be accorded a public welcome at Central Park. The citizens are requested to make a special effort to attend this event, which will be followed by an informal luncheon at the Empress Hotel. There will be no toast list, but it is expected that the Minister will give an address, and that some speakers will be heard. Significant as Hon. Dr. Reid's visit will be, it will also be simple and unmarked by display. It is hoped that the business men will hang out their flags to-morrow morning.

Mr. And Mrs. William Snowden Celebrate Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. William Snowden, 204 Reid Street, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding on Saturday, June 1st. At their request it was a simple family affair, with only their children and their families present—Mr. Harold Snowden and family, Mrs. D. O. Roblin, of Montreal, daughter, and Mr. Roblin. Mr. Herbert Snowden is in Edmonton and couldn't arrange to come home. Mr. and Mrs. Snowden and their relatives reunited at the little dinner that marked the wedding, at the conclusion of which two purses of gold, each containing fifty dollars, were presented to Mr. and Mrs. Snowden.

It was in the Peterborough of fifty years ago that Mr. and Mrs. Snowden were married, just half a century ago. They lived for a short time in Bobcaygeon, but with that exception their married life has been spent in this city. They have been well known and highly respected, and their host of friends will be glad to felicitate with them in their golden wedding. Mr. Snowden was proprietor of the Snowden House for many years, and established a successful business, of whose reputation he protected by a scrupulous observance of the old license regulations.

EMBARGO ON CERTAIN PRODUCTS

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 3.—A recommendation of the War Trade Board, which has been incorporated in an order-in-council, which order now awaits the signature of the Governor-General, contemplates an embargo upon the importation of a list of commodities into the Dominion which will it is stated, approximate in value from ten to twelve millon dollars and which will adjust the balance of trade to that extent.

On Prohibitive List.

The list is a fairly long one, but has not yet been made public. It is stated however that it includes high priced automobiles, certain, but not all kinds of jewelry, a variety of fruits which can be grown in Canada and certain other southern fruits, such as early vegetables, etc., which are considered luxuries in Canada.

It is believed also that the list includes high priced rugs, silks, etc. The order has been sent to Niagara Falls for the signature of His Excellency the Governor General.

Want To Care For The Children Of Deceased Soldier

Case Heard This Morning Before His Honour Judge Huycke

An application came before His Honour Judge Huycke to-day in the Surrogate Court, made by Mr. and Mrs. Bentley Walker, for the custody of the two children of William Framington Godfrey, who was killed overseas, and the late Maude E. Godfrey, who died in January, 1918. Miss Alice and Stanley Godfrey were applicants for the custody of the children also. Evidence was given by a large number of witnesses this morning, that Mrs. Godfrey, before she died, expressed the request that Mr. and Mrs. Walker be given the custody of the children, to send to her mother in England after the war. The Reverend J. R. Webb and the Reverend Mr. Dougal Brown and others who knew the children and the family, gave evidence as to the character and standing of Mr. and Mrs. Walker and as to the influences surrounding their home, and that it would be a proper place for the children to be brought up. Judge Huycke is still hearing the evidence this afternoon.

E. H. D. Hall, Esq., is appearing for Miss Alice Godfrey and Stanley Godfrey, her brother, and Mr. G. N. Gordon is appearing for Mr. and Mrs. Bentley Walker, and are applying for letters of guardianship.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I have just received a letter from my boy who is serving his King and country somewhere in France in which he says that one of his dearest possessions is the T.A.S. pin that I placed on his coat when I bade him farewell.

He asks me to assure his more than friend, Bishop O'Brien, that he has kept his pledge and with the help of God will continue to do so.

Now in the name of my boy I desire to protest against the action of the Great War Veterans' Association in calling on the Government to so alter the law as to give them stronger beer. Surely the good people of our fair Dominion, including the thousands of the members of the Great War Veterans' Association will not allow such a thing to be carried out. Those of the War Veterans who were responsible for the carrying of the resolution claim their object is to look after the returned soldiers and their families. In God's name what benefit will stronger beer be to them? On the contrary, I for one, think it would be a curse.

Thanking you for giving space for this letter in your paper, I am, the Mother of a Soldier Boy who is not here to speak for himself.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—We have read with regret the statements made by some speakers in connection with the work done by the Overseas Branch of the Y.M.C.A. at the battle fronts—we do not know of ourselves of the help and assistance that has been given the Canadian boys overseas, but we hereby state without hesitation that our sons have advised us on different occasions that the work done by the Overseas Y.M.C.A. has been of great service, convenience and pleasure to them, and they have only the greatest praise for the organization.

We hope that nothing will be said or done that will hurt in any way the good work of this organization overseas.

Yours truly,
ALLAN PILLING,
GEORGE MILTON,
R. J. BEGLEY.

FIRE AT THE PETER HAMILTON FOUNDRY

The Fire Brigade had a run to the Peter Hamilton Foundry on Saturday at 5 o'clock in the evening. The roof had caught fire from a spark from the cupola. The damage was nil.

Contributions Received

An important piece of information relating to the finances of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition was given by President Dennis at its last meeting. A big effort is being put forth by the Society to have new entrances erected at both the George street and Street Railway gates, and several public spirited men have given substantial subscriptions for this purpose with the understanding that the members of the Board itself will give two hundred dollars or more to the fund. The whole matter is being gone into thoroughly, and the proposition, it is expected, will go through as suggested. The Peterborough Fair is being looked upon as a valuable asset to the city, and receiving assistance both moral and financial, it never dreamed of before.

BRITISH FORCES OPEN UP AN ATTACK THIS MORNING ON A THREE MILE FRONT

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, June 3.—British forces attacked on the Strazeele La Motte, on a front of about three and a half miles (north and northwest of Merville) at one o'clock this morning, capturing the height and enemy trenches near Strazeele, and about one hundred farms in the same locality. The British took 140 prisoners, including many officers.

Further south on the La Motte-Estaire (about two miles south of La Motte village and the same distance west of Merville) ten prisoners, four trench mortars and a machine gun were taken.

The German positions were stormed by starlight. The result improved the British positions considerably.

There was a heavy bombardment on both sides of the Scarpe River (Arras sector) early this morning. In the face of this cannonading, the British raided German positions near Arras about 3.45, taking some prisoners.

WHEAT RATES ARE ALSO INCREASED FROM TO-DAY.

The fifteen per cent. freight increase on shipments of wheat went into force last Saturday. The general increase in rates granted to the railways came into effect on March 15 last but that on grain was held over until June 1. It was also stipulated that all wheat originally shipped on and after March 15 and forwarded from milling point to destination before June 1 would be taken to destination on the old through rate basis. All new shipments come under the higher freight rates.

Severe Pains In The Back

Told of Kidney Trouble—Was Unable to Work, But Finally Found a Cure by Using This Well-Known Medicine

Gananoque, Ont., May 18. — There is plenty of enthusiasm in this town for Dr. Chase's Medicines, and many people ready with good reports of cures effected.

There seems to be no treatment for kidney derangements which proves effective in such a large proportion of cases as does Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This is because the liver and bowels are usually involved as well as the kidneys, and this medicine overcomes the disease because it acts directly on these organs.

Mrs. W. Higgins, John St., Gananoque, Ont., writes: "My husband has made use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for the last thirteen years. Previous to that he had several attacks of kidney trouble, accompanied by severe pains in his back. He became so bad that he was unable to work. Finally he started using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and the results were splendid. He quite recovered, and by using an occasional Kidney-Liver Pill he wards off recurrent attacks, and has never had any trouble since. We also use Dr. Chase's Ointment in our home and find it an excellent salve."

Mrs. James Bishop, Stone St. N., Gananoque, Ont., writes: "We have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in our home for some time, and find them an excellent remedy for pains in the back. They seem to help the stomach and kidneys to do their work more effectively. We are pleased to recommend them to others."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Look for portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., on the box you buy.

Canadian Northern Wants Special Rates Cancelled

(Special to Examiner)

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The Canadian Northern Railway in an application to the Inter State Commerce Commission today, asked for cancellation of round trip excursion fares for parties of ten or more between Niagara Falls and Toronto. They also asked cancellation of one way and round trip fares from Buffalo and Niagara Falls to points in Canada.

Bicyclist Fined For Being Drawn By A Street Car

Magistrate Dumble this morning levied the first fine under the new amendment that any person while riding a bicycle takes hold of any other vehicle for the purpose of being drawn along the highway. A youth had enjoyed the risky pleasure of being drawn along by a street car. It is an old game of kid bicyclists to grab the outside handle of the rear vestibule of a street car while riding a bicycle and to be drawn along the street. The first offender to reach police court was taxed $4.60, the price of ignoring the latest safety first regulation.

JUNK DEALER WAS DISCHARGED OF RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS

Charlie Abramowitch Appeared Before Magistrate Dumble on Saturday—Insufficient Evidence Declared Magistrate Dumble in Dismissing the Case.

The charge against Charlie Abramowitch, proprietor of the Lansdowne street junk yard, of having stolen copper wire was dismissed by Magistrate Dumble on Saturday. Immediately previous to this case, four boys were fined $10 each and costs for stealing wire from the Exhibition Grounds.

G. N. Gordon, who appeared in behalf of Abramowitch, declined to plead or elect. P. C. Bromley testified that when he was investigating the loss of wire, Abramowitch denied several times that he had bought any and finally admitted as did his wife, that they had got some from boys. Quantities of wire were found in the junk yard.

Mr. H. O. Fisk, manager of the Utilities Commission, stated that $200 worth of wire had been stolen from the Exhibition grounds. The quantity recovered from the junk yard was worth thirty dollars. Mr. Gordon offered no evidence for the defence, and in dismissing the case Magistrate Dumble stated that there was insufficient evidence to warrant sending Abramowitch on for trial.

THE DOCTORS AND THE DRUGGISTS.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,— I am interested in an editorial in the Review of last Friday on the above subject. The doctors are charged with setting up a monopoly and doing the druggists an injustice because they passed certain resolutions regarding patent medicines. The point I want to discuss is the charge of selfishness and injustice made against the doctors. I am not a doctor of medicine, nor of philosophy nor of divinity. I am not even a veterinary, but I am like Browning's character, a picker of crumbs of knowledge, and I claim to be a specialist in ethics.

Because of my interest in ethics, I am troubled when I read charges against those who are conspicuously unselfish and who because of their profession (which demands unselfishness) are almost always in moderate circumstances.

The president of Hamilton (N.Y.) University, says that it is the doctor's special task to make himself unnecessary to the community. That is no more than a simple fact. To be true to himself he must teach his constituency how to keep their health, and the history of the profession recites that those who have done most for the world have died comparatively poor men.

When Jenner discovered the virtue of vaccination he had no sympathy from the public who were exposed to the danger of smallpox and he struggled on, making experiments on himself until his theory was proved to be correct, when the people accepted the boon and Jenner killed the smallpox goose which laid the golden eggs for the medical fraternity before that hour.

The same can be said of Koch, who discovered that tuberculosis is contagious—he immediately enlightened the world and lightened his own pockets and those of doctors the world over, ever since.

Sir J. Lister, who was the father of modern antiseptics has certainly done nothing in a monetary way for physicians and has been a benefactor of the public to an extent that cannot be measured. When the Greeks of Marathon beat back the barbarians and saved the world there was one without spear or shield or helmet seen here and there fighting with only a ploughshare. This pictures the work of the leaders in medical science if I read history aright—dependent upon themselves to secure their own equipment, and unrecognized by their unsympathetic contemporaries, they have fought contagious disease—they are fighting venereal diseases (which have in the past made a fortune for patent medicine vendors) and they stand as William Pitt did, saying: "Let us find something else to abolish and some more people to save."

I cannot think that the editor is as serious as he seems in his Friday editorial. The exercise of charity suggests many reasons for the unreasonable ravings in this usually sane column. This fact, however, cannot be denied that since the United States' laws have made it compulsory to place the formula of a patent medicine on the label the scales have fallen from the people's eyes and there has been a decided slump in the quack business. This also is a truth that while a doctor who has become rich through his profession is a decided curiosity there are in many places where he can see palaces built of pills, mansions made of medicines, and riches that proclaim the virtue of advertising rather than the science of healing.

When a patent medicine firm secure a prescription which seems to promise profit, it is cherished and kept sacred, and even governments are fought that the treasure may be guarded. The oath taken by the graduate in medicine demands that any discovery which he may make in the science shall be given to the world.

Yours,
SUBSCRIBER.

IN MEMORIAM.

STANLEY.—In Loving Memory of my Dear Brother, Corp. Fred Stanley, 4th C.M.R., killed in action, June 2nd, 1916.

Oh, dear Brother, do you watch us
As we toil day by day
Do you know the pain it left us
When from us you were taken away?

Oh, dear Brother, we know you're happy
In your new home high above;
There's one great thought that makes us happy,
You gave your life to those you love.
—Inserted by his loving Sister Maude

A constitution was adopted outlining the objects of the Council and the rules governing the organization.

The programme committee presented a programme for the next six months, which was accepted by the Council.

Plans were made for the next meeting, which will take the form of a ramble on June 28th for the purpose of nature study.

UNDERHAND TACTICS.

The members of Peterborough Musicians' Union, Local No. 191, A. F. of L., which includes the 57th Regt. Band, are compelled to direct the attention of the citizens and all local Labour Unions to the unfair conduct of a certain organization which for some years has been tendering its services gratis with the expectation of later receiving payment in the form of a donation. This is a decided injustice to the 57th Band, which receives absolutely no support from the citizens and which is endeavouring to pay its way without begging from door to door. This notice is issued in order that sister Unions and other public bodies who desire to pay their way decently may not be deceived by such unfair tactics. We feel confident that organized labour in this City will place their ban on action such as described.

KING'S BIRTHDAY HONOURS ATTRACT LITTLE ATTENTION

No Hereditary Titles Distributed on This Occasion—"The Right Hon. Mister" Foster.

THE C. M. G's

Canadian Press.

OTTAWA, June 3. — The King's birthday honor list published this morning created little more than a ripple of interest at Ottawa. It is the smallest and least portentious list which has been issued for many a year and is conspicious rather for what it does not than for what it does contain. In some quarters there is more or less caustic comment regarding the conferring of C. M. G's., upon Sir Robert Borden's brother, for merely accountant of the Militia Dept., and upon Sir Robert Borden's former private secretary Mr. A. E. Blount, but A. C. M. G., is not really a title and in the cases of those upon whom the honor has been conferred it is simply a recognition of every arduous labors. Nobody bothers much about A. C. M. G.

On Previous List.

It has been customary for the Lieut. Governor and Chief Justices to have the title "Sir" conferred on them. Hence, there isn't much comment on the questioning Sir R. S. Lake and Sir Douglas Hazen, in fact, it is believed that both these names appeared on a previous list.

The same is believed to be true of Sir Horniday Laporte, chairman of the war purchasing committee, who has been giving his services free to the committee since he joined it.

Sir George Foster, is now a S. G. C. M. G., instead of a K. C. M. G. and now ranks equal with Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He will in future be referred to as "The Right Hon. Minister, etc."

While the new list will receive probably more criticism than commendation, it undoubtedly indicates a very considerable curtailment of titular distinction and there are no hereditary titles on this occasion.

Aviator Flew From Deseronto To Montreal

Record Trip Was Accomplished in Two Hours

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, June 3.— Flying in two hours a distance that the train takes six to cover, two officers of the Royal Flying Corps, Maj. F. V. Woodman and Capt. E. M. Smith, of the aviation camp at Deseronto, achieved a new Canadian record. The distance by rail to Montreal is 230 miles and the average passenger descends from the train fatigued. Not so with the two young aviators—both as fresh as daisies when they landed.

Interviewed in their beds, where they were resting when a reporter called, they told him they left Deseronto at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon and two hours later landed safely east of St. Lawrenece Boulevard, near the Canadian Northern railway tracks.

Why Rye Bread Soars.

At present one of the gravest problems facing restaurant and hotelkeepers is what they are going to give the people to eat when the rye flour runs out. At present they are forced to serve only one ounce of wheat bread to any one individual at any morning or noon-day meal, along with two ounces of rye bread. Rye bread is exceedingly hard to get and has increased two cents per one pound and a half loaf, and is bound to increase further, so long as the demand exists. It is said that the cause of this increase in substitute flours is that when the Canadian Government fixed the price of wheat it did not fix the price of other grains.

As a result of the high price of barley many farmers are grinding their own wheat and others are actually mixing a percentage of wheat flour with bran and shorts to feed to their hogs.

In the whole of Ontario there are not more than 3,000,000 bushels of rye grown, while the western provinces produce not more than five or six hundred thousands bushels, making a total of three and one-half million bushels for the whole Dominion. There are only two or three firms milling rye flour in Toronto, and these in very small quantities. It sells at $16.50 per barrel as against $10.95 for wheat flour. When asked the reason for the increase a miller said: "We can't get the rye and the demand is great. A large percentage of Canada's rye went to the United States long before our Food Controller's orders about rye bread came out."

The only other substitutes would be corn, barley and rice, but there is no corn to speak of in Canada and the United States have used for some time and are still using as much corn bread as possible, while the milling of barley would involve considerable changes in the plants.

Submarines Have Been Operating In American Waters Over A Week

Three Big Liners Are Reported Overdue—Fate of 350 People on Board Steamer Carolina Not Yet Known—Five Submarines Are Reported by the United States Naval Authorities

The Seas Are Being Combed

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, June 4.— Germany has failed to gain any military advantage from its spectacular U boat raids off the American coast.

If she intended to terrorize American minds, she has failed likewise to accomplish that.

These two facts stood out in bold relief to-day in the wake of startling news that Teuton U boats had been operating since May 25 off our coast, bagging probably twelve or more vessels of various types, but missing any cargo or troop transports

HUNT CONTINUES

Secretary Daniels was authority for the flat statement that American naval strength abroad would not be diverted to home shores because of the foray. Germany, he suggested, wanted strongly to dent the American line-up abroad, so she perhaps could undertake important naval actions over there.

Every available scouting vessel was on the hunt to-day for raiders, variously reported numbering from two to five. All up and down the coast, naval commanders acting under their own authority, supplemented by special navy department orders, had out destroyers, U boat chasers and airplanes.

READY FOR EMERGENCY.

NEW YORK, June 4.—A hospital ship was anchored off Quarantine today with a fleet of smaller craft nearby ready to dash out if patrolling airplanes report drifting lifeboats. The United States coast guard are kept in constant communication with the patrol flotilla. Four hundred persons are reported missing from the liners City of Columbus and Carolina.

VESSELS OVERDUE.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, June 4. — Three important liners are overdue at this port to-day. They include two big trans-Atlantic ships and one in the coast trade. One carries more than 300 passengers. On account of submarines operating off the coast, some anxiety is felt for their safety.

NO TRACE.

NEW YORK, June 4.— Forty naval airplanes to-day swept over the sea between Cape May and Fire Island, patrolling as far as sixty miles out, in a search for German submarine victims. There was no early trace of three boat loads of survivors reported drifting off Beach Haven, N.J., yesterday.

FATE UNKNOWN.

The fate of 350 people on board the steamer Carolina not yet known.

Naval officers say that their reports show there were five submarines operating along the Atlantic coast.

WASHINGTON, June 4. — It is thought the submarines had planned the capture of Prince Arthur. The vessel had been warned by the British Admiralty that submarines were in the North Atlantic.

SUMMARY OF WAR SITUATION ISSUED BY BRITISH MINISTRY

Allies Were Heavily Outnumbered at Several Points—Allied Command Has the Whip Hand—The Enemy Must Pay the Price

Communication Lines Intact

Ottawa, June 4.— The following is a summary of the war situation for the last week cabled to Canada by the British Ministry of Information, and issued by the Director of Public Information for publication of official news.

The chief military event of the week has been the enemy attack between Soissons and Rheims. The attack opened at dawn on Monday morning, May 27, simultaneously with an attack on the Ypres salient. In the Aisne sector the opening German assault captured the whole of the crest traversed by the Chemin des Dames and by noon the enemy centre had advanced as far as the crossing of the river Aisne at Pont Arcy. By midnight of the 27-28, the enemy had succeeded in enlarging the salient he had thus created, advancing his centre as far south as Mont Notre Dame and Fismes and further opening out his flanks.

ALLIES OUTNUMBERED HERE.

Hitherto on the west the French succeeded in holding the heights between Vauxillon and Cavignon, but were now obliged to fall back to the plateau of Laffaux. Meanwhile, the right of the allied line, which was being held by four British divisions, from Craonne to Bermicourt, had held its ground, only bending back its left flank to conform to the retirement of the French. All this time it was evident that the allied troops on this sector were heavily outnumbered by the enemy and that the withdrawal would have to continue slowly until the reserves could be brought up.

The enemy throughout the 29th pressed his advantage hard. By nightfall he had reached Dravegny as his southermost point and had extended his flanks to the outskirts of Soissons and Rheims. At the time of report the enemy advance still continues and he has reached the right bank of the Marne on a front of about ten miles.

The circumstances appear almost parallel to those on the Lys during the last week in April, where a comparatively minor operation met with unexpectedly great initial success, which was rapidly taken advantage of by the Germans.

MUST PAY PRICE.

But in the locality concerned he will have to pay a heavy price before he can achieve anything of a decisive strategical nature, and should he allow himself to become too deeply involved in so doubtfully profitable an operation he may be obliged to withdraw troops from more decisive sectors and thus dissipate in futile venture strength which he ought to economize.

In this particular theatre and action he has proceeded so far as to restore to the operations the element of movement and manoeuvre in which the allied generals are probably more than the equals of the enemy.

As has been said, the allies could afford in a military sense to give ground in the locality. Soissons has had to be evacuated but the allied line though so rapidly withdrawn, had never lost its communications, and the allied higher command, which has now the advantage, may be trusted to restore the situation without allowing the enemy any decisive strategical gain.

AND THEN HUNS LOSE.

On the morning of the 27th simultaneously with the attack on the Aisne, the enemy once more attempted to break the allied line between Locre and Voormezeele, using for the purpose greater forces than any hitherto. But within twenty four hours he was completely deprived of his slight initial successes and the operation terminated in what was unquestionably a severe defeat for the enemy. The German attempt to characterize this engagement as a "raid" is so grossly untrue as to afford strong evidence of his disappointment.

On May 26th the Italians carried out a very successful operation on the heights around the Zigolon Peak of the Tonale sector, gaining all their objectives and capturing 870 prisoners, 12 guns and other material. On the following night, by a successful coup they gained 750 metres of very valuable ground at Cape Sile, taking at the same time seven officers, and 433 men prisoners, in addition to considerable material.

Foe Has Been Checked On The Western Front

Situation is Most Hopeful Since the Beginning of the Big Battle

RESERVES ARRIVE

PARIS, June 4.—The arrival of fresh reserves on the Marne has put a check to the German advance and it is believed the enemy is now held in check. The French are full of dash and in the finest spirits. Last night's report is the most hopeful since the beginning of the big battle. Official report states the enemy gained no ground yesterday.

THE FIGHTING IRISH.

You know they will fight by the build and the breed of them;
You know by the deeds they have done in the past,
That whenever the country they love
has the need of them
They'll rush to the colours and stick to the last.
Brave men from Wexford and bold
Tipperary men
March under the flag past the cheering colleen,
Sligo and Galway and Wicklow and Kerry men
Are wearing the khaki as well as the green.

True to the cause of the innermost soul of them,
Look at the service flags when they go by,
The shining red stars representing the roll of them
Are thick as the stars in a clear winter sky.
The call has rung out and they answered it loyally,
Springing to arms to the last mother's son,
Serving their country and serving it
loyally,
And thus will they serve till the War shall be won!

Practical Daily Guide For Vacant Lot and Backyard Gardeners Enlisted in Greater Production Campaign.

POTATO BUG.

One of the worst enemies the war gardener has to contend with is the potato bug. Where potatoes are well on by this time the over-wintered female potato beetles lay clusters of bright orange-coloured eggs on the under-sides of the leaves. These soon hatch into the well known dark-coloured grubs. There are several generations of the insect during the season and both the grubs and the beetles continue to feed from spring to autumn.

The destruction of the beetles early in the season is important. As soon as they are seen to be present the vines should be sprayed either with Paris Green or arsenate of lead. At Ottawa, the following formula has given satisfaction: 8 ounces of Paris Green and 1 1-2 pounds of powdered arsenate of lead to 40 gallons of water. Both Paris Green and arsenate of lead may be used in Bordeaux mixture and if this is done the above proportions are suitable for 40 gallons of the mixture. Poisoned Bordeaux mixture such as this not only destroys potato beetles and grubs but also protects the plants from blight and rot. Applications should be made early in June, when the beetles are first seen; then early in July and again about August 1, 15 and 31.

Rupture Is Curable

Results Not Influenced by Age or Length of Time Standing, Reports Expert.

Rupture is not a tear or breach in the abdominal wall, as commonly supposed, but it is a stretching or dilation of a natural opening says J. Y. Egan, of Toronto, the noted rupture appliance specialist who will visit Peterborough, Empress Hotel, Thursday, Friday (all day and night) 2 days only, June 6-7.

The "Curatus" as now used and approved will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, affording immediate comfort, but is intended to assist nature to close the opening in the shortest time known. This appliance has received highest awards wherever shown, producing results without harmful injections or other aids. Mr. Egan has testimonials from our own section for inspection. If interested, call; he will be pleased to show you same without charge. See his advertisement.

Origin of Market Gardener.

The term market gardener was originally "marsh gardener," according to John Evelyn's English translation [illegible] of De La Quintinye's "Complete Gardener," which was dedicated by the publishers, Matthew [illegible] and James Partridge, to Lord [illegible] of Tewksbury.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts yesterday, 157 cars, with 2,311 cattle, 665 calves, 2,060 hogs, and 208 sheep and lambs.

The butcher cattle trade opened slow, the buyers and sellers apparently jockeying for position. Later the advantage seemed to be with the sellers, for as trade began to move, it was with prices steady to firm with last week's closing prices on Thursday, when the market had picked up 20c to 25c above the midweek prices. The quality of yesterday's offerings was not quite up to the average of the past few markets, and it is said practically all the choicest stable fed cattle have already been marketed.

Milch cows are easier.
Calves steady.
Sheep and lambs firm.
Hogs are weak, and while practically all of yesterday's hogs were contract at last week's closing price, a big cut is predicted for to-day, packers quoting $18.50, fed and watered.

The first step toward spreading the mysterious cult of the calory has been taken at an opportune time. Unhappy man, deprived of his daily beefsteak and forced to subsist on corn muffins in which many alien hands have experimented, may derive a modicum of comfort from the chase of the calory. Formerly sequestered in domestic science schools, or the exclusive property of those sybarites of the tenement houses, who have proverbially many advantages of which humdrum uptown knows nothing, the calorie has at last emerged into relations with the ordinary hungry, quick-luncheoning populace. On our menu cards now the calorie rides hand in hand with the cost of each dish.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

SIGHT-SEEING AGAIN

CHAPTER LXXXIII.

It was very late when we reached the hotel, and the next morning both David and I slept until nearly eleven o'clock. George had been so quiet, I had not heard him when he left.

"He does love me a little," I thought, "if he didn't, he wouldn't care whether he disturbed me or not. Always, I tried to comfort myself.

After we had breakfast, David and I started out again. We took a taxi at the hotel and just rode from Bowling Green to the Bronx. We wanted to see New York. Another time I might be more interested about the things IN the city, but this time it was the city itself which lured me.

We did go through the library, then had tea at Delmonico's. I wonder if other young people were as eager to see the places they had read about, as were David and I. David talked with the head waiter, and he told us a lot about the restaurant—it's beginning way down town, and how gradually it had moved up to its present location on 44th Street.

"Gee, Sis! it seems awful, the way we are spending money," David said, as we were once more seated in a taxi. "I wish that clock in front would stop turning around. Every time I look at it, we have had ten cents worth of ride."

"As long as George doesn't worry about the expense, I guess we needn't," I replied, a natural pride in being able to do things before one's family prompting the speech.

Money Isn't Everything.

"It IS nice to spend money and not feel you are extravagant, but I'd rather you wouldn't have so much money though, and be happy. Money isn't everything."

"But I AM happy, David."

"Sometimes—it's your own affair, Sis, but honest I'd rather you'd married one of the town boys than to have all the wonderful things you do, unless you are happy."

I began almost to be glad that David would soon leave us. He would only remain in Morelands a day or two after our return. He was too keen, too alive to all that went on, too anxious I should be happy. I used to wonder if other girls who had brothers and no sisters were so tenderly loved as I.

That night we went to the Hippodrome. George went with us, and afterward we went to the Ritz-Carleton for supper.

"New York people certainly are strong for the eats," David said to me.

"It isn't the New York people, David, as much as it is the floating population—the out of town folk, like us," George told him.

"Anyway, the grub is all right."

David sometimes acted as if he tried to shock George. He used more slang when he was around than when we were alone together. It amused me, and so I said nothing to him about it. If George couldn't understand his boyish spirit, I would not explain.

Our Last Day.

The next morning we planned to shop.

"Get whatever you like to send your folks at home," George said when he left us. "If you haven't money enough, have them sent C. O. D. to the hotel. I'll leave word at the desk to take whatever is sent."

"Money don't mean a thing to him!" David said as the door closed behind George.

"Yes it does, too, in a way, David. George expects a great deal for his money. No matter whether it is pleasure, or clothes, or business. He wants all he pays for. He seems lavish to us, because we never had much to spend at home."

What a lark David and I had, shopping for the folks at home! We bought Mother black satin for a dress; a kodak for Ralph; a tennis racket for Carl; and a pipe for Father. Then I bought a gift for each of the servants, and some gay little handkerchiefs for Evelyn.

That noon we lunched at a fascinating little tea room in the shopping district. Afterward we wandered into the public library, then took another drive through the park. We were to leave for home a little after six, so about three we went back to the hotel to pack. We were to dine on the train and George was to be up in time to pack his own things. But I was so afraid he would be late, that I packed them for him. It was lucky I did, for we only just caught our train. George had been detained and had his things not been packed, we could not possibly have gone that night.

"Thank you, Helen," he said when I told him that everything was ready. "It was thoughtful in you."

"Gee! Mum always packs Dad's duds. He wouldn't know how." David said in an amused aside.

"George is quite different from dad," I replied.

To-morrow—Home Again.

PREVENTING FUTURE WARS

Germany Must Be Beaten In Pitched Battle.

The allies are fighting, as Mr. Lloyd George has said, "for a just and lasting peace." We want a peace which will prevent a recurrence of war. Now the only nation likely to hurl for a renewal of war is Prussia, unless she is soundly beaten in the field and the Prussian eagle's claws are clipped.

Both things are possible.

It is now admitted that one of the reasons why the Germans failed on the Marne and reverted to the defensive was that they had exhausted their reserves of ammunition. Guns and shells can only be accumulated by powers which have access to unlimited stores of iron and steel. If we can debar Germany from direct control of the iron fields by means of which she wages war we shall strike the sword from her hand forever.

A league of peace nations would be good, but also let us take away the pulprit's dagger and pistol.

The iron deposits of Germany are estimated to represent a total of 3,800,000,000 tons, and of this total 2,100,000,000 tons are in Lorraine. That is the whole point. If Germany is compelled to hand back Lorraine to France, she can never again wage war on the grand scale. She is fighting with the resources of the fields she plunder. It has been said that five shells fired from German guns are made from the French metal of Lorraine. German munition-makers, in a secret document drafted in 1915, stated that "if the output of the minette ore of Lorraine were to be disturbed the war would be as good as lost."

When Bismarck and Moltke took Alsace-Lorraine from France in 1871 neither of them can have realized that Germany's capacity for waging war would ultimately depend upon the possession of the northern province. The fact was not grasped even in 1914, but to-day it is clear, and it re-enforces a thousandfold the demand for restitution which the allies base upon the ordinary principles of right and wrong.

What, it may be asked, will be the economic future of Germany if she is deprived of her principal supply of iron ore? The first answer is that she has stolen it and that she must give it back. But even Frenchmen, who are chiefly concerned, do not suggest that Germany should be deprived of a share of the Lorraine ore. She would import it for manufacturers, just as she imports ore from Sweden.

Yet this is not the whole problem. When France gets back the Lorraine iron fields she will not have the coal to work them on the present scale of output. It is therefore argued that the restitution should include the small strip of land in the Valley of the Sarre, between Saarlouis and Saarbruck, on the borders of Lorraine. The Sarre Valley was torn from France in 1815 as a sort of extra punishment for rallying behind Napoleon when he returned from Elba. It was taken because it contained important defensive points, but to-day the Sarre coal field would go far to rectify France's deficiency in coal.

This question of the Sarre is a debatable matter. If France receives back the iron fields which are hers by right, Germany can never again go to war upon the modern scale. Let us stick to that point. Get the iron first, and decided about the coal afterward.

But it is perfectly certain that Germany will not yield up a foot of the occupied territories, still less Alsace-Lorraine, until she has been finally beaten in battle. The way to a lasting peace lies through victory in the field. Hearken to the words of M. Pichon: "The essential thing for us is to begin by achieving victory."—Lovat Fraser in London Daily Mail.

CHILDREN MUST BE PROTECTED

The children must be safeguarded, for, if they do survive the frequent coughs and colds, it is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or consumption. Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to taste. So much so that children delight to take it on this account, as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

Sense of Fitness.

Having just learned over the phone that he could not get an ounce of coal, Bangs, the terrible tempered, went into the parlor uttering the most awful imprecations.

"William," exclaimed his wife, "if you must swear, for mercy don't do it standing on the prayer rug."—Boston Transcript.

Veritable Inferno When Oil Fields Were Destroyed—Russian Soldiers Pillage While Their Commander Is Occupied Elsewhere.

I had not thought that we could possibly enter into a new phase of horror, but it was born on Boxing day, when the first whispers reached us of the destruction of the oil fields. Frankly, we had, each and every one of us, completely forgotten the oil! A man, a friend of ours, drove up in a motor, streaked with grime, weary and dead to the world. After lunch he started to tell his story, fortified by a big cigar.

He had been one of a party who went out alone to the petrol city to destroy. No one would give them help, and he told us wonderful accounts of the scenes which he had witnessed. The first step had been to capture every single man and boy who knew anything about the petrol plans and deport them bodily to Moldavia, so that the Germans should find no skilled workmen to utilize to their own profit. And then a few pairs of hands sufficed to crumble and lay in ashes what many hundreds of brains had worked to build. First they broke up all the machinery—the how of the happening is immaterial; the most primitive and brutal weapons served them best. Then they poured benzine from the roofs of factories down their walls and set them alight, they dug trenches round the vats and started blazing channels of flame toward the reservoirs. These blew up each in turn, and soot and flames made of what had been sunlight an eternal night where the fire king went mad. Town by town saw the destroyers come to let hell loose, and factory after factory writhed in a death agony of twisted iron to send jets of poison fumes after the four small flying motor cars. The devastation left by a retreating army lay before them, turmoil of an enemy drunk with success stirred in the windgusts that fed the flames from the south. One can hardly credit the fact that those few little men have so effectually accomplished what they set out to do that it will be six months before the Germans can squeeze a drop of petrol from the saturated earth.

In our English hospital there is a man who has had his foot amputated. He lay pinned under a burning car. A hatchet was brought by a doctor to a French officer standing near, and the doctor said: "Do it if you can; I have no instruments and feel paralyzed." The Frenchman did the thing in the whole horror of the sunlight, whilst the Russian privates who were his charges took advantage of the opportunity and pillaged private passenger luggage on the train.—Lady Kennard in The North American Review.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kindeys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

When the Germans Came.

"When the Huns invaded the little town of Aerschot in Belgium, the wife of the Burgomaster sought refuge in the cellar with her son," says Helen Barrett Rublee in the Red Cross Magazine.

"After a short time, they heard footsteps overhead and her son said to her, 'Mother, they are hunting for us, let us go up—we have done nothing.' They mounted to the dining room, and almost immediately the same aide de camp appeared. 'Your son,' he said to her, 'we want your son.' He took her son, and as the poor child could only walk on the point of his toe, because of a wound from a stray bullet in his leg, the officer helped him along with kicks in the back. She watched him half way down the long dining room, the little boy of fifteen still limping from his wound, kicked along by the big German officer, and then she closed her eyes and turned away. But not yet was the aide de camp satisfied; for a little later, he came back again for her, and made her accompany him all through the house, from the cellar to the attic, all the time pointing his pistol at her. Her little daughter, noticing this, placed herself between her mother and the German. But even this did not make him realize his brutality."

A Condition.

Customer—I want to make a flag for a home regiment. Now, will these colors run?

Salesman—Madam, that will depend entirely on the regiment's line of action.

Making Shrapnel.

New inventions have been made by Americans, and American machine tools for shell making have been sent to Europe and are used in the factories there. The number of shells of shrapnel made in this country is almost beyond computation. Long before we entered the war our different factories were turning out hundreds of thousands of shrapnel a week, and it was due to this demand for munitions that enabled us to turn out the big product we are now making. This is so not only of shrapnel, but of powder and explosives of all kinds. Before the war one company was making about 400,000 pounds of military powders per annum, another was turning out 800 12-inch shells per day, and a third making 600,000 loaded time fuses a month. The orders of the allies ran into many hundreds of millions of dollars and it is said that almost $2,000,000,000 worth of war supplies were contracted for by J. P. Morgan & Co. alone.

Tragedy of French Trees.

Broken homes, ruined factories, shattered churches, violated graves, it had seemed to me we had rung all the changes on the destruction of war. But there remained one—the tragedy of the trees. You can rebuild houses, churches, towns even—for that takes only money. But you can't rebuild orchards of fruit trees and avenues of great shade trees—for that takes time. We were seeing them everywhere now—orchards with trees that were but faded, shriveled bunches of brown leaves lying on their sides; orchards, where these had been cleared away, that showed nothing but white-topped stumps. They say that, when the warm spring came, some of those orchard trees, lying on their sides but not wholly severed, leafed gently and then—just before they died—bloomed once again for France.—Inez Haynes Irwin in McClure's Magazine.

Machine-Gun Forts.

It used to be thought that the Belgian forts of armored steel and concrete, almost completely buried in the ground, would hold out against any artillery. But when the Germans brought up their great howitzers and hurled undreamed of quantities of high explosives on these forts, they broke and crumbled to pieces. Then it was predicted that the day of the fort was over. But the machine-gun has developed a new type of warfare. Instead of great forts mounting huge guns, we now have little machine-gun forts, and they are far more troublesome than the big fellows. To the Germans belongs the credit for this type of fort, which consists of a small concrete structure, hidden from view as far as possible, but commanding some important part of the front. "Pill-boxes," the British call them, because the first ones they ran across were round in shape and something like a pill-box in appearance. These pill-boxes are just large enough to house a few men and a couple of machine guns. Concealment is of the utmost importance; their safety depends upon it. Airplanes are particularly feared, because a machine-gun emplacement is recognized to be so important that a whole battery of artillery would be turned upon a suspected pill-box. It is claimed that some pill-boxes are built with turrets that rise out of the ground. Normally they are completely buried and covered with turf so that no one would suspect their existence. During the bombardment, preceding a charge they would remain hidden, and only a chance shot could put them out of business. When the charge took place the elevating mechanism would be operated, and out of the ground would rise the minature fort ready to halt the advancing soldiers.—A. Russell Bond, in St. Nicholas.

The Makers.

Booth Tarkington, the novelist, met in a New York book store a young woman who was buying books to send to the soldiers.

"I think I ought to send them serious, heavy books—history and so on—don't you?" she doubtfully inquired.

"Good gracious, no!" said Mr. Tarkington. "Send them novels, rousing novels, and nothing else. History! What do they want with history? Why, they're making it!"

In a Nutshell.

Dr. Henry Miller Turner, professor of chemistry at Takio University, was lecturing on Germany.

"The food substitutes that German chemistry has devised," he said, "are staggering. Coffee from acorns, bread from wood, soup from seaweed, fodder from bodies—Germany has devised no less than 8,000 food substitutes."

Dr. Turner smiled.

"This proves clearly to us," he said, "that all's fare in war."

The Italian Army.

In Italy only one-third of the army is being maintained on the battle lines, the official explanation being that there is not sufficient food. The strong Austrian army facing the Italians is said to have received large supplies from Russia.

Ladies! Why Keep Corns?

Lift a corn or callus right off without one bit of pain.

Yes! You truly can lift off every hard corn, soft corn or corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses on bottom of feet, without one bit of pain.

A genius in Cincinnati discovered freezone. It is an ether compound and tiny bottles of this magic fluid can now be had at any drug store for a few cents.

Apply several drops of this freezone upon a tender, aching corn or a callus. Instantly all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you lift it off with the fingers. You feel no pain while applying Freezone or afterwards.

Just think! No more corns or calluses to torture you and they go without causing one twinge of pain or soreness. Keep a tiny bottle on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Benevolent Burglar

By Ruth Alden Hayes

Noiselessly the man with a bent wire opened the gate of a rear court, cautiously he crossed the stone-paved yard. He glanced up at the handsome mansion looming before him. It was dark and deserted looking. The intruder fumbled for a tool in his pocket, pushed back a door and was within the house.

Burglar Bill Dorsey, if you please—reformed. It did not look that way, but, while the old crafty tricks were brought into force and professional skill exerted to the utmost, he was innocent as a child as to the notion and purpose in view in thus breaking into the house of rich Seth Payne.

Bill groped his way without a misstep, down a corridor and up a flight of stairs, for he had pursued that course only a week agone—and had got away with the swag! In his pocket at the present moment lay that same plunder, a diamond-jeweled wrist watch, a pearl necklace, two valuable rings. He could see a light coming through a keyhole.

"Thunder!" Bill expressed voicelessly. Then he took another peep. He could have guffawed, for the man within his view, kneeling in front of a safe, had on the floor beside him a hammer, a chisel and a screw driver. Bill could not refrain a chuckle at the sight of this kit.

"A rival," he muttered—"but an amateur. Being sincerely reformed, it is my duty to lead this novice out of the downward path. Hello, pal!"

With the hearty salutation, Bill pressed open the door and stepped into the room. The other, a young, handsome man of perhaps twenty-five, made a dive for a coat pocket. Bill put up the hand of vigorous remonstrance.

"Don't draw a gun, pardner," he submitted, "I'm a yegg, too."

"But I am not," declared the other.

"What are you doing here, then?" interrogated Bill pointedly.

"I am trying to get into that safe."

"I see—but you won't, with those carpenter's tools."

"Can you?" pressed the other.

"Rather," asserted Bill promptly. "That's nothing but a cheap old box. I can open it on the combination alone."

"Do it and I will pay you any price you ask," urged the young man.

"Do you belong here?" asked Bill.

"Not at all."

"Broke in, like myself?"

"Yes—there was an open window, so you might say that."

"Sorry," said Bill, shaking his head slowly, "but, as I told you, I've reformed. I've promised Kate, the sweetest, girl in the world, to never turn a trick again and I mean to keep my promise."

"Then what are you doing here now?" amazedly inquired the other, who was Arthur Ridgely, and a respectable member of society, and an honest man, and free from guile as a child, but he did not tell Bill this—yet.

"Well," exclaimed Bill bluntly, "I came here to return what I took away a week ago," and he exhibited the packet. "It was my last raid. Kate said she'd never marry me unless I put it back where I found it, we'll say as evidence of my good faith in reforming."

"I see, I see," murmured young Ridgely slowly, as if struck by the oddity of the situation. "You are a good man and I see the hand of destiny in my thus meeting you. I came here like a thief in the night, I made myself amenable to the penalty for housebreaking, but influenced by a pure and holy motive."

"I hope so," said Bill dubiously. "Can you prove it?"

"Yes, I can. If you will open that safe, in the left-hand pigeonhole of the upper row you will find a green envelope. It is of no value, but immensely harmful to innocent, suffering victims. To get that paper means the freedom, perhaps the life of a reputable citizen, the happiness of an innocent, beautiful girl just budding into womanhood. Man, glorify the reformation you boast of, by doing a deed that will bring you blessings your whole life through!"

"Why, you talk like a story book," said Bill. "Say, I'm interested. A regular romance."

"And a tragedy—unless I get that paper."

"All right," nodded Bill definitely, after a moment of thought. "I'll help you out. Here's the bargain. I open that safe. I take out a green envelope, nothing more. You are not to touch a single thing. We leave here and you convince me that you need that envelope for a good purpose before I part with it."

"Agreed—oh, gladly! gladly!" spoke the young man with eagerness.

"Stand aside and keep quiet," and Bill got on his knees before the safe. The other watched him with mingled anxiety and admiration. Bill, expert that he was, focused his acute senses of touch and hearing upon the combination disk. Click!—the tumblers grated, the steel door moved. Bill pulled it open. There was gold, bank notes, bulky securities in view, but both passed them by as dross. Bill located the pigeon hole indicated and pulled it open.

"Is that it?" he questioned, drawing out a green envelope.

"Yes, it must be," said Arthur Ridgely.

"Gather up your truck, then, and let us get out of here while the getting is good," observed Bill tersely. He closed and relocked the safe. He placed the restored fruits of his former visit in the cabinet where he had originally found them. Bill led his companion from the place and left no traces of the double nightly visitation behind them.

"Now, then, for a confab," he observed, as they finally reached the street.

"Where shall we go?"

"Oh, some quiet restaurant," said Bill, "anywhere except a drinking joint. Those are the traps that led me to become what I was. Now, then, let's have the dope," he added ten minutes later, as he and the strange new friend he had made were seated in a secluded corner of an eating room.

"I am Arthur Ridgely," spoke Bill's companion promptly, "reasonably well off and engaged to marry a beautiful young lady. The man whose house we visited tonight admired her, demanded her hand in marriage. Her father was an old business associate. The other held a great power over the father of—oh, I will speak her name, Angela. The possession of a document in that green envelope enabled its holder to disgrace, perhaps imprison Angela's father. To evade the same, broken heartedly she turned me adrift, sacrificing herself to save her father."

"The father had gone wrong, eh?" submitted Bill dubiously.

"Not in a criminal sense. In order that a large but failing business might be reorganized, he took upon himself the risk of an irregularity. He saved the business and no real wrong was done. That was years ago. I learned the truth from his lawyer, who has visited the wretch who held the document, saw it, noticed where he put it in the safe. Now his fangs are drawn, and oh! the relief, the happiness for those I love."

"Take it," said Bill impulsively, and handed the green envelope to Arthur Ridgely.

"I want your address," said the latter, fairly trembling with emotion.

"My city one changes tomorrow, for I am going to get married and leave for a pretty little place in the country," and Bill gave the details as to name and location.

One month later Bill was whistling a cheery tune in the rear yard of his new home, and his happy-faced wife was singing as she bent over the washtub under a flowering cherry tree. Abruptly an automobile turned from the road, halted and Arthur Ridgely sprang out.

"Dear friend!" cried the exuberant young man, seizing Bill's hand in a fervor of joy. "We haven't forgotten you."

"My wife," spoke Bill proudly, nodding to the smiling lady at the clothesline.

"Two brides! Angela," called Ridgely, and she alighted from the machine.

"Good friend, indeed!" she cried to Bill. "You darling!" she directed at Mrs. Dorsey, as she threw her arms around her neck and kissed her.

"You look very happy here, Mr. Dorsey," observed Ridgely.

"Happy!" cried his buxom wife. "He's whistling at his work all day long and I have to sing to keep from crying for joy."

"It's just paradise," declared Bill. "We've got a lease on the little place for ten dollars a month and a promise of the use of five acres adjoining."

"You needn't pay any more rent," said Ridgely, and he extended a folded document.

"What's that?" questioned Bill.

"It's a deed to the house and lot and the five acres, free and clear—a belated wedding present, Angela's and mine," was Arthur Ridgely's reply.

Had Headaches Was Always Tired

Sleep or Rest Was Impossible, For Nervous System Was Greatly Exhausted and Irritated

JORDAN, Ont., May 20.—As the result of Mrs. Thwaites' happy experience with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, many people in this district have put this great food cure to the test and proven its exceptional restorative powers.

This was an extreme case of nervous exhaustion and the cure effected was so thorough and radical that there could be no doubt of the value of this treatment. This is how Mrs. Thwaites describes her cure, and her statement is certified to by her pastor.

Mrs. Stephen G. Thwaites, Box 205, Jordan, Ont., writes: "For about a year I was troubled with nervousness, and took doctors' medicine, but it did not seem to relieve me. I could not sleep nor content myself to do anything. I had severe headaches, was tired all the time, and afraid to stay alone. I also tried several nerve medicines until almost discouraged. At last I discovered Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and found relief in this. I had only taken one box when I began to feel better. I continued using this treatment until my nerves were restored to perfect health. I think the Nerve Food splendid for nervous troubles of any kind, and cannot recommend it too highly."

Rev. S. F. Coffman, Vineland, Ont., states: "This is to certify that I know Mrs. Thwaites, and her statements are correct."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

Few People Know This

Large doses of pills for the liver are not as efficient as small doses.

The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

His Share of Work.

A group of people who were touring Alaska one summer were disgusted at the laziness of the buck Indians they saw in the villages and along the trail. One day when they were taking a side trip they came upon a couple of Indians who were evidently packing into the mountains to stay a while. The squaw was staggering under a tremendous burden. She lugged all of the bedding and provisions and a pappoose for good measure. The old buck was slumping along lazily ahead of her, smoking his pipe and looking down at the trail. One member of the tourist party hailed the Indians, and when they stopped he inquired, somewhat out of patience: "See here, buck, how comes it that Nikkawana is carrying all of the baggage and you are slouching along, enjoying your pipe? Why don't you take at least half of the load off your squaw, you big, lazy Indian?" The buck stood silent as a sphinx for a few moments, then he grunted to himself and pointing his index finger to his forehead, he exclaimed in deep guttural tones: "Huh, me all time think!"

"Take My Doll to Freedom."

Lieut. Jack O'Brien, of the French Legion, who is in Canada doing recruiting work, brings home a pitiful relic of Hun barbarism from the war. It is a doll which a little French girl handed to him in France one day as the Germans were sweeping down upon the village in which she lived.

"I want you to take Dollie to freedom," said the little child, "for I don't want the Germans to get it."

Later, when he revisited the little French village he found a scene of desolation and ruin. The dead bodies of men, women and children, horribly mutilated, lay about, and among them O'Brien found the remains of the little girl.

Some time later O'Brien was given British and French honors for a gallant act in saving the day when a body of Russians had sold themselves to the enemy and were preparing to turn their machine guns against the French. O'Brien, at the head of a body of picked men, slashed his way to the Russians and taking the guns turned them upon the traitors themselves.

Scientific Arabians.

The world is indebted to the Arabians for a greater number of sciences than to-day is generally admitted. The Arabs were in some sort the discoverers of botany and chemistry. Agriculture was studied by them with a knowledge of climate, soil and the growth of plants. From the eighth to the eleventh century the Arabs established medical schools in the principal cities of their dominions and published valuable works on medical subjects.

The Latter-Day Deity.

The ancients gave worship to Deity Venus
Because of her wonderous beauty and form,
But knew they but one of my loved one's great beauty
Then Venus deserted had been and forlorn.

The ancients gave o'ring to Goddess Minerva
When wisdom and knowledge and learning they sought,
But knew they but one of my loved one's great talent,
Minerva then by them a schoolgirl were thought.

And so if in Rome or in Hellas my loved one
Had lived long ago during history's mists
The Romans and Greeks had forsaken their worships
In that early day to be monotheists!
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Can't Beat the Kiddies.

Children are the original keepers of the shrine of humor, says a writer in the Washington Star.

I have an intellectual friend, who has analyzed h-u-m-o-r from h to r, and knows more about it than real philosophers. He says humor is based on cruelty, or incongruous happenings and a lack of reason.

The reason children are always saying funny things is because they are often cruel and do not reason, he says.

I don't believe all humor is summed up so, but certainly the following scrap of conversation overheard the other day would tend to bear out his statements:

Two small girls were "playing house" in an apartment house hall.

"Good morning, Mrs. Jones. I just came over to see you," said Mrs. Smith (seven years old).

"Oh, I'm so glad to see you," replied Mrs. Jones (eight years old). "How are you?"

"Oh, Mrs. Jones, I'm in such trouble," sighed Mrs. Smith. "Mr. Smith just died."

"That's too bad," commiserated Mrs. Jones. "Poor Mrs. Smith!"

"But the funeral isn't until three o'clock," said poor Mrs. Smith, "so we've plenty of time to go to the movie show."

When He Quit.

A woman having occasion to go to a small cleaning and dyeing establishment, where she had not been for some months, was surprised to find the store occupied by an entirely different line of business. Going inside, she asked the new shopkeeper why Schmidt had moved away and where he could be found. "Schmidt?" he replied. "Oh, he died and went out of business two months ago."

Procrastination.

A gentleman who had been in Chicago only three days, but who had been paying attention to a prominent Chicago belle, wanted to propose, but was afraid he would be thought too hasty. He delicately broached the subject as follows:

"If I were to speak to you of marriage, after having only made your acquaintance three days ago, what would you say to it?"

"Well, I should say never put off till tomorrow that which you should have done the day before yesterday."—Life.

Russian Airmen In Canada.

Five Russian aviators, officers of the Royal Flying Corps, arrived in Canada recently on a trans-Pacific liner to offer their services to the British Royal Flying Corps. They have served on the Austrian and Austrian and Roumanian fronts, and all have been decorated for bravery. Col. Dukian, who heads the party, has been wounded three times. When Russia lapsed into anarchy, the aviators said, they resolved to come to Canada. They practically fought their way out of the country, they asserted, and, after weeks of hardships, reached Japan, where British consular officers arranged their passage overseas. In addition to Col. Dukian, the party is composed of Capt. Rozmahof and Lieuts. Katarsiski, Petrenki and Astahof.

THERE IS NOTHING FOR THE LIVER SO GOOD AS MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

They will regulate the flow of bile to act properly on the bowels and will tone, renovate, and purify the liver, removing every result of liver trouble from the temporary, but disagreeable bilious and sick headaches, to the severest forms of liver complaint.

They are small and easy-acting, do not gripe, sicken or weaken like the old-fashioned, nauseating, griping purgatives.

Mrs. A. Kirk, 53 Yorkville Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have tried and tested Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and have received good results, for which I am very thankful. I took them for liver trouble. I came out of the hospital on May 3rd, last, after having had a serious operation which might have been saved had I taken your remedy sooner. I have given some to my sister for biliousness and sick headache, and she has found great relief. A lady who lives in my house has started to take them. I will do my best to recommend them to all my friends."

30 Miles Per Gallon! How Near do You Come to That?

"More Miles Per Gallon"

"More Miles on Tires"

"Claims are all right—but only proofs count."

That was the caption to a recent Maxwell advertisement.

You've read it of course. If you didn't, you've missed something.

In that advertisement we stated no claims were made for Maxwell motor cars that had not been proven.

For example, that 44 days and nights non-stop test during which a standard stock model Maxwell covered 22,022 miles at an average speed of 25 miles an hour, was made under supervision of the A. A. A. officials—every minute of the time.

That test made the Maxwell the long distance champion of the world.

It proved the reliability of this car.

Then we set out to prove that this Maxwell gives a greater mileage per gallon of gasoline than any other car.

First we asked 1000 Maxwell dealers to make, all on a certain day, a "gasoline economy" run. They did, and the average was 27.15 miles per gallon.

"Good!" you say.

Yes—but not for a Maxwell. Big as the mileage was, we knew it wasn't what an average Maxwell ought to do.

General Manager Flanders had a hunch that one thousand Maxwell owners would beat that record to a frazzle.

You see, he figured it this way—and events proved he was right:

The average dealer or garage man is a "bug" on carburetor adjustment. He thinks he is an expert. If you ask him, he will admit that he knows more about how to make a carburetor and how to adjust one than do all the Maxwell engineers!

He'll admit that—reluctantly and bashfully 'tis true—but if you are adroit you can extract the confession from him.

So Mr. Flanders opined that these experts had very carefully adjusted their carburetors—and failed to obtain the results they should.

And he figured that owners wouldn't do that—they would just drive their Maxwells as they came from the factory.

And, let us say here, just as it comes from the factory, a Maxwell is pretty nearly a perfect automobile.

So we offered $50,000 in Liberty Bonds, to be divided among Maxwell owners, for a gasoline economy test.

We hoped one thousand would enter—more than three thousand did.

Such is the enthusiasm of Maxwell owners!

The conditions were that only owners or members of their own families could drive, and the car must be their own.

The observers must be local newspaper men, or owners of other makes of cars. Get the point?

Of course you do—owners of other makes would naturally be critical and just a trifle skeptical.

But we had another object in this—we knew that every Maxwell would carry three prospective buyers—if the Maxwell made good under their own supervision. And we knew it would!

A little red tank—holding a fraction of a gill less than one gallon—was furnished each contestant.

Attached to the dash, that tank attracted a lot of attention.

"But why the fraction less?" you ask.

To compensate for the amount of gasoline held in the tube running from tank to carburetor.

Each owner drove till his tank was empty—then he had to stop.

And those three thousand Maxwell owner-drivers, over all kinds of roads, in all climates, in every state, averaged 29.4 miles per gallon of gasoline. Every record was attested under oath too.

One owner actually made 51 miles on his gallon.

It was almost incredible but a careful checking of the route, measurement of the tank and statement under oath of the three observers proved he had actually done it.

The 500 highest obtained mileages ranging from 35 to 51 miles

Our plan of inviting owners of other makes of cars to act as observers and checkers, worked out fine—thousands of sales can be traced directly to that.

In at least one case, all three observers sold their other cars and bought Maxwells within a month!

Our dealers had a lot of fun too with those little red tanks afterwards.

Here's a typical case.

Maxwell owner enters. In tones of undisguised skepticism says, "I see some owners average 29.4 miles on a gallon of gasoline. Got any cars like that to sell?—I'd like to buy one."

"Why, you have one already—your own Maxwell will do as well or better."

"You'll have to show me," he replies. "Why, I don't average eighteen miles per gallon."

"I'll show you," laughs the dealer.

In a few minutes a little red tank is attached to that Maxwell.

Owner himself measures the gasoline and pours it in, and the owner drives.

And in thousands of such cases no owner got less than 26 miles out of his gallon.

From that time on, you may believe he was a Maxwell booster, right.

Many Maxwell dealers still do—and all should—keep that little red tank on demonstrating cars, to prove our claims of gasoline economy. It is an unanswerable argument—positive proof.

And we challenge any other car to prove its claims in the same way.

Sensational stunts can be performed with one selected motor, in the hands of experts and in ideal conditions.

Almost any motor car will perform creditably then.

But for three thousand cars of one make and of all ages—1915, 16 and 17 models—each driven by its own owner; each over a different route; in all parts of the country and on the same day, so that all kinds of weather from tropical to arctic were encountered;—

To average 29.4 miles per gallon under such conditions—that car must be a Maxwell.

These tests having been made by Maxwell owners, the majority of whom reside in the United States, the standard U. S. gallon was adopted as the basis.

MACHINES FOR MILKING

Farmers Will Find That They Are Very Profitable.

TO MEET LABOR SHORTAGE

How to Prevent Bees Swarming—Hints for the Gardener and Dairyman In June—Methods by Which to Destroy Troublesome Weeds.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE statement that the milking machine has now become a practical proposition can now be made with considerable confidence. Practically all the standard makes of machines sold in this province, the cheaper ones as well as the more expensive, are giving good satisfaction in the hands of a great many dairymen. But all machines are somewhat complicated, and somewhat delicate of adjustment, so that to be successful the operator must exercise some mechanical ability, and strict care and attention to the needs of individual cows. Without these the milking machine has always proved a failure. It can hardly be said that the machine will get as much milk from the cows as good hand milking, but properly handled, it will give better results than the average hand-milking, and there is no doubt of its being a great economiser of labor and time. The machine has its place on the farms of dairymen who milk more than ten cows, it being doubtful economy to invest so much money for a smaller herd. It may also be doubtful economy to instal the machine in a herd of pure breds where much official test work, involving milking three or more times per day, is being done.—A. Letich, B.S.A., Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

To Prevent Bees Swarming.

June is the swarming month and time of supering for the main honey flow which begins between the 10th and the 20th of the month, depending on the season and the latitude. Be sure to give supers enough to avoid any crowding which may cause the bees to become discouraged, quit work and swarm excessively. It should be the beekeeper's aim to prevent swarming as much as possible. This is done by keeping young queens, giving plenty of room and a systematic examination of brood-chambers to detect colonies which are preparing to swarm. When queen cells are found far advanced they should all be destroyed and the queen herself removed. After the colony has been queenless one week the combs should again be examined and all cells except one removed. This one will provide them with a queen and if only one is left they will not swarm again. Where an improvement of stock is desired the new queen may be given instead of leaving one queen cell.

Natural swarms should be hived on the old stand after removing the parent colony to one side. The swarms should be given the supers from the old colony. New swarms work with great vigor because they have no brood to care for during the first week. Colonies held together without swarming gather more honey than those which swarm. It is the beekeepers patriotic duty to reduce the cost of honey production and thus increase the quantity he is called to produce as greatly as possible. They also cause the beekeeper less trouble at unexpected times. This may be done more by swarm prevention than in any other way. Bulletin 233 (Ontario Department of Agriculture) takes this matter up thoroughly and should be carefully studied by all beekeepers. — Provincial Apiarist, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Hints For the Gardener.

Thorough cultivation of the soil must be practised in the garden. The common hoe, wheel hoe and the garden cultivator should be kept going immediately after each rain. The seed sown in the field should be thinned carefully, giving each plant the amount of space required for good growth. Use poison bran mash to kill the cut worm, which will be active at this season. The asparagus bed should have the second application of 100 lbs. per acre of nitrate of soda. All stocks should be carefully cut even if they cannot be used. Early celery, tomatoes and other tender plants should be set out the first of this month, while citrons, cucumbers, pumpkins and melons should be planted. A small amount of nitrate of soda around celery and tomato plants four or five days after setting out, will aid in their growth. The latter part of this month and the beginning of next, late celery, cabbage, cauliflower and kale are transplanted into the field. Sowing of corn and beans should be made every week during this month.

To Eradicate Bad Weeds.

If troubled with mustard in grain crops, spray with the 20 p.c. solution of iron sulphate, (2 lbs. of iron sulphate to each gallon of water). If such spraying is to be effective it must be done early just when the first mustard plants in the field are coming into flower.

Good cultivation followed by rape sown about the middle of June in drills about 26 inches apart at the rate of 1½ pounds per acre, provides a means of eradicating perennial sow thistle and twitch grass.

Dairy Pointers for June.

Cows in clover or good June-grass pasture require very little attention. This is the ideal month for dairy operations. If there are any hot days, be careful to cool both milk and cream, by setting in ice water, or cold well water. Sour milk and cream are too frequently sent to the factory. Don't forget to wash the cream separator and strainer daily, or after each time of using.

The Opening.

The editor of this particular paper was busy. His temper is one of the best, but he did not like the look of the seedy individual with the hair who had invaded his sanctum unannounced.

"Well?" the editor snapped.

"I should like to know," began the seedy one, with dignity, "if there is an opening here?"

"There is," interrupted the editor grimly. "An ingenious carpenter, foreseeing your visit, has provided an excellent opening. You will find it over there. Turn the knob to the right and mind you don't fall over the mat as you go out."—London Weekly Telegraph.

French Have Stopped German Drive Towards Paris

Successful Greek Attack On The Macedonian Front

More Boats Reported Missing In Submarine Zone

FRENCH HAVE STOPPED GERMAN DRIVE TOWARD PARIS AFTER AN OFFENSIVE LASTING EIGHT DAYS

The Enemy Movement is Now Breaking Into a Series of Minor Battles For Possession of Strategic Points.

THE OFFICAL REPORTS

Canadian Press:

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, June 4.—We captured prisoners last night in a successful raid west of Merville. Hostile attack upon one of our new posts west of Vieur Berquin was repulsed and prisoners remained in our hands. The German artillery developed considerable activity early this morning between Albert and Serre on the front north of Amiens.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, June 4.—Between the Oise and the Aisne the Germans last night were prevented from making any progress, says to-day's official statement. The battle continues with the greatest violence between the Aisne and Ourcq. The Germans captured Perdant. Further south the French lost a little ground.

The Germans have made a further advance in Ourcq Valley, near Silley La Poterie. On the Marne front German troops which forced a passage of the river, were driven back again by French and American troops.

THE STATEMENT FOLLOWS.

Between the Oise and the Aisne the Germans held in check by the energetic resistance of French troops, are not able to make any progress. Between the Oise and the Ourcq the battle was continued during the night with intense violence. Beginning at 7 p.m. violent attacks took place in the region of Pernant, Saconin and Missy to Tropanes Wood. Pernant fell into the hands of the enemy after stubborn defense which cost the assailants heavy losses. Further south the French yielded a little ground. West of Saconin and Missy to Favorelles Wood, and also at Troenes, a German attack was held in check by the French.

HEAVY FIGHTING.

The fighting was no less spirited in the region south of Ourcq. The Germans heavily supported by artillery directed their efforts against Mosley, Neuilly La Poterie, Torcy and Bourresches, and a counter attack enabled the French to recapture Mosley. Neuilly La Poterie was the scene of violent combats. The village passed from hand to hand, finally remaining in possession of the Germans. This village is seven and a half miles northwest of Chateau Thierry. American troops checked the German advanced forces which were seeking to penetrate Neilly Wood and by magnificent counter attack hurled back the Germans north of this wood. Further south the Germans were not able to make any gains. On the Marne front an enemy battalion which had crept across to the left bank of the river above Javigonne, was counter-attacked by French and American troops and hurled back to the other bank after having suffered heavy losses. A foot bridge which the enemy used, was destroyed and 100 prisoners remained in our hands. Elsewhere on the front there is no change.

PARIS, June 4.— The French have stopped the German drive towards Paris, it now may safely be said. It lasted just eight days.

The enemy movement is now splitting up into a series of battles for possession, in which the French have taken advantage of terrain.

The region of Ourcq, where the enemy is making his greatest effort, forms roughly an arena in which he is marching. On the northern side of the arena, dominating is the forest of Villers-Cotterets, and on the south there are hills ranging towards the Marne around Cocherel. Both of these hill positions are held by the French. On the west the enemy is confronted by obstacles formed by the Rivers

CANADIAN WOUNDED SOLDIERS REACHED CANADA THIS MORNING.

Canadian Press:

CANADIAN ATLANTIC PORT, June 4.—Twelve officers and 775 non-commissioned officers and men of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces landed here this morning from a steamer which docked yesterday. A number of them were badly wounded, including several cot cases. All are in various stages of convalescence from wounds or sickness. They heard of the German submarines operating around the coast, but were not attacked. They will leave for discharge depots in their various districts by special train to-morrow.

Between Five And Six Hundred Persons Are Unaccounted For As Result Of Submarines

German U Boats Have Accounted For at Least Ten Vessels Off the American Coast—No New Victims Reported—Doubt as to Number of Submarines in Action

OFFICIAL REPORTS LACK DETAILS

Canadian Press:

NEW YORK, June 4.—Positive confirmation of the loss of the liner Carolina, destroyed by a German submarine off the Jersey coast, came to-day, when nineteen survivors were picked up.

This leaves about 311 of her passengers and crew unaccounted for. The City of Columbus, for which fears were felt, is safe at Vineyard Haven, Mass.

The boat load of 19 survivors from the Carolina, including two women, was picked up this morning by the British steamer Appleby. They were taken to Lewes, Delaware. Another lifeboat, empty, was found floating near where the ship sank.

The City of Columbus brought in the crew of the schooner Joseph M. Haskell.

There were no new reports of submarine attacks up to 11.30 a.m. to-day, and no more signs of U boats on the coast had been reported.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Between five hundred and six hundred people were missing at sea to-day as a result of the German submarine warfare, brought home to American shores. The passengers and crews of two steamers and two schooners were unaccounted for. Their fate is unknown.

The City of Columbus of New Haven, New Hampshire, which it was feared had been sunk by a German submarine, is safe in an Atlantic port.

The German U boats, in their campaign off the Atlantic coast, have accounted for ten vessels, mostly small schooners and ships, since May 25, according to this morning's summary. There are yet no official reports of the loss, although part of the crews of several sailing vessels and passengers and crews of a steamer are missing. When the submarines began to shell the Carolina her 220 passengers and 103 members of her crew took to boats and it is believed they are trying to reach the New Jersey coast. It is not clear how many submarines have been in action. Most of the vessels were attacked by one boat. One captain reports seeing two. Naval officials at Norfolk have received reports indicating five submarines off the coast.

NO NEW REPORTS.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, June 4.— No new reports of sinkings or attacks by the German U boats off the American coast have been reported up to mid-forenoon to-day. Secretary of the Navy Daniels stated.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, June 4.—The Associated Press summary this afternoon says:

The Germans have evidently succeeded in bringing up considerably more of their artillery and are attacking in force along virtually the whole front from Oise to the Marne. Desperate fighting developed at many points on this front last night which resulted in the enemy making advances at few points in the region southwest of Soissons, where he is trying to batter in the tip of the Allied salient. The village of Pernant was lost by the French in this area, and they had to give little ground further south. The German attack was held elsewhere.

Submarine Blockade

Germans Established New Zone in American Waters—Submarines Carry Six Months' Supplies

THE CREWS

(Special to The Examiner.)

NEW YORK, June 4.—Germany has established a permanent submarine blockade of the American coast, and within a short time a fleet of U-boats capable of operating against every important Atlantic port will be here, according to the mate of submarine U-151.

The mate, who served five years as boatswain in the United States navy, made this statement to Enosh Rocker, boatswain of the schooner Edna. After the Edna was destroyed, Rocker and others of the crew were imprisoned in the submarine more than a week.

This German mate, who refused to tell his name, told Rocker that men for the submarine blockade of the United States coast are being drafted from among the sailors formerly in the merchant marine, familiar with American ports.

The Send-Off.

The present German blockading fleet left Kiel several weeks ago, getting a tremendous send-off. Photographs of this clebration were displayed.

The submarines now on patrol carry six-months' supplies, but expect to stay here one year by taking provisions and fuel from ships which are sunk.

The voyage from Germany to this country was made by way of the West Indies, within sight of the Bahamas (near where the collier Cyclops mysteriously disappeared) and up the coast near Cape Hatteras. U-boats in this patrol are 324 feet long and carry five-inch guns.

(This is a larger type of German submarine than any known in the navy list and its number, 151, indicates it was recently built, as U-100 is the highest listed).

The submarines at present off this coast are only an advance guard.

Each has a crew of 35 men, exclusive of officers.

Traded Records.

From his own observations, while aboard the U-boat, Rocker saw that the vessel carried tools marked U-153. The Germans took ten-days' supplies from the Edna, but the American prisoners were fed black bread, canned hash and very bad jam. One hundred cases of oil were removed from the Edna to the submarine.

The Americans carried their phonograph with them and traded records with the Germans, who were willing to play anything except "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

The officers of the submarine wore regulation navy uniforms, but the crew wore leather jumpers. They carried souvenirs from the ships sunk, among them being the United States flag from the Edna, which the German commander hauled down.

A Large Army Of Nineteen Year Olds Registered For Service

Canadian Press:

OTTAWA, June 4.—Up to noon today 43,139 men aged nineteen had registered for service under the recent proclamation. It has not been determined how many of these men will be actually called to the colours, but it is not expected that the call will be issued till July first anyway. Should it be necessary to issue a call these men will be notified by postal when and where to report. In the meantime they are technically regarded as soldiers on leave of absence without pay.

Appointment For Peterboro' Man

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 4.— It is officially announced that Mr. Justice Perdue has been appointed Chief Justice of Manitoba to succeed the late Chief Justice Rowell.

While it is stated that R. M. Dennistoun, K.C., will fill the postion vacated by the new Chief Justice. The latter appointment has not yet been made.

Military Situation Improves On The Western Front

Hindenburg's Reserves Are Being Rapidly Exhausted—Americans Are Entering the Struggle.

NO PRESENT DANGER

(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, June 4.—The entry of America into the fighting along the Marne means that the military situation facing General Foch now presents less cause for uneasiness than at any time since the German offensive began ten weeks ago.

General Foch's use of his American reserves would not occur at this stage of the battle, except for the fact that Von Hindenburg's own reserves rapidly are being exhausted. It is now possible for Americans to be sent into the struggle along the Marne without danger that Hindenburg is over-reaching General Foch in ultimate Strategy. The Americans are now to undergo the final period of their original training, before they are ready for full offensive warfare on their own initiative.

Reserve Forces.

It is at last same for General Foch to use the Americans for this purpose because Hindenburg's large reserve forces have been seriously depleted both by casualties and by the extension of the German frone. There is no present danger of an overwhelming mass of German reserves being hurled agdinst a vital sector of the Allies' front. The Americans therefore, by entering the struggle, are not weakening General Foch's own reserve strength disproportionately to the Germans.

The Marne front is the one sector where General Foch must exert all possible strength to move the Germans back a short distance. Until this is done the Marne railway line, running from Paris into the American sector in Eastern France, will not be available for use.

In reality, therefore, Americans are entering the present battle to wrest back from the Huns one of their own principal lines of communication.

Late Despatches

A THREE O'CLOCK DESPATCH.

Special to The Examiner:)

AN ATLANTIC PORT, June 4. — Three hundred of the passengers and crew of the torpedoed steamer Carolina were picked up at sea in boats by the schooner Etta B. Douglass, which has arrived here.

NEW YORK, June 4.— The Police Department issued an order that all display of lights in New York city at night are forbidden until further notice. The presumption is that the authorities are taking precautions against the possibility of air raids from airplanes launched from U boats.

Report Given Of Convention

Little business of public interest was discussed at the regular semi-monthly meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association in their headquarters last night.

A comprehensive report of the recent Provincial Convention of the G.W.V.A., held at Hamilton, was presented by Secretary Whatley, one of the local delegates to the convention. The report gave a summary of all the business transacted. Four applications for membership were handed over to the investigating committee.

The report of the special committee in regard to a caretaker for the new rooms was adopted. Comrade M. Steele was appointed as caretaker.

Secretary Whatley asked to be allowed to resign, but was persuaded by the members to carry on in the duties and the position for the present. The meeting showed their appreciation of his services by voting him a salary increase.

It was reported that the Ladies' Auxiliary were arranging to instal an English billiard table in the rooms.

The G.W.V.A. will hold a moonlight excursion down the Otonabee on Thursday night.

Greek Attack Was Big Success

Over Seventeen Hundred Prisoners Captured on Macedonian Front

Canadian Press:

LONDON, June 4. — A successful Greek attack at Srka de Legen was the biggest success on the Macedonian front since the autumn of 1916, which culminated in the fall of Monastir, says a Reuter's despatch from Salonika, dated Saturday. Up to Friday evening the prisoners captured totalled 1,712.

PETERBORO AND LAKEFIELD LODGES AMALGAMATE

At the meeting of Sons of England, Lansdowne Lodge, last night, an agreement was submitted by the secretary, Mr. W. G. Shiner. It called for the amalgamation of Lansdowne anad Lakefield Lodges. Lakefield Lodge has only a very few members, and Peterboro Lodge has over 200. The agreement was carefully examined by the lodge and accepted. The agreement will now have to be sent to the Supreme Lodge at Toronto for their sanction. The members of the Lakefield Lodge will be put on the superannuation list of the local lodge.

PLOWMEN TO MEET THURSDAY, JUNE 6th

Motorists Must Pay For Cars On The Market

Although the Council last night turned down Mr. Walter Fisher's account for $40 to cover the use of the market square for the parking of automobiles during the past year, they gave him authority to collect ten cents for each car that is left on the market on Wednesday and Saturdays from 7 a.m., until 1 p.m.

Mr. Fisher stated that the parking privilege enjoyed by the citizens on Saturdays had interfered with the outside market, and had deprived him of certain revenue which he had expected to receive.

City Solicitor Gordon gave his opinion that Mr. Fisher's contract entitled him to the tolls that he could collect from persons selling articles on the market.

Mayor Duncan, Ald. Worth and other members pointed out that in other cities, free parking places are provided even on certain streets, and Peterboro should endeavour to allocate some place for the purpose.

Those who place their cars on the market square on Wednesdays and Saturdays, henceforth may expect to drop ten cents into Mr. Fisher's collection box.

Time Has Expired

Income Tax Returns Must Be Made at Once or Penalty Will Be Imposed

PUBLIC INDIFFERENT

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 4.—It is announced by the Minister of Finance that the extended time within which income tax returns may be made expired on May 31st. Responses on the part of the public have, he stated, been fairly satisfactory, but there are still many in the community who have not yet complied with the provisions set forth in the detailed returns to the inspectors on taxation of respective districts.

The Commissioner of Taxation is now sending out letters to those who have not yet made out their returns, enclosing in them blank forms which are required to be filled in without delay.

The Penalties.

The Act provides substantial penalties for failure to make returns in the form required by the Department. Before invoking these penalties so severe, the Department desires to give as much leeway as possible. Those who, after receiving notice, fail to make returns will, it is stated, be made liable to the penalties provided in the Act, which amount to $100 per day for every day of default.

Intoxicated Driver Of Car Crashed Into Store Window

The south window of Alex. Gibson's jewellery store, which had worked a little loose in its metal frame, was tightened up yesterday by Ald. Jones, and left in perfect condition. Last night, at fifteen minutes after twelve, it clattered to the pavement with a loud crunching sound just as the City Fathers had completed a long and busy session of the Council. Ald. Jones was one of the first witnesses of the wreck of broken glass and of the intoxicated motor driver, with the fender of his automobile through the jagged window frame.

The owner of the car, whose absence from the Court since last winter had suggested a reformation, was fined $23.65 in Police Court this morning for driving an automobile while under the influence of drink, and his nephew was fined $13.65 for being drunk in a public place. The car had come south on George Street, and was apparently being turned up the street to stop in front of the Boston Cafe.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, JUNE 4TH, 1918.

A NEW PERIL.

The presence of German submarines off the United States coast will cause no surprise inasmuch as such an event has been expected since it was known that Germany's submarine cruisers were in commission. These huge undersea boats have a wide cruising radius and it has been predicted that sooner or later the new U boats would make their presence known in American waters. Their first raid has not so far been productive of very fruitful results, but their presence on this side of the water is a menace that will have to be met promptly by the allied naval forces.

THOSE APPOINTMENTS.

Yesterday the Examiner called attention to two local appointments, which this paper thought should have been filled by returned soldiers, and expressed the opinion that Capt. Burnham might find in the cases interesting material for his next address. Our article did not attempt to fix the responsibility for the appointments on Capt. Burnham, although the fact that both of them seemed to be based on political service might give that impression. Capt. Burnham, however, has chosen to regard himself as the objective of the attack and in the following characteristic letter slides from in under:

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir: You attack me in your issue of Monday for two recent appointments, one in the post office, the other at Juniper Island. You have attacked the wrong man. I agree with much that you said but you should remember that the House of Commons tried to "abolish patronage" and give it all to the government.

Go for the Government as much as you like. It is trying to do the impossible just as much as any association is which calls itself "Christian," and yet appropriates an exemption which if applied to the less fortunate public would give it public baths and much happiness and health in hot weather.

I know nothing of the post office appointment whatever, and only the other day heard that as the pay goes to the soldier overseas he still holds the job at Clear Lake.

In future, please do not forget that "patronage has been abolished," i.e., after the Cabinet has filled all its own pet jobs.

J. H. Burnham.

If Capt. Burnham has had nothing to do with these appointments he might take his attention away from the Y.M.C.A., the Patriotic Fund, and other institutions long enough to find why returned soldiers have been passed over. As a member of the G.W.V.A. and as the representative of West Peterboro in the House of Commons, he has a double incentive to spur him on to action in these two glaring cases.

"GOING IT BLIND."

The attention of the local council is respectfully called to a striking article in the Canadian Forestry Journal on "Going it Blind on the Fuel Supply." The heading is particularly appropriate to Peterboro, where the authorities, in spite of last year's experience, and the warnings from the Fuel Administrator, have made little or no effort to organize a wood reserve to meet the shortage in coal that is now known to be certainly coming next winter. The matter of securing a supply of wood has been practically neglected by the local council and the result is bound to be a repetition of last winter's suffering, and a fuel shortage that will cause people to pay —as the Forestry Journal points out—$12 a cord for abominable examples of wood fuel, consisting of green and rotted pine, mixed with green poplar, ironwood, pieces of fence rail, old ties and soft maple. "Such wood at such a price is at least equal to $30 a cord for good hard seasoned maple, beech or elm."

Part of the article is reproduced to show the seriousness of the situation:

"Canada is, in the main, 'going it blind' on the wood fuel supply for next winter. Six months from the date of issue of this Journal will see the cold weather back again. How many municipalities have taken the U.S. Fuel Administrator at his word and have supplemented the inevitable coal shortage with fuel wood, is hard to ascertain, but judging by scores of reports in various local newspapers, amazingly little has been done. As in other campaigns the people have been waiting for leadership. They waited for it in February and March, the best months for getting the cutting done so as to allow time for seasoning. Scarcely a hint of the danger of delay appeared from any quarter save through the Commissioner of Conservation and the Canadian Forestry Association.

"Now, with winter five or six months distant, some effort in the direction of public education and warning appears. Advertisements are being circulated in the papers by the Ontario Government inviting municipalities to undertake to supply their wood fuel needs from the abundant supplies in the Algonquin Park. The newly appointed Provincial Fuel Administrator, H. C. Harris, of Toronto, has announced to some of the Boards of Trade that Canadians need not expect to have their houses at same temperature as last winter nor to be able to secure a normal coal supply. Doubtless provincial action will extend beyond a warning for very few municipalities will be found to take action of themselves is that is the limit of official cooperation.

"Canadians may rest assured on one important point that we are six to eighteen months behind our United States neighbours in preparing for the coal shortage, which the U. S. Fuel Administrator says is certain to arrive next winter.

"Recent issues of the Forestry Journal have contained abundant information going to show the remarkable activity displayed by the Eastern States and the U. S. Government in supplementing the coal shortage with a wood reserve.

"The secretary of the Canadian Forestry Association recently spent a day in a small village seventeen miles from Toronto. February had passed and yet very few of the villagers and farmers had cut more than a few cords of wood, just sufficient to act as kindling for the anthracite coal fires they expect to enjoy next winter. At their back doors lay enough dead and dying hardwood trees to keep their homes at summer heat through five or six winters. In such communities across the border the State Fuel administrators tacitly informed the villagers and farmers that they need not expect their usual coal supply. This warning, given six months or more ago, had the effect of driving every citizen into the nearest bush for a few days' hard work.

"Have Canadians any right to think that their super-confidence in an unknown factor is going to keep their homes warm next winter when Uncle Sam himself is making every effort to create an auxiliary supply of wood fuel?

"It is only reasonable to suppose that if any persons are to freeze for lack of coal, it will not be the people of Massachusetts first and Canadians second.

"Possibly the coal situation may work out nicely for both countries. But that is only an effervescent guess.

"The only sure thing about NEXT winter is that it will bring many months of bitter cold, and that Central Canada cannot lay its hands on a single ton of hard coal within its own boundries.

"The people are willing to accept advice. They are willing to act. They are keen to avoid a repetition of last winter's experience. All that is needed, is rousing leadership."

GREAT BRITAIN'S PART.

Comment has often been heard as to the frequency with which we read of French reserves coming to the assistance of a hard pressed portion of the British line and as to why British reserves were not used. An interesting explanation is given by Mr. Frank H. Simonds, military expert of the New York Tribune, who shows that Britain's part at present is to hold the line.

Mr. Simonds says:—

"This means that there will be a general notion that the French are really doing more than their share and saving the British over and over again, whereas the truth will be that British and French are performing exactly the missions allotted to them by the High Command. And, it must be patent, the higher costs will be paid by the British, who last year lost four to one, as compared with the French, and so far this year have lost some 250,000, against 50,000 for Petain's forces.

"The point which I am striving to emphasize is that it is essential not to be unjust to our British allies, whose losses are terrific now and whose services are equally great, while the French, having done their share, and more than their share, in past years, are now acting as a reserve, marching to the threatened point, but arriving only when the first shock is over and both contestants are growing weary. Realizing the praise due the French, there remains reason for paying proper tribute to the British share in the common struggle. . . . . .

"The German has chosen to attack the British, and I believe that he will make still a third attack, and an attack between Amiens and Arras, with the deliberate intention of completing the job begun nearly two months ago rolling the British back away from the French and upon the Channel ports. Whether he is successful or fails, the British will have to face a casualty list of nearly a million this year, as they did last. If, in the end, with the aid of all the Allied reserves, the British survive the storm, we shall owe them quite as large a debt as we owe the French for the noble sacrifice that stretched from the opening hours of the war, through the victory of the Marne and the costly but glorious defense of Verdun.

"And we Americans might just as well recognize the fact that if the British do this, then it will be our turn to step into the breach and, relying upon the British and French as necessary and powerful reserves forces, bear the brunt of the next two years of the war in an ever-increasing measure, if the war shall persist for this ghastly long time. Only by thus apportioning the losses between the Allies, while Germany has to bear hers alone, shall we win the war by attrition alone. But winning it in this fashion we shall insure for the world a period of peace from the German menace, for the tribute laid upon the male population of Germany will be beyond that any nation in modern history has sad to bear"

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The German drive has apparently been definitely checked by the French, after eight days' desperate fighting.

Now that the opening of the southern portion of the Trent Canal has opened the way from Peterborough to the sea, the announcement of German submarines off the Atlantic coast comes nearer home. However, the Bessie Butler may be relied upon to keep the undersea pirates out of the canal.

The action of the Council in restricting the hours of the restaurants on Sunday is a reversion to "Blue law" legislation that will be resented by many citizens, especially those who are not fortunate enough to have motor cars to carry them to a town where the sale of ice cream or other refreshment on a torrid Sunday is not considered a crime.

It is hoped that the next step of the City Fathers will not be to close the city parks on Sunday. Judging by recent by-laws such a regulation would not be a surprise.

LUXEMBURG.

Little Duchy Under Heel of Conqueror.

When the Germans invaded Luxemburg they solemnly announced their intention of behaving well; and a little later they circulated an official statement to the effect that their occupation of the Grand Duchy had been positively profitable to the inhabitants. This statement is a bushel of lies, with, perhaps, two grains of truth in it.

It is true that some of the Luxemburg tanners and ironmasters have had the handling of lucrative army contracts, and that a good deal of the money stolen in Belgium has been squandered in riotous living in the Luxemburg cafes. It is also true that the Luxemburg Parliament has been permitted to debate its "war aims" in guarded language — in spite of the fact that these aims include secession from the Zollverein and the transference of the railway leases to France. But that is the sum total of the advantages and the correctitude. A batch of Luxemburg papers which has lately come to hand exhibits the other side of the picture, and contains full proof of the following affirmations:

1. In spite of the prosperity of a few profiteers, Luxemburg as a whole has been reduced to destitution, and is now being winnowed by disease.

2. Luxemburg citizens obnoxious to Germany have been arrested and deported; and some of them have been forcibly enrolled in the German army.

3. Luxemburg is now being plundered almost as thoroughly as Belgium, albeit by different methods.

Until recently Luxemburg was almost self-supporting in the matter of foodstuffs. Early in the war, however, the invaders bought up and consumed all the surplus stock of comestibles; and now practically every commodity, from bread to soap, and from pork to candles, is strictly rationed. Many medical officers of health have reported on the results of the scarcity.

Of the arrests and deportations the most sensational has been that of M. Prum, the burgomaster of Clervant. He was at the beginning of the war a friend of Germany, and he set out to investigate the stories of barbarity in Belgium, expecting to be able to disprove them. Finding the affirmative evidence overwhelming, he wrote a pamphlet to say so, and tried to enlist the sympathy of his friend Herr Erzberger. That friend of humanity, ever whom our pacifists have lately been cussing, rounded on him. He was sent to a German prison, and is still detained in Germany, living under strict surveillance in a Duesseldorf hotel. Many other Luxemburgers whose cases are less notorious, have suffered the same treatment.

The compulsory enrolment of Luxemburgers in the German army took place in April, 1917. There were men who had settled in Germany, but had no intention of abandoning their nationality. They made their representations to the Dutch Consul at Cologne, who had charge of Luxemburg interests in the Rhine province, and were officially informed that "the protests of the Luxemburg Government would be useless, as the German Government would itself examine every case on its merits." They did so examine them, with the result that a Luxemburger from Stuigart was taken prisoner on the Belgian front. He was mortally wounded, and made a dying deposition in the Luxemburg patois, to the effect that he was no volunteer, but a conscript, and had been shot by his own officer for refusing to advance against his Belgian friends. The full story was told last November in the "Gazette de Lusanne," which produced official documents of German source in support of its allegations.

Finally, we come to the despoilation of the Grand Duchy; and here the German idea seems to gut the country without departing from the outward semblance of correctitude.

The first step was the billeting of soldiers who ate the Luxemburgers out of hearth and home. What was taken in this way was paid for, but the country was none the less exhausted by the process. Actual commandeering was only resorted to in exceptional (and, perhaps, unauthorized) cases. The Germans were evidently anxious to be able to boast that, where there had been no resistance, there had been no looting. In some cases, high prices and, in other cases, high pressure extorted the desired supplies. The time came, however, when the Luxemburgers were no longer willing to sell, even in response to these two influences.

That method has consisted in engaging others to steal for them the goods which they were ashamed to steal for themselves, and throwing the shield of military protection over both thieves and the receivers. The Germans have, in fact (not openly, but through confidential intermediaries) organized the malefactors of the Grand Duchy to commit burglary on their behalf. From time to time false alarms of impending air raids give the burglars their chance. The stolen goods are helped over the frontier by the regulation which forbids any Luxemburg customs house official to search the personal belongings of any German officer or soldier.

The Olive Crop.

The 1918 olive crop in the maritime Alps promises to be a good one. Estimates place this year's production at 4,000 metric tons, compared to the average yield of 2,500 to 3,000 metric tons. The quality of the oil is said to be good and prices are high.

LIFE AT ITS WORST

Wild Orgies in Mushroom Towns Along Union Pacific.

Scenes That Can Only Be Described as Reversion of Mankind to the Savage, Common in the Early Days of the West.

Travelers who whisk across the country in luxurious trains today little realize the vision, the toil and the sacrifice that made possible the steel road over which they roll along. In the building of the first railroad across the continent is to be found the theme which has thrilled Zane Grey in "The U. P. Trail."

Among the pictures drawn by Mr. Grey of the scenes and incidents attendant upon the building of the Union Pacific one of the most vivid is that of a night following pay day in Benton, one of the towns of the type that sprang up in the wake of the road in the days during its construction, an exchange says:

"Life indoors that night in Benton was monstrous, wonderful and hideous. The gold that did not flow over the bars went into the greedy hands of the cold, swift gamblers or into the clutching fingers of the wild-eyed women. The big gambling hall had extra lights, extra attendants, extra tables; and there round the great glittering mirror-blazing bar struggled and laughed and shouted a drink-sodden mass of humanity. And all through the rest of the big room groups and knots of men stood and sat around tables, intent, absorbed, obsessed, listening with strained ears, watching with wild eyes, reaching with shaking hands—only to gasp and throw down their cards and push gold toward cold faced gamblers, with a muttered curse. This was the night of the golden harvest for the black-garbed, steel-nerved, cold-eyed card sharps. They knew the brevity of time, and of hour, and of life.

"In the dancing halls there was a maddening whirl, an immense and incredible hilarity, a wild fling of unleashed, burly men, an honest drunken spree. But there was also the hideous, red-eyed drunkenness that did not spring from drink; the unveiled passion, the brazen lure, the raw, corrupt and terrible presence of bad women in absolute license at a wild and baneful hour.

"The scene at midnight was unreal, livid, medieval. Dance of cannibals, dance of sun worshipers, dance of Apaches on the warpath, dance of cliff dwellers wild over the massacre of a dreaded foe—only these orgies might have been comparable to that wild whirl of gold and lust.

"Night wore on and the hour of dawn approached.

"The lamps were dead; the tents were dark; the music was stilled; and the low, soft roar was but a hollow mockery of its earlier strength.

"Like specters men staggered slowly and wanderingly through the gray streets. Gray ghosts! All was gray. A vacant laugh pealed out and a strident curse, and then again the low murmur prevailed. Benton was going to rest. Weary, drunken, spent nature sought oblivion—on disordered beds, on hard floors and in dusty corners. An immense and hovering shadow held the tents and halls and streets. Through this opaque gloom the silent and the mumbling revelers reeled along. Louder voices broke the spell only for an instant. Death lay in the middle of the main street, in the dust—and no passing man halted. It lay as well down the side streets, in sandy ditches and on the tent floors, and behind the bar of the gambling hell. Likewise death had his counterpart in hundreds of prostrate men who lay in drunken stupor, asleep, insensible to the dust in their faces.

"But the dawn would not stay back in order to hide Benton's hideousness. The gray lifted out of the streets, the shadows lightened, the east kindled and the sweet, soft freshness of a desert dawn came in on the gentle breeze. And when the sun arose, splendid and golden, with its promise and beauty, it shone upon a ghastly, silent, motionless, sleeping Benton."

FEEDING THE SOLDIERS.

Camp Menus Are Better Here Than Overseas.

In the war estimates just brought down in the House of Commons, provision is made for rationing Canadian troops in England at a cost of 38½ cents per day and in Canada at 50 cents per day. Sir Robert Borden explained that the rations are much better here, due in part to food scarcity in the Old Country.

The difference in the amount of food supplied to Canadian soldiers here and in England is shown by comparing the diet sheet in use at Exhibition Camp, Toronto, with that which was provided for Canadians in England. Both these sheets cover a period of March, so that the comparison is a fair one. In England the amounts of the various foods available day by day vary largely, but for purposes of comparison we have taken a day on which the soldiers fared particularly well, namely, Monday, March 25. On the Tuesday their menu was far more scanty. Here are the figures:

	Every day Canada.	Best day England.
Ounces of
Meat	14	11
Bread	14	12
Potatoes	12	6
Bacon	3	½
Beans	2	2½
Jam	2	½
Butter, oleo.	2	1
Sugar	3	1
Fresh vegetables	6½	..
Vegetables	..	7
Split peas	½	..
Salt	½	½
Cheese	1	..
Coffee	½	1-6
Tea	¼	1-8
Milk powder	1	⅜

In addition the menu in England contains five-sixteenths oz. barley flour, three-quarters oz. ground rice, one-sixtieth oz. molasses, one-half oz. maize flour, seven-eighths oz. oatmeal. In Canada oatmeal, flour or rice will be served in lieu of beans, and dried prunes in lieu of jam. In England oleo is invariably substituted for butter.

It is to be noted that the above comparison is with one of the best days for food in England. On the day following the troops got only 11 ounces of bread and four ounces of beef, but the bacon allowance was increased to three ounces. Thus, taking bread, meat and bacon together, the diet is 31 oz. every day in Canada, as compared with 24½ and 18 oz. in England.

The figures in the foregoing table embrace the total food served at three meals in Canada and four meals in England, there being a late supper of vegetable soup and bread in the latter. For purpose of further comparison, there are here set forth the details of the menu in both England and Canada on Monday, March 25, the Canadian diet sheet being that of the Second Bn., First C.O.R., at Exhibition Camp:

Breakfast.

Canada—Grilled steak, porridge, bread and butter, coffee.

England — Oatmeal. Hamburg steak, bread and oleo, coffee.

Dinner.

Canada—Pea soup, boiled beef, boiled potatoes, vegetables, bread and butter.

England—Boiled beef, rice pudding, potatoes, carrots, no butter or oleo.

In England one-half the unit would get roast beef instead of boiled beef.

Supper.

Canada — Bread pudding, jam, cheese, bread and butter, tea.

England — Pork and beans, jam turnovers, bread and oleo, tea.

Late Supper.

England—Vegetable soup, no butter.

The main difference in the meals in Canada and England seems to be that in Canada the quantities of staples served are much larger, while in England the army has certain lean days and when there is a dish like roast beef, it goes to only half the unit, the other half taking the same quantity of boiled beef.

Cares for War Dog Veterans.

War dogs discharged from active service with glorious wounds are being cared for by Countess Yourkevich in charming surroundings in the Rue Chauveau, Neuilly-sur-Seine, reports a Paris dispatch.

The Old Brigade includes Pax, who four times saved his master's life; Dick of the Somme, who had a leg amputated after a heroic exploit; Dick of the Yser, whose regimental officers decorated him with the Croix de Guerre.

Altogether the countess is caring for nearly six hundred dogs who have been the devoted companions of stretcher bearers and the friends of the poilus.

Already these faithful heroes are fasting as a result of food restrictions and with the more severe regime of bread cards there are fresh clouds gathering on their horizon.

The Real Boss.

"I doubt if Kitty will be happy when married. She's always had her own way too much."

"Oh, but Jack will let her do anything."

"I'm not thinking about her husband, but about her cook."—Boston Transcript.

DOURO TOWNSHIP COUNCIL MEETING

Cases Dealt With by the Court of Revision

The members of Douro Council met at the Town Hall on Mouday, May 27th, as a Court of Revision.

Having subscribed to the oath of members of the Court of Revision, the several members took their seats with Mr. Coughlin as chairman.

Mr. Hugh Matthews, appealed against the assessment on Lot 17 Ept Con 7 as being too high according to assessment of adjoining property. This assessment was confirmed.

Catherine Crough, appealed against assessment of dog, as dog was poisoned shortly after visit of assessor, assessment confirmed.

Court of Revision being concluded the Court adjourned and council went into regular session for the transaction of ordinary business with Reeve Walsh in the chair.

On motion the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

Moved by R. Moloney, sec. by Mr. Kennedy, that Mr. Coughlin and Geo. Hamilton be appointed a committee to investigate Thos. Sullivan's complaint re water table on bill in front of his lot with power to act.

By-law No. 851 authorizing the expenditure of $400 in accordance with the provisions of the Colonization Roads Act., was read a third time and passed. The following were appointed commissioners under this by-law, Road No. 1, Chas. Frankish; Road No. 2, Louis Sullivan; Road No. 3, John P. Condon; Road No. 4, John Ball.

By-law No. 857, authorizing the Reeve and treasurer to borrow $2,800 for current expenditure and school purposes was passed.

Moved by R. Moloney, sec. by Geo. Hamilton, that the treasurer be authorized to accept the collectors roll, less the following amounts viz Edward Courry, $5.52 plus 5 per cent, J. H. Jones $8.25 plus 5 per cent and Ernest Butler $1.00 which cannot be collected.

Moved by M. Coughlin, sec. by R. Moloney, that M. McManus be appointed a commissioner to expend the sum of $25.00 on line between con. 2 and 3 in front of lots 15 and that the treasurer pay the sand amount on the order of Geo. Hamilton.

Orders on the treasurer were passed as follows—Peter S. Moloney, salary as assessor and one day's work on road with team in 1915, $94.00; Patrick Farley, belance of salary as collector and postage $21.50; Clerk postage $5.00; Lakefield Agricultural Society $25.00. Council adjourned to meet at a call frmo the Reeve.

Regimental Pets.

As regimental pets black cats are regarded the luckiest, possession a detachment can have, and the arrival of a stray animal of this color at a guapit or dugout in France is an event of great importance. Every one is bound to be lucky for some hours at least. To meet a black cat while marching up to the trenches puts every member of the company in the happiest humor. On the other hand, a black magpie flying across the line of march is a bad omen. To hear the cuckoo calling before breakfast is another bad omen.

Alcohol From Sawdust.

Experiments have shown that a ton of dry sawdust will yield with proper treatment twenty to twenty-five gallons of 95 per cent ethyl or grain alcohol.

THIN, NERVOUS PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Weak thin people—men or women—are nearly always nervous wrecks; thus conclusively proving that thinness, weakness, debility and neurasthenia are almost invariably due to nerve starvation. Feed your nerves and all these symptoms due to nerve starvation will disappear.

Eminent specialists state that the best nerve food is an organic phosphate known among druggists as Bitro-Phosphate, a five-grain tablet of which should be taken with each meal. Being a genuine nerve builder and not a stimulant or habit-forming drug, Bitro-Phosphate can be safely taken by the weakest and most delicate sufferer, and the results following its use are often simply astonishing.

Weak, tired people regain strength and vigour; thinness and angularity give way to plumpness and curves; sleep returns to the sleepless; confidence and cheerfulness replace debility and gloom; dull eyes become bright and pale, sunken cheeks regain the pink glow of health. Bitro-Phosphate, the use of which is inexpensive, also wonderfully promotes the assimilation of food, so much so that many people report marked gains of weight in a few weeks.

CAUTION:— Although Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh. It is sold in this city by McDermid & Jury and all good druggists.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Mrs. (Captain) W. H. Varley Is Home on Two Months' Leave

Peterboro' Member of United States Motor Ambulance Corps Engaged in An Interesting Work—First Lieutenant

After causing considerable excitement and curiosity by her military appearance in Toronto Mrs. (Capt.) W. H. Varley, formerly Miss Agnes Heaslip, of this city, arrived in Peterborough this week on two months' leave from her "unit."

Mrs. Varley is a member of the famous Motor Corps of America, which was organized by Captain Bastedo, a trained nurse, whose husband is one of the staff of St. Luke's Hospital. Captain Bastedo, tiring of the lack of genuine war work with the National Service Society with which she was conected and which was doing wonderful but unexciting work, decided to start something really and directly connected with military life. In no time hundreds of women, inspired by patriotism, had flocked to the colours and joined up. For the most part the girls are of the wealthy class who have given their cars over to the work and given their services absolutely free. The unit, splendidly organized and equipped, was speedily recognized by the government.

The Uniform.

Mrs. Varley arrived home to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Heaslip, 541 Gilmour street, clad in her uniform which, outside of a skirt substitute for trousers, is identical with a British offifficer's. Peak cap bearing the blue and gold ensigns, Sam Brown belt, military pockets, even puttees, everything is complete. So far, dislike of being conspicuous has prevented her coming up town in the uniform, which by rights she should not discard on leave.

The Course.

"There are," Mrs. Varley said, "two hundred and fifty girls at present in the corps, thirty have lately gone overseas. The work is decidedly not for the young woman seeking a costume and an easy time. Every detail of the regular soldiers' drill is gone through and a first aid course at St. Luke's Hospital essential before joining up. The lazy ones are soon weeded out. Great care is taken to keep any Germans out of the unit and every applicant has to be overhauled and passed by the secret service of the U.S.A. Two suspects of German sympathy disappeared soon after their entry. It is an important work and needs care to prevent spying. I venture to say the said heatedly ,that if any woman, let alone a man dared venture such a statement as is reported to have been made here on tag day when a lady asker for money for the prisoners of war and was answered, "To hell with the prisoners of war," she would not live over night. The feeling in the States is very strong and no such sentiment as that would be tolerated a moment.

Work of the Corps

The work of the Corps is done in New York city. The motor ambulance manned by a driver and an auxiliary meet the sick and wounded coming from the transports and take them to the various hospitals, which have been given over to the soldiers. These include the Park Hospital, Y.M.C.A. building and Methodist Episcopal church. The girls never rest day or night and are as apt to be called at 3 a.m. as during the day, to meet a transport bearing French, English, Australian, American or Canadian soldiers. Here, after giving first aid, the boys are taken to hospital.

President Enethusiastic

President Wilson is enthusiastic over the work of the girls, and Governor Whitman "thinks they're great after reviewing them."

Saw Guy Empey.

With the rest of the Corps, Mrs. Varely saw Guy Empey, author of "Over the Top," and said Carnegie Hall was crowded with an audience, which included the "Blue Devils" from France, who were so enthusiastically embraced by the ladies. The Blue Devils went wild over Guy Empey, as did such people as the Vanderbilts, etc.

First Lieutenant.

In a month Mrs. Varley will be made First Lieutenant of the Corps.

CONFIRMATION IN LINDSAY ADMINISTERED BY BISHOP O'BRIEN

On Sunday morning at St. Mary's church, Lindsay, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to eighty-three children, forty-three boys and forty girls. The candidates assembled in the Parish Hall at 9 a.m. and marched to the church singing hymns. Mass was celebrated by the Bishop, during which he administered confirmation. In the afternoon the children re-assembled in the church, where they renewed their baptismal vows. His Lordship addressed the candidates, remarking that it was a great source of consolation to him for the excellent manner in which the candidates had been instructed in the Christian doctrine in preparation for the reception of this great sacrament.

Addressing the large congregation, His Lordship preached a splendid sermon, during which he referred to the materialism which prevailed today. The world has gone mad, His Lordship declared, the lust for power and influence being responsible for the present bloody struggle on the fair fields of France.

Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament followed. The choir of St. Joseph's Academy rendered excellent music.

Eat Grape-Fruit

OURS ARE SEEDLESS

"Do" your Marmalade now—it's not too late—and our Grape Fruit is plentiful and just the right kind for making marmalade.

Eat Grape Fruit for breakfast, and eat it with less sugar. Experts say you get best tonic results with less sugar.

Grape Fruit contains a small quantity of quinine, which some people like for its bitter taste. It also contains citric acid, which is refreshing, and said to help digestion. In this way, Grape Fruit is an appetizer.

It is the rind of the Grape Fruit which conveys the sour-bitterness to the fleshy parts. Lift each section out of the peel without any white adhering to it and it will need less sugar. Try it and see.

evised Building By-law Met With Vigorous Assault From Council And Was Held Up

mbers of the Committee That Framed It Lead the Attacks Against It and Ald. Edgar Made a Horatian Stand Against the Hosts—Winter's Work For Nothing

The revised building by-law, upon ich a special committee with Alman Edgar chairman, worked all t winter, was indefinitely shelved the Council last night. Some of members of the committee were most active opponents of the by- when it was presented for the uncil's approval last night.

The committee that prepared it was nposed of Mayor Duncan, Aldern Langford, A. A. McIntyre, Malm M. McIntyre, Jones and Edgar, e Chief Grange and Messrs. Ephve, Bogue Sherwood, Finnie, W. Thompson and Alex. Weddell. irteen meetings were held, and fruits of the work are represented a bulky volume of typewritten es.

lderman Edgar, holding the formble folio before the Council, stated it had been carefully considered a committee composed largely of contractors, and suggested that it be passed without formal reading in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Robert Hicks stated that he was interested in the by-law because his company was about to begin alterations to the Charlotte street office. If the fire limits were extended, the plans for the new offices would be greatly affected.

Alderman Edgar replied that the new limits defined by the by-law would include the Hicks property.

Alderman Edgar moved, seconded by Alderman Dobbin that the by-law be taken as read.

Ald. M. McIntyre—How many of the committee were present at the meeting when the by-law was recommended to be sent to the Council?

Alderman Edgar—Mayor Duncan, Aldermen Langford, Jones and myself.

Alderman McIntyre — I wouldn't recommend its passing now. It would tie up building, and conditions are hard enough as they are.

Some of the Recommendations.

Alderman Edgar disputed that assertion. The only changes he said, were as follows—all partitions in houses to be fire stopped to the ceilings, shingles on roofs to be laid on asbestos paper, hot air pipes to be made double or to be wrapped in asbestos paper, and chimneys to be lined with tile. Dwellings of not more than two storeys were to be of nine-inch walls.

Ald. M. McIntyre—It would mean another official. Mr. Parsons would'nt have time to act as building inspector.

Mr. Hicks—I want to take out a building permit right now before the by-law is passed. We want to improve the tumbledown building on Charlotte street, but our appropriations for the work were based on the requirements of the old by-law.

Ald. M. McIntyre—Did you get prices on the printing of the by-law.

Alderman Edgar—Yes, $237.

Alderman McIntyre made a noise that evidently regarded this cost as prohibitive.

Alderman Weir admitted that he was committed to oppose the by-law, having promised Mr. Shook of the Dickson estate that in consideration for a right of way for the new high voltage wires through the Dickson property in Ashburnham he would oppose the by-law.

Fit For New York.

Alderman Langford—I thought we were going to undertake simple changes to the by-law, but as it is drawn up it is on a New York scale. I think we ought to let it stand until after the war.

Aiderman Edgar replied that it was virtually a contractors' by-law, and that it facilitated the erection of buildings.

Alderman Worth—Why are these members of the by-law committee opposing it now?

Alderman Edgar—I can't understand that at all.

Mayor Duncan—It was recommended to the Council to be threshed out, and we are threshing.

The motion was overwhelmed, only Alderman Dobbin and Alderman Edgar voting for it.

City Clerk Armstrong then proceeded to read the by-law, and the Aldermen threw up their hands in dismay.

"The motion was that the by-law be taken as read," said the City Clerk, and the Council realized that they were not yet through with the difficulty they imagined they were washing their hands of.

Alderman Weir who was presiding exclaimed—"Some one's got to do something."

Another Move Headed Off.

Alderman M. McIntyre moved, seconded by Alderman Langford that the by-law be shelved until after the war. This was lost by a vote of 5 to 4.

Alderman McIntyre moved that the by-law be passed without the extension of the fire limits.

Alderman Edgar—Anybody can put up any old shack they like.

The discussion wandered on and on with short excursions into all kinds of extraneous side issues.

Ald. M. McIntyre — The Shook property shouldn't be in the fire limits.

Alderman Edgar—I am willing to pass the by-law without extending the fire limits.

The Present Fire Limits.

The old limits are King street, the dividing line between Bethune and Aylmer streets, Dublin street to Water, McDonnel street and lot 4 east of Water, and on the east side of the river.

Ald. M. McIntyre—We wouldn't pass this by-law if we were interested.

Alderman Jones—I think we ought to go over it carefully.

Alderman Saunders—I want to see it myself before passing on it.

Alderman Weir—Well gentlemen, get through with it some way.

Alderman Edgar moved, seconded by Alderman Dobbin that the by-law be passed without extending the old fire limits.

The vote was as follows: Nays—Aldermen Saunders, Weir, A. McIntyre and M. McIntyre.

Yeas—Aldermen Dobbin, Edgar, Jones, Worth and Mayor Duncan.

Alderman Taylor was absent, and Alderman Langford hesitated to vote.

Alderman Edgar—I made the motion on Alderman Langford's suggestion.

Alderman Worth—Come on Bill, vote.

Alderman Langford—Nay, then.

This tied up the vote, five each way.

Ald. M. McIntyre — That was a close call.

Alderman Edgar showed some signs of disappointment, but his stock of patience is notable.

He remarked that Alderman Saunders as chairman of the Board of Health should be anxious to improve the city. "Now he wants to go back fifty years."

Alderman Saunders — I want to hear the by-law, and know what is in it, before I vote on it.

Mayor Duncan—A member has the right to hear it.

There was nothing before the chair, and Alderman Weir begged for deliverance from the stalemate.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre moved, seconded by Alderman Saunders that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again. Carried.

And with a fervent sigh of relief the battling builders turned to other matters.

The proposed extension of the fire limits was as follows: North side of Dalhousie, the dividing line between Bethune and Stewart streets, south side of McDonnel to Argyle, east side of Aylmer to Dublin, south Dublin to the river.

GUNNER PRATT IS SERIOUSLY ILL.

GUNSHOT WOUNDS IN RIGHT LEG AND RIGHT ARM.

Official word has been received by Mr. Fred Pratt of Gore's Landing, that his son, 314688, Gunner Frederick William Dayid Pratt, artillery, had been admitted to the 43rd casualty clearing station on May 1, suffering from gunshot wounds in his right leg and right hand. Later word was received that he was seriously ill in No. 10, General Hospital, Rouen, under date of May 22. This is the second time that Gunner Pratt has been reported in the casualty list, he previously having been gassed. He went overseas in March, 1916, with Capt. Hopper's draft of the Heavy Battery Wished the Spikes Also.

The wife of a thrifty Western farmer had worked very, very hard for many, many years, depriving herself not only of all luxuries, but of many comforts. "Foolishness," she had termed such things. But the mail-order catalogue in which father was interested had caught her eye—or was it her neighbor's new bonnet? Some change had come over her ideas of what constituted "foolishness," and she astonished father one morning by announcing she was going to town to buy a hat.

Arriving at a millinery store she surprised the clerk who came forward to wait on her by asking: "I want to know who's runnin' this here joint?"

"I am at present," the clerk responded.

"Well, what I want to know is, if I buy a fine hat here, will you throw in the spikes?"

CYRUS CLARK DIES IN WEST.

FORMER RESIDENT OF PETERBORO WILL BE BURIED IN INGERSOLL.

Ingersoll, June 4. — Word has been received here of the death at Calgary, of Cyrus Clark, son of Mr. A. J. Clark of Rochester, N.Y., formerly of Ingersoll. He was 35 years of age, and resided here with his parents up to 15 years ago, when they removed to Peterboro, later going to Rochester. The body will be brought to Ingersoll for interment.

Rheumatism A Mystery

Some diseases give immunity from another attack but rheumatism works just the other way. Every attack of rheumatism invites another; worse than that, it reduces the body's power so that each attack is worse than the one before.

If any disease needs curing early, it is rheumatism but there is scarcely any disease that physicians find more difficult to treat successfully. When a medicine does cure rheumatism therefore it is worthy of special notice. Medical authorities agree that the blood becomes thin with alarming rapidity as rheumatism develops. Maintaining the quality of the blood is therefore a reasonable way of preventing and combatting rheumatism. That it works out in fact is shown by the beneficial effects which follow the treatment of rheumatism, acute, muscular and articular, with that great blood tonic, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

That thousands of people who have taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for their rheumatism have been cured is a fact beyond dispute. That rheumatism does not return as long as the blood is kept rich and red is equally true. If therefore you are suffering from rheumatism in any form you should lose no time in giving Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Curb "Gas" Tanks Must Be Gone From Street Within Six Months

Mayor Duncan Lead Move to Rid the Streets of What He Called a Growing Nuisance—Plenty of Room in the Garages—Merchants Have Complained

The council not only put the lid on the Sunday night restaurant activity at last night's regular meeting, but they gave the gasoline tanks and air tubes only six months lease of life on the sidewalks. After that the garages must provide some other accommodation for their customers, and in the meantime new applications to insall "gas" tanks at the curb are are turned down flatly and the first two were summarily rejected last night. Ex-Mayor Duffus applied for permission to move his tanks from Simcoe street to the corner of Water and Charlotte streets, and Mr. Robert Hicks intended to plant a tank in front of his office on Charlotte street.

Declaring that it was high time the streets were cleared of the automobile tanks, which he stated were a nuisance to other merchants because of the blockade of the front of their stores by waiting automobiles, Mayor Duncan said there was no time like the present to make a beginning.

Ald. Langford—What would you do?

Mayor Duncan—Give them notice that the tanks must be moved inside.

Ald. Worth—They would have to run a hose outside anyway.

Mayor Duncan—The accommodation provided in the cities now is entirely inside. You drive in one door, get your gas and leave by another door; there is no blocking of the street front. I have had a lot of people complaining to me.

Mr. Hicks was asked what effect the change would have on his plans?

"We will govern ourselves according to the city's regulations; if there are any privileges shared by others we expect to enjoy them too.

Mayor Duncan—The Manning and the Duffus garages, Mr. Brown, and others, can easily put their tanks back in their yards.

City Engineer Parsons added that the air hose stretching across the sidewalk was a source of danger to citizens and damage suits against the city. One of the vents from a gas tank had cost the municipality $2600 in damages.

Mayor Duncan—The tanks are as handy to me as to any other car owner, but we did not imagine a few years ago when we sanctioned the first curb tank, that the streets would be littered with them.

Regarding the sale of gasoline on Sunday, Ald. Edgar declared that the garage men had no more right to sell "gas" on Sunday than the restaurants to sell ice-cream.

"When Ald. Edgar gets his car he'll change his tune," was Ald. Langford's dry comment.

Ald. Worth—Sunday is dead enough without cutting off the "gas."

Ald. Saunders moved, seconded by Ald. Dobbin, that notice be given that gasoline tanks must be removed from the streets within six months from the present.—Carried.

Those who opposed the motion were Aldermen Jones, Worth Langford and A. A. McIntyre.

BUMPER WHEAT CROP IS LOOKED FOR IN THE STATES

Ten Year Record May Be Smashed Favourable Reports Received

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, June 4.—A bumper wheat crop, enough to smash the ten-year record, was predicted to-day by Food Administration officials, on receipt of favourable reports from all parts of the United States.

Actual yields of both winter and spring wheat will exceed the Department of Agriculture's estimate, officials declared.

Harvesting has begun in California, Texas, Kansas and Southern Nebraska, and will rapidly extend northwards through the wheat belt. Winter wheat will yield close to 600,000,000 bushels if bad weather does not damage the crop just as harvest is setting in, it is estimated.

Spring wheat, totalling 232,758,000 bushels in 1917, will leap possibly 25 per cent. Reports of favourable weather from the spring belt in the northwest encouraged Food Administration officials to-day.

Ourcq and Savieres, so that he is held on three sides.

Refugees Arrive.

PARIS, June 4.—Refugees from the Aisne and Marne continue to pour into Paris coming not only by every train available, but even by canal boat and other means of transportation.

The arrivals Monday included the entire population of the village of Limiy-Sur-Ourcq which had spent three days packed into a boat with hastily gathered possessions. All the refugees were desolate and hungry. Those who made the trip in canal barges were within range of the German artillery fire for hours, but the casualties were limited to two babies, who fell overboard and were drowned being found after.

A DARING RAID.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, June 4.—(Via Reuter's.)—Our operations in the neighbourhood of Vieux Berquin were completely successful and has given us some high ground and two farms which had been converted into machine gun positions. Our casualties were light although the enemy resisted with considerable obstinacy. Our raid to the east of Tilloy on Saturday was a most daring enterprise and we penetrated the enemy's line to a depth of more than a thousand yards and cleared out four hundred yards of German trenches, bombing all dugouts and blowing up heavy trench mortars which had been troublesome. Prisoners estimated that an entire German company had been wiped out.

AMERICANS IN ACTION.

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, June 4 — American troops have struck their first blow in the new battle of the Marne.

Fighting side by side with the French, they hurled back a German force which rushed the southern flank of the river the first time the Marne has been crossed by the enemy since early in the war.

WILL ADD ANOTHER STOREY TO PLANT OF CAMPBELL FLOUR MILLS.

With the greatly increased business the Campbell Flour Mills Co. have found it necessary to extend their present plant on George Street. For this purpose Mr. Blackwell is at present working on plans to add another storey to the three-storey building, where new and up-to-date machinery will be installed very soon. Mr. Fair, superintendent of the company, stated that alterations are necessary to meet the heavy demands for wheat products.

The New Home Treatment For Ugly, Hairy Growths

(Boudoir Secrets.)

Here is a simple, yet very effective method for removing hair and fuzz from the face, neck and arms: Cover the objectionable hairs with a paste made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. Leave this on for 2 or 3 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and the hairs have vanished. No pain or inconvenience attends this treatment, but results will be certain if you are sure to get real delatone.

French Aerial Forces Have Regained Mastery Of The Air

(By Henry Wood—United Press)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, June 4.—French aviators, regaining complete mastery of the air, dropped 63 tons of bombs on German troops concentrations back of the Marne battle field, Saturday and Sunday, it was learned today.

The principal attacks were directed against bivouacs and machine gun positions in the concentration regions of Fismes and Oulchy-le-Chateau.

One squadron commander sent more than fifty machines against a column of marching Germans, five kilometres (three miles) long. Charging like cavalry, the airmen descend to within 35 feet of the ground discharging bombs and machine gun bullets on the column until it was completely routed.

Balloons Destroyed.

During the first week of the Marne drive, the French brought down 23 Hun air planes while six "Sausage" balloons were destroyed in the region of Rheims in one day alone.

Everywhere the French squadrons are successfully breaking up columns of Germans marching to the front.

Reconnoitring planes keep the French commanders informed every fifteen minutes of the precise location of the Boches, together with their density and the direction of their movements.

An artillery observer near Rheims discovering three German tanks descending on Rheims from Brimont (five miles north) opened fire with an anti-tank battery. The leading tank was struck squarely and set afire. The others trundled away and sought shelter behind some farm buildings. The battery continued firing and soon all the buildings were ablaze. The occupants of the tanks were observed running northward. The two tanks were not seen again and persumably were destroyed.

The Germans employed tanks in Saturday's attack on Fort Pompelle. French cannon destroyed one, piercing it three times, four others were destroyed or captured. One machine gun forced two tanks to surrender.

STEPS HAVE BEEN TAKEN TO RESTORE BALANCE OF TRADE

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, June 4.— As a further measure toward readjusting the balance of trade and easing the exchange situation, the government, on the recommendation of Sir Thomas White, Finance Minister, has placed an embargo on gold coin, fine gold bars and gold bullion unless a license is obtained from the Finance Department. This action, coupled with the embargoing of a large list of imports, which will become effective shortly, will, it is anticipated, have a salutory effect on the exchange situation.

Non-Essentials.

Interviewed on the matter to-day Sir Thomas White stated that the people of the Dominion were consuming too great an amount of imported goods, particularly of the class which go in the category of non-essentials. They were also, he stated, consuming and using more than is necessary of other goods which, in moderate quantities, are essential. The result of the direct importance of the goods which are not actually needed is that exchange with the United States is against Canada and that Canada gold has been flowing out to pay the adverse balance. Within the past few weeks he said, four million dollars in gold had been shipped to New York for this purpose. If this process were allowed to go on Canada's gold reserves would be seriously depleted. The prohibition of gold exports has, therefore, been determined upon. Coupled with the prohibition of a long list of imports which, it is believed that Canadian people can readily do without unless the exchange improves. As a result of the measures the Minister hints that the list of embargoed imports will have to be largely extended as we cannot afford to lose gold or borrow at the high rate now prevailing in New York to correct an adverse balance of trade brought about by needless expenditures of the Canadian people for imported goods, of a class which are not essential in war times.

"Our gold reserves," the Minister concluded, "are the basis of our financial situation and must continue to be conserved against external drain as they have during the entire period of the war."

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I noticed in your issue of the Examiner last night, a paragraph from a soldier's mother to the G.W.V.A. and their action of calling on the government for a law providing a license for stronger beer.

Now sir, in the first place I should like to ask one question, why were the soldiers entitled to vote on compulsory service in Canada and not on the prohibition of liquor Is that a square deal on the men who sacrificed everything for those who stayed behind and were afraid to don the khaki uniform and then waited until our gallant boys got away before they had the nerve to suggest and even vote for the prohibition of liquor.

Why should a returned man have to suffer after sacrificing what he has and gone gamely into the scrap and not stayed at home till he was called on. Once again I ask is this fair play to those men and why shouldn't a man be entitled to a glass of beer if he wishes it. He spends his own money and has even bled for those who try to cut off such a mere trifle as a glass of beer.

Thanking you, sir, for this space in your valuable paper, I am,

One of the Boys Who Have Done Their "Little Bit."

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—In Monday night's Examiner it is stated that Mr. Burnham, M.P., got my daughter a position in the Post Office which should have gone to a returned soldier. I knew nothing of the appointment until my daughter got a notice from the "Civil Service Commissioner" that she had passed her examination, and was appointed to the vacancy in the Post Office at Peterborough. Mr. Burnham had nothing to do with the appointment, which was made, I understand, in accordance with the new policy of placing all appointments to the Service under the Commission, which now controls both the inside and outside service.—Yours truly,

H. P. Lindsay.

The Examiner did not say that Mr. Burnham got the position for Miss Lindsay. It simply called attention to the appointment, suggested that such positions should be filled by returned soldiers, and advised Capt. Burnham to investigate the case as a possible subject for lecture material before the G.W.V.A. Miss Lindsay has passed her Civil Service examinations, and is qualified to do the work. The only objection is that if there are men who have seen service in France ready to fill such positions, they should get the preference. In the particular case referred the returned soldiers have been passed over.—Editor of the Examiner.

Editor of the Examiner:

May I point out for the benefit of your unknown correspondents in last night's issue who wrote about the Great War Veterans' Association and the temperance question, that at the recent convention of the Great War Veterans of Ontario, held at Hamilton, it was emphatically decided that the G.W.V.A. should not take any stand on the temperance question, and, as a result, the matter was not discussed by the convention.—Yours sincerely,

Sidney Whatley,
Secy. Peterborough Branch G.W.V.A.

STOMACH TROUBLES ARE DUE TO ACIDITY

Tells Safe, Certain, Speedy, Relief For Acid Indigestion.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache, and inability to retain food are in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach causing the formation of gas and acid indigestion

Gas distends the stomach and causes that full oppressive burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excessive development or secretion of acid.

To stop or prevent this souring of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralise the acid and, make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after eating or whenever gas, sourness or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments and is a perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use.

An antacid, such as bisurated magnesia which can be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form enables the stomach to do its work properly without the aid of artificial digestents. Magnesia comes in several forms so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia which is especially prepared for the above purpose.

Opening Of The Trent Canal

HAS MANY ADVANTAGES.

Some of the advantages of the Trent Waterway may be enumerated as follows:

First: It is shorter and more direct than any other, except the Toronto and Georgian Bay, which from its great cost, may be set down as impracticable, from Chicago and the Sault Ste. Marie to the seaboard, whether via Montreal and Quebec or Portland or New York.

Secondly: It passes through a rich and fertile country, and presents fewer engineering difficulties, and could, therefore, be constructed for a much smaller cost than either of the other proposed routes.

Thirdly: Being at least two degrees farther south than the Ottawa route, it would have the advantage of being open for two or three weeks longer every season.

Fourthly: Its terminal harbors would be large and commodious—particularly that at the mouth of the Trent, having on one side the Bay of Quinte and on the other but a short and comparatively inexpensive cut, the Presque Isle Bay—the safest and most commodious harbor on Lake Ontario and the River St. Lawrence.

The advantage of the Trent Canal, in point of distance, may be estimated by the following figures:

From Chicago to New York, via Buffalo and the Erie Canal, 1,615 miles.

From Chicago to New York, via the Welland Canal and Oswego, 1,638 miles.

From Chicago to New York, via Huron, Nipissing, Ottawa and Caughnawaga Canal, 1,358 miles.

From Chicago to New York, via Georgian Bay, Valley of the Trent, and Oswego, 1,232 miles.

From Chicago to Montreal, via Lake Nipissing, 1,005 miles.

From Chicago to Montreal, via the Georgian Bay and the Valley of the Trent, 1,003 miles.

It will thus be seen that in point of distance to New York, the Trent route has the advantage over the Nipissing and the Ottawa route by 126 miles; while between Chicago and Montreal the distance is in favour of the Ottawa route, by 28 miles, an advantage, however, more than overbalanced by the intricate and difficult navigation of the latter.

One of the ablest speeches that has ever been delivered on the practicability and desirability of the Trent Canal, and its possibilities as a factor in through transportation, was made by Mr. R. R. Hall, of this city, while a member of Parliament for West Peterboro. Mr. Hall, who had given the Trent Canal and its future a most careful study, in addressing the House on the matter, amongst other things said:

"The consumption of coal in the city of Peterboro last year (1910) was 43,430 tons. The rate on coal from Suspension Bridge to Peterboro by rail is $1.25 a ton. Coal is delivered in Oswego at 15c a ton cheaper than at Suspension Bridge. The freight between Oswego and Trenton or Port Hope is 25c a ton, and the rate between Port Hope and Peterboro by rail, though only a distance of 30 miles, is 80c a ton. On coal alone, the freight from Trenton to Peterboro were the canal completed, would not be less than 25c per ton. On that basis there would be a clear saving on coal to Peterboro of 75c a ton, or on the amount consumed last year, a total saving of $32,500."

THE WATER POWERS.

The most pronounced feature coincident with the opening of the Trent Canal and closely allied with its engineering prospects is apparent in the rapid development of the abundant water powers of the basin which the canal traverses for three-fourths of its length. Rising in the remotest parts of the Highlands of Ontario, the Trent waters are collected by half a dozen important tributaries, and poured turbently into the long chain of the Kawartha Lakes, covering approximately a area of 75,000 acres, and whose mean elevation above Lake Ontario is 550 feet.

From this huge reservoir the water drops in a succession of falls varying from 10 to 75 feet in height, and scattered uniformly along the river's course to its outlet at Trenton.

From these waterfalls about 100,000 h.p. is being made available on water wheel shafts and 75,000 h.p. delivered in the industrial centres as electric energy.

The economical generation, control and distribution to points of demand of this very large quantity of power by the various original individual proprietary interests, was manifestly impossible. As a consequence, the exigencies of the situation evolved a single comprehensive system whose modern and standardized hydro-electric stations dot the map from Burleigh Falls to Trenton.

Mr. R. C. Strickland of Lakefield, contributes the following interesting information concerning the Trent Canal. The letter which follows is self-explanatory:

Lakefield, June 3, 1918.

Editor Examiner, Peterboro:

Dear Sir: Your paper informs me that the Trent Canal is completed between Lake Simcoe and Lake Ontario, and your city is about to celebrate the opening.

Therefore it may not be out of place to recall a little bit of history that had much to do with bringing about this satisfactory result.

In the early seventies, after considerable correspondence with the late Mossom Boyd, Sr., I collected the following party: John Burnham, M.P., George Hilliard, M.P., John Carnegie, M.P.P., Major Boulton, Reeve, Lakefield, and drove them in my three seated sleigh to Bobcaygeon, where we met Mr. Boyd and a few other gentlemen at his residence. A meeting was organized and it was unanimously decided that a very strong effort should be made to get the government to build the Trent Canal; and to gain this end the Trent Canal Association was formed with Mr. Boyd appointed as president.

This association tilled the ground, and sowed the seed, the fruit of which the public are now about to reap, and I alone am left to tell the tale.

Yours truly,
R. C. STRICKLAND.

COUNCIL NAILS LID TIGHT ON SUNDAY RESTAURANT LIFE

Hours Fixed For Meals and After That the Blinds Will Be Down—Stalls Must Be Removed

The restaurants were effectively shorn of the greater part of their Sunday business when the Council last night affixed to the eating house by-law the amendments which have been under consideration for several months. Without a dissenting voice, the restrictive clauses become law, and henceforth the Sunday evening seekers of ice cream and other eats must be satisfied with sticking their noses into the city's water around at the police station instead of poking a long straw into a glass of froth. And if they must find some excitement they may circumambulate the main street and watch the automobiles buzz by, all the time remembering that it is strictly "verboten" to loiter on the corners or along the curb.

The amendments grant some respite to those unfortunates who, having no homes of their own, must depend upon the restaurants for their food. Hence, the hours during which the "beaneries" are tolerated on Sunday are as follows: Breakfast 7 a.m. to 10 a.m.; dinner, 12 a.m. until 2 p.m.; and supper from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. After that hour the ungodly can take to the parks and woods.

The amendments also provide that music shall not be played in restaurants on Sunday, during the appointed meal hours; the stalls must come down, lavatories will be provided, and there must be no bedroom on the same floor as the dining room nor where food is served or cooked. The penalty for failing to comply with these regulations is the revocation of the license.

Earlier in the session of the Council Mr. Joseph Wearing, representing the Boston Cafe and three Chinese restaurants, made a plea in their behalf. He disavowed any desire to lessen the observance of the Lord's Day, but he declared that the measures the Council contemplated would create a hardship not only on the restaurant proprietors, but to many persons who take their meals down town. The hours proposed by the Council were arbitrary, he said, since many persons took their meals later on Sunday than on any day in the week.

Mr. N. Douros stated that a large part of his business on Sunday night was from 10 until 12 o'clock, when about thirty workmen took their meals.

However, when the Council reached the by-law stage of the meeting, the Sunday squelching of the restaurants was unanimously approved.

A G.W.V.A. Petition.

A communication from the Great War Veterans' Association, asking for the exemption of returned men from the city's poll tax was sent on to the Finance committee.

Monaghan Wants $617.94.

A letter from Peck Kerr & McElderry, solicitors for North Monaghan demanded that a cheque for $617.94, plus interest from January 1st, 1917, be paid at once. This represents the city's share of the cost of road work on Monaghan road.

Mayor Duncan stated that the city had a bill against the township for more than $300 for the care of patients at the Isolation Hospital. Monaghan disputes this contra account. Dr. Amys and Dr. Greer, Medical Officers of Health of the city and township respectively, had agreed to discuss the city's bill against the township, but have as yet failed to come together.

Action was deferred last night until after the next meeting of the Board of Health.

To Insure Soldiers.

London, Ont., Council has passed a resolution urging the government to initiate an insurance system for soldiers similar to that adopted by the United States.—Referred to the Finance committee.

Firemen Grateful.

Writing in behalf of the firemen, Chief Grange thanked the Council for their recent bonus and promised them their best service.

Windows in Sidewalk.

An application from R. Neill, Limited, for permission to put glass prisms in the sidewalk in front of the new store on George street was granted, the work to be done under the supervision of the City Engineer, or as Ald. Edgar suggested in the phraseology of the new building by-law, "under Clauses 4 and 5 of Section 99."

Ald. Dobbin remarked that Chief Grange had proposed that all sidewalk gratings should be easily opened allowing immediate access to the cellar. Ald. Jones stated that thirty square inches of prism glass cost $80 and it was out of the question to think of breaking this glass to force a cellar entrance in the event of a fire.

Board of Trade Representatives.

The Board of Trade notified the Council that its representatives to the city's Technical school committee are: W. R. Breyfogle, V. Eastwood, Rev. C. J. Phelan, B. F. Ackerman and R. Sheehy, and to the Railway committee A. J. Grant, P. L. Allison and G. O. Cameron.

1917 Roll Completed.

Tax Collector Green sent the following note: "I have the 1917 roll completed by banking balance, on hand to-morrow the 4th inst. Kindly allow City Clerk Armstrong to hand over the 1918 roll as soon as the 1917 roll is audited."

To Rebuild Sidewalk.

Reporting on Mr. R. Hicks' request that the sidewalk in front of his residence be raised, City Engineer Parsons recommended that the walk be relaid from Bethune street to Stewart street. The cost is estimated at $253. Half this sum would be required to raise the walk in front of Mr. Hicks' house alone, but if only this stretch were relaid, the walk between that point and Stewart street would remain lower and water would continue to gather there in a channel in the spring.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre moved, seconded by Ald. Jones, that the walk be relaid from Bethune to Stewart street as recommended by the City Engineer.

Given a Coal Chute.

The Kingan Hardware Company wrote that, due to lack of space, they wished to use the space under the sidewalk on Simcoe street for a coal bin. This needs an iron coal chute and Ald. Weir moved seconded by Ald. McIntyre, that the company be permitted to insert the chute in the sidewalk.—Carried.

To Trim Trees.

The Bell Telephone Company asked permission to trim trees on Charlotte street, from Park street to Monaghan road, also on part of Monaghan road and Concession street. These trees interfere with long distance wires and seriously hamper the service. The company offered to pay $3 a day to a superviser, to be appointed by the city, under whose direction the trimming would be performed.

City Engineer Parsons reported that in some places these long distance wires pass through trees which in a high wind sway the wires and interrupt the telephone service. On Monaghan road, however, some young trees might be killed if cut.

The communication was referred to City Engineer Parsons.

To Repair North End Streets.

Ald. Worth moved, seconded by Ald Jones, that Fairbairn and Langton streets be graded and repaired under an agreement with Smith township and that the city pay its share of the cost.—Carried.

On Ald. Saunder's motion it was decided to grade and clean up Wolfe street west of Park street.

Wanted the Fire Engine.

Capt. White applied for the use of the fire engine to pump out two scows at the Wolfe street wharf. Ald. Jones moved, seconded by Ald. A. A. McIntyre, that his request be granted, but Ald. Edgar opposed the request on the ground that it was creating a dangerous precedent.

"The ratepayers are entitled to all the fire protection it is possible to give them, and if we let the pumper out of the hall anything might happen in the meantime, and there would doubtless be other requests similar to Mr. White's.

The motion was lost.

Aztec Relics Unearthed.

Announcement of the recovery of 70,000 specimens of prehistoric Aztec civilization from the famous "Aztec ruin" in the Amas valley in northwestern New Mexico has been made by the American Museum of Natural History. Work of excavation has been in progress since the summer of 1916, funds for which have been provided by Archer M. Huntington and J. P. Morgan.

The scene of the exploration was once a typical pueblo, or great fortified house and village, and although the work of unearthing the hidden treasures is only partly completed, what has thus far been found within the crumbling walls so long hidden from human view has exceeded, it is said, the most sanguine hopes of the investigators.

Necklaces of shell and tortoise, agate knives, pottery vessels of various forms and ornamentation, cotton cloth and woven sandals are among the finds reported by Mr. C. Nelson, assistant curator of the museum and Earl H. Morris, in charge of the exploring party.

Enough masonry in the ruin was uncovered to have built a wall half way from New York to Philadelphia.

Food of Perfume.

The Arabs around Aden love powerful perfumes, and are highly skilled in their preparation. Their favorite is called "oodi." It is made from a wood called "ood," and is so powerful that when burned in incense pots the smoke will impregnate the garments of those present to such an extent that the perfume will remain upon them for days, even after they have been laundered.

Coal Gas for Locomotives.

Experts in the employ of the Government of Brazil believe that country can utilize its own coal by using gas producers in connection with stationary engines and briquetting it for locomotives.

MADE POINT BY PARABLE

Chancellor Quick to See Truth in Tale Related to Him by Wandering Traveler.

Lee, the chancellor of the kingdom of Han, was plotting to murder the king. Su, a wandering traveler, came to visit him, and introducing himself as follows:

"Your humble servant, Su, wretched and poverty-stricken, possessing not even a feeble horse and an old buggy, has left his aged parents at home, tramped through the dust, braved the frost and snow, crossed River Tsarn with the sole purpose of seeing you and offering you humble advice. Will you give him the privilege of speaking to you?"

The chancellor, knowing the speaker's intent, answered maliciously:

"Any word about men I am tired of listening to. But if you can tell me something about ghosts and spirits, I will be overjoyed to hear you."

"That is just what I would like to tell about sir," returned Su, and he continued: "When I was tramping on my way here I lost my direction one night in a lonely forest. Weary and exhausted, I could find no place to rest. I had no blanket, no mattress, only a chilly, misty vapor wrapped around me. I hid myself in the tall grass. By my side stood a bulky tomb. Faintly I heard a quarrel between a wooden doll and a clay doll as to which was the superior in quality. The clay doll droned the following argument:

"'I am molded out of clay. If, perchance, I am ruined by swift wind or bitter rain, I can return to my home, to Mother Earth. But as for you, you are carved out of the branch of a tree. You have been severed from your own root. When you face swift wind or bitter rain, you will be thrown into the Tsarn river, carried eastward to the sea, to the ocean. Then where will be your abiding place? You will float and drift for eternity.'

"I, the traveler, listened and wondered, and felt that the clay doll was without question the winner of the dispute.

"Now, your honor is plotting against the king and the royal family. Do you realize that you will kill off your own root and destroy the very foundation of your power?"

"Remain with me over night, and I will talk some more to you to-morrow," said the chancellor, after a moody reflection.—C. Y. Tung, in Chinese Students Monthly.

An Actor In Khaki.

A good story is told of a young actor enlisted in Canada, and in his difficulty what was more natural than that he should turn to his profession for help, for he had been trained with the greatest actors in the land. He practiced in seclusion, and one day, when his trained recruits had been drafted and a new batch had appeared, he strode to the job in the full panoply of the Cockney drill sergeant, pungent with the wit and wisdom of the Mile End Road. He never had a greater success in any part, and if his points were not applauded they were promptly obeyed.

Father—I can't understand why you want to be a prizefighter.

Son—Easy! Because it's all prize and no fight.—Judge.

Songs are sung to the brave and fair
Over the foaming beer and wine,
So why not a toast to that hardy pair—
The Andiron boys on the firing line?
—Life.

Jimson—I do spring cleaning at all seasons of the year.

Jackson—How's that?

Jimson—I'm a watchmaker.—New York American.

DR. GARFIELD ACTS TO END SALE OF DIRT FOR COAL.

Washington, D.C.—The persistent efforts on the part of the coal operators to dump unclean coal on the market has resulted in action on the part of the Fuel Administration. This practice was a cause of general complaint last year some of the coal being of character which rendered it only a few degrees removed from dirt. The same practice is going on this year.

The Fuel Administration has issued an order against the practice and announces that disregard of the order will result in the coal being promptly thrown back on the shippers. In addition to that further drastic action will be taken.

AN APHORISM FALLS DOWN

Genius has not yet been able to utter an aphorism that would hold good in every instance. "Familiarity breeds contempt," they say. Every notable poet, essayist or artist whatsoever has left a tribute to his mother, either by personal tribute by dedication or through symbolism, of love for his mother. Yet no other man has ever found such expression, however sublime, that could measure up to his own idea of his mother's virtues. And where is familiarity so pronounced as between mother and son?—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

TRENT CANAL WAS OPENED LAST EVENING BY HON. J. D. REID MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS

Visitors Were Late in Reaching the City and the Central Park Meeting Had To Be Cancelled—Party Made a Trip of Inspection to the Quaker Oats Company's New Plant

The Trent Canal was formally opened last evening by the Hon. J. D. Reid, Minister of Railways and Canals. The Minister with a party of Government officials, arrived in the city about seven o'clock last evening and was met at the George street wharf by the city officials and also Mr. Robert Stuart, of Chicago, head of the Quaker Company and Mr. W. H. Denham, local superintendent of the company. Dr. Reid and his party were shown through the new Quaker Oats plant and at eight o'clock the visitors had a birdseye view of the city from the roof of the nine storey main building.

At the Banquet.

Following this the party was directed to the Empress hotel, where a banquet was tendered to the visitors by the city. In formally opening the Trent Canal, Dr. Reid expressed his astonishment at the magnitude of the work and the possibilities which the completed waterway represented. He was followed by Mr. R. R. Hall, who gave a stirring picture of the work, which had its inception eighty-five years ago. "We have grown old in service, but we have lived to see a part of the work completed," said Mr. Hall. The speaker said that the opening of the northern end of the canal would provide a means of transportation from the west. Mr. Hall was followed by Mr. Burnham, who recalled some of the difficulties that stood in the way of an earlier completion of the waterway.

A meeting that was to have been held in the Central Park was cancelled owing to the lateness of the hour at which the party reached Peterborough.

Hon. Dr. Reid and his party left for Lindsay this morning. Mr. Robert Stuart, Mr. W. H. Denham and Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., are with the party.

SUFFERED TERRIBLY WITH HER HEART

Would Wake Up Smothering

The terrible smothering and choking up sensations and sinking spells, the feelings of dizziness and faintness that come over those whose heart and nerves are deranged causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in cases of such severity.

Mrs. A. M. Powell, Norval Station, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered five years with my heart and nerves, but the last two years I have suffered terribly. If I went to bed I would wake up as if I were smothering. I did not get one night's sleep out of seven. I got so very weak that the doctor was called in, and he said it was my heart, and that I must take great care of myself. I saw your advertisement in your almanac for Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and said I would try them. I have only taken two boxes of them and I feel a new woman. I will recommend them to anyone afflicted with heart trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

GRAIN MARKET

The oats and corn took a strong up turn yesterday. July oats at Winnipeg closed at 2 3-4c higher and corn 2 3-8c higher at Chicago. The move up in corn at Chicago was apparently due in part to a flurry on account of the submarine operations off the United States coast. A change to cooler weather may also have been a factor in the moving up of both corn and oats as these markets of late have been subject entirely to weather conditions.

Cattle markets

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards: Receipts yesterday, 20 cars, with 376 cattle, 173 calves, 286 hogs and 40 sheep and lambs.

The market is again very firm and last week's decline in cattle prices has been fully recovered, choice butcher and heavy steers again selling at top records for the past few markets. Receipts were very light and were mostly held over for to-day's market.

While cattle are strong the hog market has suddenly given indications of the bottom falling out Monday's threatened cut of $1.50 from last week's fed and watered price was an accomplished fact yesterday with the prospects that still lower prices are in sight. Dealers were advised of lower markets across the line.

Other small meats are firm.

Dead Sure

Hundreds, yes thousands, of people testify to their bettered health after changing the table beverage from tea or coffee to Postum. They are sure of it; they know it, for they have tried it and proved it. What better testimony could there be?

Instant Postum

is free from caffeine, the harmful element in tea and coffee, and is a pure, delicious, health-making drink. It is economical, requires little sugar, and is made in the cup, just as wanted.

Postum may help you, as it has the others. Suppose you try a tin from your grocer.

WAR GARDEN BULLETIN

Issued by the Canada Food Board in collaboration with experts on the staff of the Dominion Experimental Farm.

Practical Daily Guide For Vacant Lot and Backyard Gardeners Enlisted in Greater Production Campaign.

GET READY FOR CANNING.

Although it is still early in the season be forehanded in your preparations to take care of the fruit and vegetable crops. Don't wait until July before ordering your canning outfit or preserving jars. Don't wait until the vegetables become overgrown, old, tough or stringy before you can them.

Make this a record canning and drying year. That is one of the objects of your war garden. And start early. Pickle your beets right now.

Conservative estimates show that 5,000,000 gardeners can produce the equivalent of enough food to sustain 1,000,000 soldiers for 238 days, or almost eight months. Each individual home gardener this year should make it a point to study the comparative food value of the different vegetables, and to concentrate on those which add most to the country's food supply. Cabbage for instance, is 98 per cent. water and requires at least 100 days to become fit for food. On the other hand, beans represent food in highly concentrated form, mature readily and the dry product is easy to keep.

Don't forget about the second planting of beans and corn some day this week.

Vogue of Initials.

That the new vogue of initials is as bewildering as a writer in the New York Statesman suggests is made abundantly clear by reports of committees dealing with the Prince of Wales' fund. Those who have been initiated into the mysteries of its administration and are familiar with the terminology in use may know that W. C. does not indicate the west central district, but means war committee; that N. R. F. signifies national relief fund, and that L. R. C. is meant local representative committee. But even they must be baffled by the problem set by such a procession of initials as G. C. P. R. D., and fail to guess that what is suggested by them is government committee for the prevention and relief of distress.

Eagles Historic in the Navy.

When Secretary Daniels christened Henry Ford's submarine chaser "Eagles" he perpetuated a name that is historic in the navy. According to naval records 15 American fighting ships bearing that name have distinguished themselves in the Revolutionary war, the naval war with Africa, the War of 1812, the Civil war and the Spanish war.

Registration a Stupendous Task

One Day — SATURDAY — June 22nd

The task undertaken by Canada to register every male and female, British or alien, of 16 years and over, residing in the Dominion, is of stupendous proportions. The machinery that has been created is most comprehensive in its scope, and the information procured through this registration will be in such form as to make it possible for Canada to mobilize every available unit of human energy, either in the "First line of defence" or at home in support of her Allies.

Five million people will have to be registered in one day. It is estimated that one hundred and fifty thousand workers will be required to take this registration, or an army five times the size of the first Canadian contingent.

It will require at least six minutes to register one person. A Deputy working continuously can take only ten registrations per hour, or eighty for an eight hour day. On Registration Day the booths will be open fifteen hours; the Deputies therefore will have to work in two, possibly three shifts.

In order to make registration convenient and easy, 25,000 places of registration will be established throughout Canada, with from one to twelve booths at each place. The location of these booths will be advertised by Proclamation and through the local press.

Canada will be divided into 230 districts, each in charge of a Registrar, who is instructed to surround himself with a competent staff of deputies and assistant deputies in whatever numbers the work may require.

Volunteer Workers Urgently Needed

To carry out this vast programme efficiently and completely, intelligent voluntary helpers are essential. Individuals, women's societies, clubs, fraternal societies, church organizations and municipal organizations are asked to help.

The Board appeals with confidence to the patriotism of every Canadian man and woman and to the pride which every locality must take in doing its own work well, to furnish the necessary number of volunteer deputies and assistants.

Interpreters of all languages will be required. Those qualified should apply to the Registrar of their district at once.

NEEDS IRON
AT TIMES
To help strengthen her nerves and put color into her cheeks.
There can be no beautiful, healthy, rosy-cheeked women without iron in the blood. The trouble in the past has been that when women needed iron they generally took ordinary metallic iron, which often corroded the stomach and did more harm than good. I always insist that my patients take only organic iron—Nuxated Iron. This particular form of iron is easily assimilated, does not blacken nor injure the teeth nor upset the stomach. It will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, irritable, careworn, haggard-looking women in two weeks' time in many instances. I have used it in my own practice with most surprising results.—Ferdinand King, M.D.
NOTE: NUXATED IRON recommended by Dr. Ferdinand King can be obtained from any good druggist who will guarantee success or return your money. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

HOME AGAIN

CHAPTER LXXXIV.

We had a simple and very quiet dinner on the train, then, as we were all pretty well tired out, we went to bed. The train reached Moreland early in the morning, but I was awake long before it was time to get up. I lay thinking of David—how I should miss him. It had been a perfect joy to have him, in spite of my fear that he would feel that I was neglected and would tell mother so.

We had breakfast at home. Then, as soon as George had left for the office, David and I walked over to see Evelyn. She made us tell her all about our trip, and was delighted with the handkerchiefs I had bought her.

"I suppose you will be going away soon?" she said to me.

"Yes, in about ten days. I dread it."

"Isn't she foolish?" Evelyn said to David. "The idea of dreading a trip to Newport and Bar Harbour!"

"I, too, think your trip will be a nice one—your vacation, rather," David responded. "It will be awfully jolly to boat and fish."

"The boys are great for out doors," I told her.

"Have you seen Merton, lately?" she asked me. "I met him about three days ago, and he said he was inconsolable because you had gone to New York. He is anxious to work on the picture."

"I have a sitting to-day. Don't you and David want to walk up there with me and see how the picture is getting along? I'll telephone Celeste she needn't go with me to-day, if you will."

"I'd love to! Perhaps Merton will ask us to luncheon again. Have you met him?" she asked David.

David is Frank.

"Yes, the first night I came. He seems to like Sis. He said a lot about her picture and sort of bragged about her."

"You silly boy," I interrupted, embarrassed.

"Merton does like Helen. We all do," Evelyn said.

"Stop talking about me and come on. Merton will be cross if I am late." So, talking and laughing, we all three went to the studio.

"Do you suppose you can keep quiet, with so many looking at you?" Merton asked after he had greeted us, and scolded me a bit for running away.

"Oh, yes, I don't mind David nor Evelyn, half as much as I do you," I confessed, then blushed furiously because I had said so.

"I . . . have missed . . . you," he said so low the others did not hear.

I took the pose he suggested, my mind in a whirl. Why was I so pleased that he, Merton Gra., successful artist and popular man about town, should miss me? I concluded it was because he had been the first, almost the only man, who had made me feel at ease when I first came to Moreland.

David and Evelyn sat in the bow window looking at a book of etchings. The studio was very quiet when Robert, Merton's man, came in and spoke quietly to him. Merton frowned, but nodded assent. In a moment there was a soft rap a swish of skirts, and in came Madge Loring and Julia Collins.

The draperies at the window effectually hid David and Evelyn. I saw Mrs. Collins look around, then saw a sneering look, followed by one I could not understand. It was as if she were pleased at something.

Jumping to Conclusions.

"I see you've dispensed with Celeste. I don't blame you," she said. "It is much more cozy, here, by yourselves. Then, French maids aren't to be trusted."

"What do you mean?" I said quickly, my face flushing, my heart thumping so it seemed they must hear it.

"Oh, don't get excited! I only meant that even innocent things look on an air of romance to the French servant."

Suddenly I was very cool. I shook my head at Merton. He had been about to speak, to explain. I knew that was in his mind, by the way he glanced toward the window.

"Yes, I think you are right," I said coldly, remembering how pleased Mrs. Sexton had been when I had come out ahead of Julia Collins once before by keeping cool. "And you surely should know: Celeste told me she had a friend who worked for you as private maid. And, you know, French maids talk to each other."

Merton turned away to hide the smile trembling on his lips, and Mrs. Loring broke in.

"What are you two scrapping about? I can fairly see your claws Julia."

"Oh, pardon me!" I exclaimed, "but I so want you to meet my brother, David!" I called. "Come and meet some of George's friends. My brother, David Milner, Mrs. Collins, and Mrs. Loring." I purposely spoke of him first, instead of following the correct manner of presentation. "And Evelyn, come out from behind those curtains! You know both ladies. If we had a French maid here, she would say that you and David had some sort of an affair. I am sure! Wouldn't she, Mrs. Collins?"

PIGEON SAVED AVIATORS.

Thrilling Experience of Flight Commander Leckie, D.S-O.

How Flight-Commander R. Leckie, D.S.O., again proved his mettle by the rescue of two aviators from a seaplane fifty miles from the North Sea coast, after they had been exposed to the buffetings of waves and weather for no less than four days, is modestly told in a letter received by Mr. Robert Leckie, of Toronto, who is proud to be an uncle of the intrepid young birdman.

After telling of the difficulties experienced in fighting Zepps owing to their ability to rise to extreme altitudes, the letter proceeds:

After having been under shell and machine-gun fire for almost an hour, I found myself facing the necessity of making a landing between 50 and 75 miles out at sea to rescue the crew of a land machine which had dropped in the sea through engine trouble. After getting the pilot and passengers aboard my craft, I found it impossible to get off again owing to the rough sea, and the fact that the hull of my "boat" had been struck by shrapnel at a height of 10,000 feet, and was fast making water.

"I will not describe the horror of the days that followed, days spent in watching, waiting, and nights in dirty watches." No food at all and water at the rate of one eggcupful each day, until the small allowance gave out, then the muck from the engine radiators. All the while the seaplanes gradually broke up. Also we were compelled to bale incessantly to keep afloat. During this time our base was quite unaware of our fate, though patrols were sent out searching for us.

"As you may know most long distance patrol seaplanes carry homing pigeons aboard. I had four of them with me, and it is to the splendid endurance of one of these birds that six ment to-day owe their lives. On Wednesday I released a pigeon, carrying a message to the base giving our position and cause of trouble. On Thursday a second bird was released carrying a similar message. On Friday morning a third bird was sent, and knowing that we could not last much longer, our remaining pigeon was released on Friday afternoon carrying an S.O.S. signal.

"The first three pigeons failed to reach England, but the fourth was a winner. He failed to reach his loft, it is true, but reaching the English coast about twenty miles north of our base, almost instinctively it would seem, picked out a coast guard station and fluttering into the court yard fell dead from exhaustion. At the cost of his own life he delivered his message and thus saved ours — we were picked up by H.M.S. —— the next day."

Mealie Pudding.

Like the haggis, the mealie pudding is to the Sassenach a Scotch delicacy the origin of which is wrapped in deepest mystery. The other morning two travel-stained English Tommies dropped into the restroom at Aberdeen station for some much-needed refreshment. They were heartily welcomed by the ladies in charge, and in a few minutes a succulent mealie pudding, piping hot, was placed before each. Both had seen more than a bit of life since joining the army, but a mealie pudding was one of the things hitherto undreamed of in their philosophy. Determined, however, to brave the unknown, one of them boldly cut his pudding in two, scooped out some of the contents, and took a mouthful. As he slowly masticated the eatment a look of contentment came over his features. "Go ahead, Bill," he exclaimed, "it's only good old porridge in a tank."

FACE NOTHING BUT RUNNING SORES FROM ECZEMA

No rest day or night for those afflicted with that terrible skin disease, eczema, or, as it is often called, salt rheum.

With its unbearable burning, itching, torturing day and night, relief is gladly welcomed.

There is no remedy like Burdock Blood Bitters for giving relief to such sufferers; no other remedy has done, or can do so much for those who are almost driven to distraction with the terrible torture. Apply it externally and it takes out the stinging, itching and burning, and promotes a healthy healing.

Take it internally and it gets at the source of the disease in the blood, and completely and permanently drives it out of the system.

Miss Mary V. Chambers, Anagance Ridge, N.B., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters for eczema. I had it when an infant, but it left me. Two years ago it came back. I used doctors' medicine, but it did good only while I used it. At last my face was nothing but a running sore. I saw in the paper what B.B.B. did for people. I took it, and to-day I am free from that terrible disease."

Their New Home?

Who says there is difficulty in finding quarters in Washington?

There is a colored family in this town that recently disagreed with itself. Mrs. Jones—we call her that—decided to leave Sam Jones, so she took the seven children and left suddenly one day for her old Virginia home.

Sam suddenly found himself bereft.

It cannot be said that Sam mourned. Fact is, he was pleased.

That was why he mourned when he read the following post card one morning:

"Meet your family at Union Station at 4:15."

Up in the Air.

"You were yelling in your sleep last night."

"Yes. I dreamed dat I was floating around in de sky."

"Why, dat ought to have been a pleasant dream."

"No; I dreamed I was run over by an airship."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Benny's Quest

By VICTORIA LEE

"And it is so lonely!" mourned Miss Huldah Morse, "and if it wasn't for dear little Benny here I should fairly die of ennui."

"Dear little Benny," inspecting a toy whistle the lady bountiful speaker had just brought him, pricked up his ears, came up to Miss Morse, kissed her on the cheek and said expansively: "Wish I lived with you all the time! Everybody says you're the good lady, and it makes me proud to tell them I know you bestest!"

"You sweet little cherub!" praised Miss Morse, with true affection for the little fellow. "Yes, Mrs. Woods, it's dreadfully lonesome. I am really thinking of selling the place and boarding."

"Too bad, Huldah," spoke Mrs. Woods, "what you need is a husband."

Miss Morse flushed and fluttered, murmured something about being "fated for a single life," and "no one wanting her." Hers was a gentle, affectionate nature, and she had often wished it had been her part to have met some loving life partner upon whom she might lavish care and tenderness. Love had not come her way.

Bennie lived with his aunt, who had several children of her own. When Benny's mother died, Mr. Rankin had left the child in her care. He was a traveling man and only saw Benny when he returned from his long business trips. Miss Morse had never met him, but his sister had told him of the strong, fond companionship of the twain.

"Guess I'll get right at it," soliloquized Benny as he left the house, ignored his playmates and proceeded several squares, serious faced, thoughtful and on the keen lookout. He finally hailed a portly, contented looking gentleman sauntering along the street.

"Mister," spoke Bennie, satisfied with his appearance, "do you want to be a husband?"

"Do I—what?" queried Bennie's victim, with a stare.

"Yes, sir, I am looking for a husband for a very beautiful lady."

"Sorry, little man," smiled the gentleman, "but I'm a husband already."

"Ooh!" muttered Bennie disconsolately. Then he came across a second object of interest, lounging outside of a store. Bennie began his stereotyped inquisition, but passed in the middle of his first query.

"No, you won't do," he observed, half to himself. "You've got a mussed up collar and you don't look clean, and Miss Morse is neat," and left the man in a maze of mystery.

Bennie returned home, weary and disappointed. "I haven't found any husband yet," he ruminated, "but tomorrow I'll go down to the depot, where there's crowds sometimes, and pick one out."

But Bennie was not destined to fulfill his mission. He awoke the next morning in a weak and fevered condition. At noon Mrs. Woods sent for a physician, who announced that Bennie had symptoms of an infectious disease.

"You must allow me to remove Bennie to my home," insisted Miss Morse. "You mustn't risk your own children, Mrs. Woods."

So the loving two were practically quarantined. Tender was the care of Miss Morse through strenuous weeks of nursing. Glorious was the career of little Bennie when days of convalescence arrived. With them came his father, and his grateful expressions made Miss Morse feel that her ministrations had been worth while.

"Papa," spoke the little fellow one day, when they were alone in a room, "I can't get down town for a week yet, the doctor says."

"Not alone, Bennie," answered Mr. Rankin.

"Then maybe you can do something for me—something I didn't finish when I was taken sick."

"What was that, Bennie?"

"I was to have found a husband for Miss Morse."

Mr. Rankin looked grave, fearing the fever was coming on again. Then he smiled broadly, as Bennie explained.

"But how do you know Miss Morse really wants a husband?" he questioned.

"Oh, she got red in the face, and looked beautifuller than ever, and said no one would care for her when Aunty said she needed a husband."

"I wonder," said Mr. Rankin, whimsically, yet half in earnest, "I wonder if I would do."

"H'm!"

Miss Morse in the next room, an unwilling eavesdropper, apprized her guests of her undesirable proximity.

"Oh, papa, if you would do!—wouldn't that be famous! And we could both live here! And Miss Morse makes such fine cakes and jellies!"

Arthur Rankin arose, a sudden impulse swaying him. He approached the doorway of the next apartment. Miss Morse sat pretending to read a book, but her face was red and she looked truly beautiful.

"Miss Morse," he spoke earnestly, "we need not feel embarrassed over a strained position. You must have overheard Bennie. May I consider myself an eligible candidate of his quest?" and quick-witted Bennie, a few minutes later catching the echo of a kiss, warbled forth hilariously:

"There, that's off my mind, anyway!"

A Complete Job.

Edith—Well, if she accepted your dowers, your bon-bons, your bracelet, your caresses, she must have accepted about everything of yours.

Jack—She did; she even accpeted my rival.

To drive a tank, handle the guns, and sweep over the enemy trenches, takes strong nerves, good rich blood, a good stomach, liver and kidneys. When the time comes, the man with red blood in his veins "is up and at it." He has iron nerves for hardships—an interest in his work grips him. That's the way you feel when you have taken a blood and nerve tonic, made up of Blood root, Golden Seal root, Stone root, Cherry bark, and rolled into a sugar-coated tablet and sold in fifty-cent vials by almost all druggists for past fifty years as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This tonic, in liquid or tablet form, is just what you need this spring to give you vim, vigor and vitality. At the fag end of a hard winter, no wonder you feel "run-down," blue, out of sorts. Try this "Medical Discovery" of Dr. Pierce's. Don't wait! To-day is the day to begin! A little "pep," and you laugh and live.

ST. CATHARINES, ONT.—"Several years ago, when convalescing after a serious illness, I took a half dozen bottles each of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Favorite Prescription as tonics. I cannot praise these medicines too highly for the benefit I received—my health was completely restored. I always take pleasure in recommending these two of Dr. Pierce's remedies."—MRS. FLORENCE LOGAN, 33 Beach Street.

AMONG TOMBS OF MONARCHS

Shaft Will Be Erected on Scottish Coast to the Memory of United States Soldiers.

Nature has built on several of Scotland's western islands great stone shafts that are viewed with wonder and admiration; man has erected on others many columns and monuments that are renowned in art and history. To mention notable examples, the natural may be seen in the basaltic pillars of Skye and Staffa, the artistic in the memorials to Scottish, Irish and Norwegian kings in the burying ground of St. Columba's isle, Iona. There will shortly appear amid this concourse of records a monument altogether novel, a new-world monument, by which America will signalize the memory of her young soldiers of freedom whom Germany's submarine devilitry drowned in the adjacent waters. On this knoll a lofty monolith of imperishable granite will be raised in honor of the brave who went to death undismayed and self-controlled.

Islay was the chief seat of those fighting chieftains, the lords of the isles, who began in the twelfth century their incessant warfare with the Norsemen, and the title of the island princes has descended to the Prince of Wales. Quiescent past and stirring present seem to meet on this picturesque island. If the shades of the old-world kings ever visit the royal tombs at Iona, they need look south but 30 miles to see a towering sign of the making of new-world history.

When, at fourteen, she went to school
The boys, a lot of chattering parrots
And not too courteous, as a rule,
All called her "Carrots."

A few brief years passed o'er her head.
Love proved himself a true magician—
The boys found out that fiery red
Is "brightest Titian."

Edwin R. Hisey, the undertaker, and C. L. Dietz, the broker, are brother Rotarians. One stormy day recently Hisey, while returning from Crown Hill with his motor hearse, saw Dietz standing on a corner way up Meridian street. Hisey stopped the hearse and shouted to Dietz:

"Going down, Lew?"

Dietz stared at his hospitable friend and replied:

PLEA FOR "FOOLLESS" DAY

Movement to Abolish Stupid April First Jokes Surely Would Meet With General Approval.

In connection with the movement for "less" days it is up to some patriot who has the highest interest of the nation at heart to launch a campaign for a foolless first of April.

Individuals, like automobiles, are not foolproof, and Mr. Absent Minded, who from time immemorial has been a much-fooled man on the fatal day, would rise up and call congress blessed, instead of calling the members thereof names, as he now does, if that body would busy itself with legislation abolishing the April-fool jokes that wreck tempers, ruin dispositions and work havoc generally.

On the other hand, Mrs. Absent Minded would probably fight to the last ditch against any curtailment of the privileges of jeering derisively at her husband when he puts salt in his coffee, cracks an egg which proves to be only a shell, finds the lining of his overcoat sewed up, picks up some stage money on the doorstep and starts to work with a box of soap camouflaged as candy in his pocket to munch after lunch.

As a result the sons of dignity will probably have to endure the annual disturbance of their mental equilibrium in order to keep peace in the family.

Man Dumb From War Now Talks.

Parents of Walter Jones, a soldier of Glen Cove, L. I., who has just returned from France, answering a telephone call from New York, heard the voice of their son, whom they supposed was dumb as the result of shell shock. In the trenches in France a shell exploded within a few feet of Jones and he became unconscious. Several of his comrades were killed by the explosion. When Jones regained consciousness he was deaf and dumb. He was sent back to America for treatment and on the ocean trip homeward the vessel was attacked by a submarine. The excitement of this shock is said to have restored both his speech and hearing.

He Was Sure of It.

Tom Hood, the punster, once described the meeting of a man and a lion, and in doing so he said, "The man ran off with all his might and the lion with all his mane."

The "only girl he ever loved"
Gazed deep into his eyes,
And, though he was not then reproved,
She fathomed all his lies.

He swore his love would never grow cold
Despite misfortune's frowns.
She wondered if this suitor bold
Could buy her hats and gowns.

The Indian Runner of To-day Was the Marathon Messenger of Yesterday

Both typify strength, easy running, reliability and endurance under strain.

What Marathon and the Indian represent in human power, Dodge Wood-Split Pulleys represent in mechanical power—strength, easy running and reliability under strain. To these qualities may be added the efficiency that comes from economy.

Compared with metal pulleys, Dodge Wood-Split Pulleys cost 40% less to buy and 50% less to operate, because they deliver 50% more horse-power from a given amount of coal. They do away with "belt slip" and "weight friction."

With coal at its present price it will pay you handsomely to replace the metal pulleys in your plant with Dodge Wood-Split Pulleys.

Aviator's Lingo.

The air service, like most special branches, has its own vocabulary. An officer of flying status, but who for some reason does not fly, is called a "penguin." This name is also applied to a type of training machine which does not rise from the ground. An officer in the flying service without flying status is called a "kiwi" after an Australian bird. A pilot is generally called a "quirk." A flight is called a "flip," and if it is a distinguished failure it is called a "washout." An airplane is usually called a "bus." The great hope of the airman is to "spike-bozzle," or bring down a "Zepp," or one of the smaller nonrigid dirigibles they call "blimps." The airman's pest is the "onion," or large flaming anti-aircraft shell which "Archie" sends up as a sort of bouquet—with sometimes an unpleasant smell. "Archie" is the general name for the antiaircraft gun.

Pains Followed The Nerves

From the Feet to the Top of the Head — Could Not Attend to Business For Five Months—Gaining Strength Every Day.

Bowmanville, Ont., Feb. 16.—A great number of people in this district have been trying out Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with splendid results and none are more enthusiastic than Mr. Allen.

His nervous system had become so completely run down that he had to give up his usual occupation and he suffered keenly from neuralgic pains which would dart along the nerves, causing keen distress.

But he found a cure and does not hesitate to recommend it to others. This is his letter.

Mr. Samuel Allen, Coleman Street, Bowmanville, Ont., writes:

"Last summer I suffered from a severe attack of nervousness. I was laid up, unable to attend to my business, for five months. I would be taken with pains which commenced in my feet and ran right up to the top of my head. I had frequent dizzy spells, sometimes so bad that I would fall over from dizziness. At last I commenced a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and they proved of such benefit to me that before long I was able to return to work. I am still using the Nerve Food and gaining strength every day. I can heartily recommend them to any one suffering from nervous trouble of any kind."

This letter is endorsed by Mr. John Lyle, J.P.

GRIZZLY BROOKS NO RIVAL

Testimony of Hunters Proves That He Is Beyond Question Supreme in His Own World.

The grizzly was once the monarch of the Western ranges, says Walter Prichard Eaton, in Harper's Magazine. Nothing disputed his title till man came with the rifle. Of man the grizzly now has a most intelligent fear, except in places where he is protected and fed. Fierce and formidable fighter that he is, he doesn't fight man unless he is driven to it, but with the keenness of his tribe (the bear is one of the most intelligent of beasts) he avoids danger so far as possible, and has developed much cleverness at it.

The testimony of all Western hunters agrees on the great caution a grizzly uses before crossing an open or approaching a dead horse or cow put out for bait, frequently charging all the bushes around to drive out possible foes in ambush as a preliminary to feeding. That the mountain lion is a real foe of the bears our hunter denied. The mountain cat is a coward. Once, he said, he had put out a dead horse for their bait, and watched from a tree two lions feeding on the carcass.

A grizzly (called a silvertip by the hunters) approached, shouldered in between the lions and began to feed also. As one fat grizzly can take up considerable room the lions resented this third party at the feast and drew off snarling. Then one of them came back and evidently clawed the intruder or hit it. The bear, which had one fore-paw employed, swung with the other, caught the lion a tremendous blow and knocked him 50 feet down the slope. Then Mr. Silvertip resumed his repast as if nothing had happened. He did not even look around to see how far the lion fell or what he was going to do when he got up. Evidently the bear felt quite sure of his position. He was justified in this confidence, for the lion rose and with his mate sulked, snarling, off into the timber.

The man who told this story had been a mountain hunter from boyhood, and he is, furthermore, an uncommonly sharp observer whose knowledge has been more than once employed by the federal government. There is no reason to doubt the accuracy of his tale, which seems to bear out the statements of other hunters that the grizzly is supreme in his own world, even contemptuously so.

Hero of Naval Disaster.

The man with the smile and the cheery word, the one who can lift the spirits of his fellows in the hour of danger—here is the man of heroism. And it is for just this quality that praise is given to Lieut. John K. Richards, U. S. N., who was one of the officers on the torpedo destroyer Jacob Jones. The reports of her sinking brought a thrilling story of her commander, her officers and his men, of their bravery and loyalty to the last moment, all equal to the best traditions of the American navy. Lieut. Richards, the gunnery officer, was left in charge of all the rafts. At this post it was noticed that through all the ordeal he was cool and cheerful, putting heart into the men about him and making them all more able to stand the strain. Lieut. Richards is a native of Ironton, O., and was born in 1891. He entered the naval academy in 1907, and five years later was made ensign. In 1915 he became a junior lieutenant and was temporarily appointed lieutenant in 1917.

Lift Off Corns Doesn't Hurt!

Few drops stop soreness, then corn or callus lifts off with fingers

The world owes thanks to the genius in Cincinnati who discovered freezone.

Tiny bottles of the magic fluid can now be had at any drug store for a few cents. You simply apply a few drops of freezone upon a tender, aching corn or a hardened callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose and shriveled that you lift it off with the fingers. Not a bit of pain or soreness is felt when applying freezone or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the skin or flesh.

For a few cents one can now get rid of every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, as well as painful calluses on bottom of feet. Everyone who tries freezone becomes an enthusiast because it really doesn't hurt or pain one particle.

Ladies! Keep a tiny bottle on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

HE COULDN'T RAISE HAND ABOVE HEAD

Rheumatism Disappearing Rapidly Since Taking Tanlac Says Ottoway

"I was so badly crippled up with rheumatism that for two years I could hardly put on my shoes, but Tanlac has helped me so much I can now bend over and touch the floor with the greatest ease," said Sidney Ottoway, an employee of the Massey-Harris Company, and living at 196 Emerson Ave., Toronto, the other day.

"When I came to Canada about seven years ago," he continued, "I was in such an awful condition that I was just barely able to get around. My left knee would sometimes swell to twice its natural size, and be so sensitive that I couldn't even bear the weight of my clothes on it. My legs would get so stiff at times that I could hardly walk and I couldn't stoop over to pick up anything on the floor. I suffered such agonies from a steady throbbing pain in my limbs that I thought it would drive me distracted and I just couldn't get any rest. My shoulders were so stiff that if I tried to raise my arms above my head, my back would hurt like it would break in two. Every few months I would get so bad off that I'd have to stop work for two or three weeks, and I have been laid up for as much as eight and ten weeks at a time. I tried everything I could get hold of but nothing did me any good.

"One morning when I woke up with my left ankle so swollen and painful that I couldn't walk a step I said to my wife, 'Well, I've taken everything but Tanlac, maybe I'd better try that next.' So my wife went out and got me a bottle and by the time I had finished it and half of my second bottle I was able to go back to work, and I haven't lost a day since. I am on my fifth bottle now and my wife said to me the other day, 'You seem to have forgotten that rheumatism now.' 'Sure,' I said, 'I feel so fine since I began taking Tanlac that I hardly ever think about it.' And it's true, too, that stiffness has all gone from my joints and I can put on my shoes and bend over to the floor just as good as I ever could. My legs and shoulders are free from all pain, and I don't have any trouble walking or doing anything else I want. For a man who had suffered from rheumatism as long as I had, to be so quickly relieved is the most wonderful thing I ever heard of, and I am certainly glad to tell everybody that Tanlac did it."

Much Ado About Nothing

By F. A. MITCHEL

Phyllis and I had recently become engaged. I was a practical sort of a fellow and was inclined to discuss how we were going to live. Would we keep house or board? If we kept house where was the furniture to come from? There were plenty of such matters to talk over, but Phyllis did not seem inclined to discuss them. With her the question of how well I loved her, would I always love her, had I ever loved any one else, engaged her thoughts. At any rate this was what she was continually harping on.

Since she would not discuss practical matters I was forced to talk about what I considered trifles, though they were very delicious trifles, inasmuch as all my assurances to her were re-enforced by kisses. One day when the kisses were plentiful I said to Phyllis:

"Have you ever been kissed by a man before?"

"Certainly not."

"That's very lovely," I replied with another kiss.

"Have you ever kissed a girl before?" she asked.

The innocent creature.

"I cannot tell a lie," I said. "I have."

She looked a trifle disappointed.

"A long time ago?"

"I am sorry to say I kissed a girl within a week."

I was holding her hand, she withdrew it as if mine were a hot coal. I expected to see a tear in her eye, but I did not. She was hurt but she was also offended. There was just enough man in her to keep back the tears.

"Forgive me," I replied. "If you should see those pouting lips, you would not blame me."

"I knew it," she said with heaving breast. "I have all along feared that in such matters you are not trustworthy."

"It is my only fault."

"Your only fault! It is the worst fault a man can have; that is one his wife or fiancee would consider his worst."

"The temptation was very great," I pleaded.

There was an awful silence for some time, then she said in a tone of bitter disappointment:

"I should think that you would not care to kiss a girl who would permit you to kiss her, unless you were engaged to her."

"That's the girl's lookout, not mine. If she don't mind I don't."

"But by kissing her you influenced her."

"On the contrary she influenced me."

"You mean that it was all her fault. That's just like a man; he is always easy to throw all the blame on the woman."

"I solemnly aver that I was not thinking of kissing her. She put up her lips to be kissed and—well, I just kissed them. I couldn't help it."

Without a word Phyllis rose and left the room. I called to her to come back; that I had an explanation to make; but she paid no attention to me. Her mind was in that peculiar state of a girl who has just become engaged, ready to take fright at the slightest appearance of unfaithfulness to her on the part of her betrothed. I think that more engagements would hold if the parties were separated the day after the betrothal and kept apart—without correspondence—till the wedding.

There was nothing I could do—at least for the present—to undo the damage I had done. Phyllis had left me, deaf to my recall, and would not come back. I cursed myself for a fool. I was to go away on a business trip for the firm I was with early the next morning, and would have no opportunity to plead for forgiveness. While I was away Phyllis might do something to separate us forever. I thought of going to my employer and asking permission to delay my departure. But what reason could I give him? That I had had a spat with my sweetheart and wanted an opportunity to make it up before it became any worse? Likely he would have accepted the reason, but I did not propose to give such a one. I took a train the next morning.

I could have written Phyllis an explanation, but I feared that on cold paper she would not believe it. I was only to be gone a week and concluded that the safest plan was to let the matter rest till my return.

I confess that it was a week of anxiety for me, and it must have been one of misery to Phyllis. On reaching home I wrote her a note saying that the girl I had kissed would go with me the next evening at seven o'clock to plead my cause with her. I received no answer but I expected none.

On the appointed evening I appeared as I had said I would with the girl I had kissed.

Phyllis came down from her room evidently resolved to listen to no lame excuses. On entering she saw my little niece, Alice, four years old. Alice put up her lips to be kissed.

"That's the way she accomplished my fall," I said. "Now can you blame me?"

"You should be ashamed of yourself," said Phyllis as she took the child into her arms.

Then I took Phyllis in my arms.

Arthur Feust, consulting engineer from Utah, breezed into New York and attended a banquet at the Engineers' club. Several of the guests were the McLean kilties of Canada.

A feature of the menu was squab on toast, and one of the Scotch veterans, after asking what it was, proceeded to cover it well with tabasco sauce. He ate a couple of bites of the burning liquid, and then, with a low cry, put down his knife and fork.

"Lay thaur an' bur-r-n," he said. Then turning to the waiter called: "Aye, mon, I've had eneuch o' this. Gie's a sheilin's worth o' ham, wie ye? An' say, laddie, bring a bucket of ice water."

Wide Interest in Astronomy.

There can be no doubt that there is just now a great awakening of public interest in astronomy. Renewed evidence of this, if any were needed, is afforded by the secretary of the American Association of Variable Star Observers. About a year ago, we carried in this column a brief note describing the aims and needs of the association, and appealing for additions to its corps of volunteer observers all over the world. Within one month the secretary states that he had received 58 replies to this very modest little notice.—Scientific American

His Share of Work.

A group of people who were touring Alaska one summer were disgusted at the laziness of the buck Indians they saw in the villages and along the trail. One day when they were taking a side trip they came upon a couple of Indians who were evidently packing into the mountains to stay a while. The squaw was staggering under a tremendous burden. She lugged all of the bedding and provisions and a pappoose for good measure. The old buck was slumping along lazily ahead of her, smoking his pipe and looking down at the trail. One member of the tourist party hailed the Indians, and when they stopped he inquired, somewhat out of patience: "See here, buck, how comes it that Nikkawana is carrying all of the baggage and you are slouching along, enjoying your pipe? Why don't you take at least half of the load off your squaw, you big, lazy Indian?" The buck stood silent as a sphinx for a few moments, then he grunted to himself and pointing his index finger to his forehead, he exclaimed in deep guttural tones: "Huh, me all time think!"

The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 21.

THE STATEMENT READS.

The enemy attempted a raid early this morning southwest of the Morlancourt under cover of heavy bombardment. He was repulsed, leaving prisoners in the hands of the British."

On northern outskirts of Carlepont Wood two German attacks stopped by fire from French machine guns other efforts in region of Autreches, east of Dommiers and near Corcy also were broken up. Willing To Converse

British Labour Leader Makes An Important Statement Concerning Attitude of Labour Party

POLICY ENUNCIATED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, (via Reuters, London), June 5.—"We are willing to converse, but not to negotiate with German labour," says Arthur Henderson, Labour leader in the House of Commons, in a statement referring to an announcement made by Chester M. Wright, which implied that the policy of Mr. Henderson and his party has been radically modified. Mr. Henderson emphasized the fact that the policy of Allied workers is not that of compromise on any essential issue and still less of surrender to militaristic and imperialistic Central Powers. Nor will they accept a cynical peace on the basis of the military stalemate he said. What they want is peace of reconciliation and understanding in harmony with principles, of international justice and right of nations to freely determine their own destinies.

GERMANS HAVE BEEN COMPLETELY CHECKED ON WEST

Present Battle Line Creates Many New Difficulties For the Enemy

A NEW DRIVE?

(United Press Service.)
(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES AT THE MARNE, June 5.—The Germans have been completely checked in the new battle of the Marne.

Following the successful resistance to all enemy attacks yesterday and Monday the battle has now reached a point where the Allies are holding the Germans on the entire front between Noyon and Chateau-Thierry. Any serious effort to advance elsewhere on the front apparently has been abandoned.

70 Divisions Employed.

Further progress by the Huns is unlikely until they throw in their last reserves. With a total of 210 divisions (2,520,000 men) on the west front, the Germans are now employing nearly 70 divisions (840,000 men) between the North Sea and Noyon, and between 40 and 50 divisions (480,000 to 600,000 men) between Rheims and Switzerland, and, having engaged about fifty divisions in the present battle, between Noyon and Rheims, they still have many divisions in reserve.

The Present Week.

The present week undoubtedly will develop whether Ludendorff intends to engage these last reserves in the present drive, and make this the decisive battle, or will allow the present battle to become stabilized and hold these reserves for a fresh drive elsewhere. In the latter event, he would again seek to obtain the advantage by a third surprise attack toward Amiens or the coast or some other offensive calculated to gain decisive results.

Five Sectors.

The new battle of the Marne can be divided into five sectors, where the Germans are now obliged to concentrate their efforts toward a fresh advance. Sector one is on the extreme right of the German south of Noyon; it consists of high wooded hills in the region of Carlepont, barring access to the Oise. The enemy is trying to capture these hills. Sector two consists of high, denuded plateaus between Carlepont and the Aisne with tween Carlepont and the Aisne with slopes of the plateaus towards the Aisne. The Germans were checked at the summit of the plateaus. Sector three comprises the Soissons region, including the Aisne Valley. Sector four consists of high plateaus in the region of Ourcq. Sector five is the Chateau Thierry region, and includes a high plateau above the Marne Valley.

Other Objectives.

German onslaughts on these five sectors, where Allied resistance is now the strongest, aim at three great objectives, facing their right and left wings and centre. In sectors one and two, comprising the Germans' right, they seek to attain the Valley of the Oise, south of Noyon, down which they would filter toward the junction with the Aisne, near Compiegne. The latter city is their first immediate object. In sector three the Germans have two great objectives. The first is that of progressing westward along the Line Valley to attain both the Oise and Compiegne. The second is either the encircling or the capture of Forest and City of Villers-Cotterets. In sectors four and five, comprising their left wing, the Germans seek to advance toward Paris along the Valleys of the Ourcq and Marne, with Meux (25 miles west or south of Chateau Thierry) as their first great objective. For the moment the German

Recruiting Appeal in Ireland Must Be Followed by Generous Measure of Home Rule

IRISH SITUATION

(Canadian Press.)

London, June 5.—Special despatches from London, while setting forth that the recruiting appeal of Lord French is generally regarded as showing a spirit of moderation and good will, concur in declaring that as far as the Nationalists are concerned it is not likely to meet with much response, unless it is reinforced by the passage of a generaous measure of home rule.

A strong feeling exists that French would not have launched the appeal if he had not been certain that it would be followed by home rule. Much is said to depend upon the support of the Catholic clergy. With their support, says the Daily Mail's Dublin correspondent, the scheme may have a chance of success. Otherwise he predicts it will be useless, and he expresses the fear that the prospects of its success are not very big.

The $500 gold medal was awarded to The New York Times "for the most disinterested and meritorious service rendered by an American newspaper during the year, in having published so many official reports, documents and speeches by European statesmen relating to the progress and conduct of the war."

The Louisville Courier-Journal won a $500 prize for the best editorial article written during the year, and Harold A. TRENT CANAL WAS A REVELATION TO HON. DR. REID AND PARTY

Minister of Railways and Canals Greatly Impressed By its Magnitude, its Possibilities and its Beauty—Guest of This City at Banquet Last Night.

CANAL A DREAM COME TRUE

From the deck of the steam yacht Ramona to the roof of the nine story building of the Quaker Oats Company's new Peterboro plant, represents one lap in the eventful trip that was made by the Hon. J. D. Reid, Minister of Railways and Canals, and his party of government officials, who arrived in the city a few minutes before seven o'clock last night. The occasion was the formal opening of the Peterboro-Trenton section of the Trent Valley Canal, which gives Peterboro and northern points an outlet to Lake Ontario and Montreal.

The formality of opening the waterway took place in the Empress hotel, where a banquet was tendered to Hon. Dr. Reid and his party by the citizens of Peterboro.

"I want the people of Canada to know that it is a great waterway, and we have nothing to regret in connection with its construction, except that we did not complete the work sooner," said the Minister during the course of his address following the banquet.

The party was met at the George street wharf by a number of civic officials, and also by Mr. Robert Stuart, of Chicago, head of the Quaker Oats Company, and Mr. W. H. Denham, the superintendent of the local plant. The new three million dollar plant of the Quaker Oats Company, was the first objective of the party. The Minister of Railways and Canals was deeply impressed by the magnitude and completeness of the plant. "It is the finest industry I was ever through," he remarked later in the evening, at the banquet.

Mayor G. H. Duncan.

Hon. Mr. Reid and his party were then directed to the Empress hotel, where the formal opening of the waterway took place. Mayor Duncan, who presided, introduced the speaker of the evening.

This an auspicious occasion for Peterborough and for the whole Midland district of Ontario said Mayor G. H. Duncan in his introductory remarks. We are confident that when the Trent waterway is completed to the Georgian Bay it will be an important factor in transportation from the far west to the east. The already great volume of traffic from west to east, and from east to west, will increase to immense proportions, and every feasible route will be required. The Trent Waterway route will be very useful as soon as it is completed, and its value will increase with the growing traffic. The Erie Canal, before its recent enlarement, had a ccapacity for barges carrying 8,000 bushels of wheat, while the Trent Waterway, with some of the locks limiting the draft to 6 feet, has a capacity for barges carrying 18,000 bushels, and when the old locks are improved t the same depth as the newer and greater part of the works, the draft will be increased 8 feet and the capacity of the barges to 25,000 bushels. We know what an important factor in traffic the Erie Canal has been, and with its much greater capacity the Trent Waterway will be a much more important factor in transportation.

Not a Canal.

The Hon. rD. Reid has witnessed in the portion of the waterway over which he has gone said the speaker, that this waterway is not a canal—that it is a series of navizable rivers and lakes connected by locks and short pieces of canals. As he goes on

ONE HUNDRED PERSONS KILLED IN AN EXPLOSION

(Special to Examiner.)

PARIS, June 5.—One hundred persons were killed and fifty others injured in Monday's explosion in a war material plant at Baussens in southern France, says a dispatch from Marsailles today. The list of victims it is added is not yet complete.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, June 5.—The Associated Press war summary says this morning: "Allied defensive measures have broken the force of the German offensive in the salient south of Aitette and the enemy is now making only strong local attacks. Although recording "successful engagements" in its latest reports, for the first time since May 27 it does not claim any new advances to-day. Foiled by the French in their efforts to overcome the barrier of the Retz Forest, east of Villers Cotterets by frotnal attacks, the Germans attempted to outflank the position by assaults north and south of it. After slight gains, the French stopped them on both flanks. Between the Oise and the Marne the fighting continues heavier than elsewhere on the new salient and the French have improved their positions at some points.

Particulars Concerning The Death Of Pte. Ray Nelson

Peterboro' Boy Lost His Life While Acting as a Stretcher Bearer

LETTER TO HIS MOTHER

Mrs. Thomas Nelson, Otonabee, has received the following letter from a comrade of Pte. Ray Nelson, who enlisted with Lieut.-Colonel Johnston's unit. Pte. Nelson was only seventeen when he enlisted. He was killed in the struggle at Passchaendale. The letter follows:

Canadians,
France
May 4, 1918.

My Dear Mrs. Nelson,—I have been going to write you for many months with reference to your very gallant son "Ray," who died of wounds received while acting as stretcher bearer to his company. At the time it was not thought that his wounds would be serious, because he walked out of the front line to where the ambulance cars were stationed so that more serious cases could be carried. I dressed his wound, which was a small hole penetrating the cheek and back part of the throat and he seemed to be quite happy. He and I were chums and I was very grieved to hear of his death, which deprived the battalions of one of its best and bravest. Ray had done much good work as a stretcher bearer and the medical officer thought a great deal of him. Unfortunately the medical officer was killed the day that Ray was wounded.

If there is anything I can do to help you in your great loss, will you write me and let me know. Please accept my heartfelt condolences in your loss of such a splendid boy, who certainly saved many lives the day he lost his.

Sincere yours,
No. 111423 Corporal Powell,
5th C.M.R.,
C.E.F., France.

Mrs. Nelson has received many letters from returned soldiers informing her of Ray's gallantry in the field. One soldier, now in Canada, told his mother how Ray had at great peril to himself, carried him from No Man's Land to a dressing station at the rear.

CONVINCED THE MINISTER.

...he formal opening of the Trent ...nal from Lake Simcoe to the Bay ...Quinte, while not marked by much ...blic ceremony, because the lateness ...the arrival of Hon. Dr. Reid and ... party interfered with the pro...gramme arranged, must be considered ...as a most successful event, and one ...at means much for Peterboro. The ...rival of the first steamer from the ...per Lakes was a tangible proof that ... waterway is well on its way to ...mpletion, but more important still ...s the declaration of faith in the ...ssibilities of the canal, made by the ...inister of Railways and Canals, and ... promise that he would press the ...mpletion of the northern end of the ...nal as soon as conditions would per...t.

...Dr. Reid's confession that at first he ...d been inclined to regard the Trent ...nal as a joke, is an ample explana...n of the reason for the dragging ... of the work over many years. ...any other members of parliament ...ve held the same view, and appar...ly the deputations from the dis...s bordering the canal were unable ...disabuse them of this opinion.

...Dr. Reid, however, has been con...nced that the canal is a great money ...oducing waterway, and adds "We ...ve nothing to regret for the money ...t has been expended."

...That is most satisfactory, especial... if followed by government action as ...n as possible.

THE BLOCKADERS.

...The aldermen who blocked the pass... of the revised building by-law in ...uncil, after some of them had help... to draft it in committee, may be ...der the impression that they are ...mitting their duties as representa...es of the people, but their delusion ... not likely to be shared by citizens ...generally. In fact the impression seems to have been created that the blockaders, a number of whom are interested in the building trade, were more concerned in protecting their own interests than they were in looking after the welfare of the people who elected them. The revised by-law was prepared by a committee which, in addition to members of the Council, included representative contractors such as Messrs. Ephgrave, Bogue, Sherwood and Finnie, two insurance experts in the person of Messrs. W. H. Thompson and Alex. Weddell, and Fire Chief Grange. The object of the committee was to secure reforms in building that would cut down the chances of fires and minimize the loss in the case of a conflagration. The recommendations called for partitions in houses to be fire-stopped to the ceiling, for shingles to be laid on asbestos, for hot air pipes to be protected and chimneys lined with tile. These suggestions had been incorporated as measures tending to lessen the risk of fire, and any person with an average amount of common sense knows that such precautions are absolutely necessary in Ontario, a province whose annual fire loss is nothing less than a crime.

In the face of these facts we find five aldermen, some of whom are concerned as builders, deliberately blocking the by-law. The only reason offered was that such a measure would tie up building. That will hardly hold water. If a man wants a house built he is not likely to change his mind because regulations that protect not only him but his neighbours, are to be followed.

Ald. Langford characterized the by-law as drawn up on a New York scale. The blockaders, on the other hand seem to prefer to adapt their policy to village requirements. The measure will come up again before long and it is to be hoped that by that time some at least of the aldermen who opposed the by-law the other night will have given the matter some serious reflection and will have come to the conclusion that the passage of the by-law would be of great value to the city.

CIVIL SERVANTS IN UNIFORM.

The Examiner on Monday called attention to the effect which the new Order-in-Council in regard to civil servants on active service would have, instancing one case brought to the attention of this paper by the son of the soldier mentioned. In a letter published below from Mr. F. H. Dobbin, the information is given that the cutting off of the civil pay has been anticipated by the Patriotic Fund, and action has been taken. This will be re-assuring news to the wives and children affected, especially in the case the Examiner referred to where the family apparently had not been informed that any such steps had been taken. There may be other people in the same situation who will be glad to learn that the matter has been attended to.

Mr. Dobbin's letter is as follows:

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—Your editorial in reference to the cases of civil servants (postal clerks, letter carriers, etc.), in Monday's issue, leaves it to be inferred that these cases, as noted, have not had attention in anticipation of the cutting off the civil pay.

So long ago as six weeks, all this has been attended to by the Patriotic Fund office in this city, so far as dependents in this district are concerned. Several have called and have been advised that when on July 1st the civil amounts cease to be paid that the Patriotic Fund will, at once, for that month and onward, pay to the dependent the standard allowance as is paid now to dependents in this district. It is the business of the office to anticipate such changes, to institute the remedial course of substituting the fund allowance and see that the separation allowance is provided. All that has been or is and will be done.

Possibly it may be of interest to the public to state the reasons for the change. Such is not fully understood, and you do not give the explanation.

In 1915, to promote enlistment, the Department offered to give, in addition to the separation allowance and Patriotic Fund, to civil wage or salary of the civil servant enlisting. This was the rule for a time. Then an order changed the amount to that which would be the difference between the separation allowance and the civil pay, that is, deducting $20.00 from the civil pay. At that time the Patriotic Fund allowance was not paid.

Now a further order cancels all civil pays, both for postal clerks, Trent Canal operatives, or for any who enlisted and at the time were in civil service pay. All will be provided for on the same basis as the men on service, viz., will receive ordinary pay of $33.00 per month, the separation allowance of $20.00 per month and the Patriotic Fund. In fact several preferred to accept these amounts at time of enlistment rather than trust to an order that might be rescinded at any time the Government took the notion so to do.—Respectfully,

F. H. Dobbin,
Secy. Pet. Branch, C.P.F.

There can be no criticism of the manner in which the Patriotic Fund Committee has dealt with the matter, but there is no logical reason for the Government's breach of faith in dealing with its employees. He says that in order to promote enlistment civil employees were offered the wages of their positions, as well as military allowances, if they would enlist. They went overseas on that understanding, and then, having got them into uniform, the Government changes its policy.

EDITORIAL NOTES

New decorations are being issued to British airmen. The flyers have earned all the awards that can be given them.

The wheat crops report for the Saskatoon district show that the average fo rthe past five years will be surpassed this year.

The name "Ramona" should be remembered in Peterboro as that of the first steamer from the Great Lakes to reach this city.

Aldermen who do not favour the prohibition of the sale of gasoline on Sunday are not consistents in voting to restrict the sale of ice cream and other refreshments on the day of rest.

Judging by the fate of the building by-law, it is not hard to fore cast what would happened to the bylaw regulating restaurant keepers on the aldermanic board.

If letters carriers are needed for the post office and qualified returned soldiers are ready to take the positions it should not take the civil service commission a month or two to bring the two together.

Germans Have Been Completely Checked

centre comprising sector three and part of sector four, is the most important—first, because of the double objectives of Compiegne and Villers Cotterets, and second because the German right and left wing have advanced faster than the centre. The latter now forms a dangerous arc, where the enemy is forced to concentrate for the purpose of straightening the line.

A Successful March.

A successful march on Paris would involve the capture of both Compiegne and Meux, which emphasizes their extreme importance. On the right and left they would serve as bases for the departure of converging columns toward Paris along the Valleys of the Oise and Marne. But with the Germans' right completely checked, and the French steadily blocking the Germans' left, it is unlikely they will attain either as a departing point.

While the Germans are steadily feeding in reserves—the latest to be identified including Bavarians, Brandenburgers and Silesians—it does not appear that they intend to risk all in the present drive.

Gillespie Took 1365 Cheese At 22 1-4c. To-day

There were no flourishes to the cheese board meeting this morning. The factories offered 1365 boxes, and Mr. Gillespie secured the entire output at 22 1-4c. Mr. W. S. Cook bid that price for selections but Mr. Gillespie offered to take the whole board. All the factories sold to him as follows:

Cheese at Montreal.

Cheese exporters at Montreal are reported to be planning to handle forty million dollars' worth of business this season. It is stated that the low margin of ¾ of cent per lb. between the local board and ship board at Montreal makes it necessary to handle a large amount of business in order for the exporter to make any profit. On the other hand, farmers in cheese factory districts are strongly tempted to skim their milk and sell the cream at profitable prices for butter and ice-cream purposes. If this develops—and the hoarding receipts indicate that it is already developing—the result will be that the exporters will have to hunt pretty hard before they find their forty million dollars' worth of cheese at 23c per lb. In one week 27,730 boxes were received at Montreal, or 6,320 less than in the corresponding week of last year. This shortage indicates that the make will probably be considerably less than last year and that therefore the exportable surplus will show a serious decline. The Dairy Product Commission is paying the following prices: No. 1 cheese 23c, No. 2 cheese, 22¼c, No. 3 cheese, 22c.

A Number Of Important Matters Dealt With By School Board At Last Night's Monthly Meeting

Inspector Mowat Will Have Until Next September In Which to Look Into a Complaint and Report—School Attendance—Applications Received For Positions on the Teaching Staff

EXPLANATION FOR WAR VETERANS

Inspector Mowat was called upon for an explanation of a statement made by Mr. W. Jarvis, who in a letter read at the Board of Education meeting last night, stated that while he and his family had removed only on May 1 slightly outside the city limits, they were charged outside rates of $2.40, where the former fees for the four children at the Queen Alexandra School were 60c; other families outside the limits had for years been taxed city rates.

Mr. Mowat explained that to his knowledge only one family outside the city had city rates, and this was an extraordinary case of necessity.

Mr. Mowat will look into Mr. Jarvis' complaint and report in September.

School Attendance.

The report of school attendance showed an average of 91, the South Central, as usual, though condemned as unsanitary, showing the highest average.

	On Roll.	Aver.	%
Collegiate	261	231
Central	445	404	91
Queen Alexandra	301	276	92
King Edward	478	439	92
Queen Mary	462	427	92
King George	4271	2324	93
South Central	441	41	93
Total	2604	2211	91
Kindergarten	254	220	87

Fire drills had been held in all schools. Mr. Kenner stated that the unusually small attendance at the Collegiate was due to the fact that 65 or 70 pupils had left to work on farms.

Applications Received.

Mr. V. F. Watt, Miss D. Y. Meikle, Miss D. J. Pilling, Mrs. Hattie Jackson, Miss E. G. Lee, Miss A. M. L. Stillson, and Miss Edna Stubbs applied for positions on the Public School staff. One application was received for the Collegiate.

Mr. Stacey Resigns.

Mr. W. J. Stacey's resignation on the Public School teaching staff was received and accepted.

Will Explain.

An explanation will be sent to Mr. S. Whatley, secretary of the Great War Veterans, of the reasons the Board had for not allowing the Veterans to canvass the schools on tag day. In discussing the refusal, Mr. Gordon said he could see no good reason for denying Red Cross or War Veterans the privilege of an outside canvass. Mr. Patterson disagreed, and stated that he is much opposed to allowing a school canvass. The parents contributed, and that should be sufficient. Mr. Worth said that as the I.O.D.E. had been allowed to canvass the schools, discrimination should not be shown to others.

Denied Statement.

The text book contract for Public School supplies was awarded to R. J. Soden. The Review, which had also tendered, had failed to comply with the request that a $100 cheque should be enclosed. Mr. Stratton, in a letter before the Board at last night's meeting, stated that his cheque enclosed last year had taken a year to be returned, and had enclosed a cheque for this year's tender in this letter.

Mr. Patterson said that Mr. Stratton had told him that the inspector had asked him to tender to try to break into this ring which monopolized the tenders. This, Mr. Mowat stated, was not so, and it was presumed the inspector referred to, was a former one.

King Edward Sewer.

Mr. Fowler reported considerable trouble with the King Edward sewer, which had backed up and was not given a proper outlet. He, after a conference with Mr. Parsons, advised a change to a West out-take pipe. The condition is at present serious and dangerous, and a change necessary. The property committee will take action.

Other Communications.

Mr. Kenner reported that as the Departmental exams start on June 15, the Collegiate must be closed June 14, five days earlier than usual.

Mr. Dobbin wrote thanking the Board for the use of schools for registration.

C. P. Huffman and W. Avery, caretakers of the South Central, asked and received an increase of wages, as their work had become increased. The Property Committee will look into their request.

Mr. Mowat's request for desks for the school-room to be opened in St. James' Church was left to the Property Committee.

The appointment of a truant officer was left with the Committee of Appointments.

Photos Presented.

Two enlarged photos of fallen heroes have been presented to the Collegiate by the parents of the young men, formerly P. C. I. students. These were Lieut. Fred. Cressman, presented by Mr. A. W. Cressman, and Driver Millard Brooks, by Mrs. J. M. Brooks.

Trent Canal Was A Revelation. etc.

to Lake Simcoe he will see this demonstrated more fully, and this feature of the waterway will make it still more useful as a means of transportation. Another fact should also be born in mind. The distance from the Sault to Montreal by this route is shorter than from the same point to New York by the way of the Erie Canal by over 400 miles, and there will be a great saving in time. It is also about 250 miles shorter from the Sault to Montreal by this waterway than it is by the Welland route. We are still looking forward to the opening of the waterway to the Georgian Bay and to the benefits that will then accrue to Canada from this great work, and we hope that, when the Hon Dr. Reid has completed his inspection that we will not have long to wait. But this occasion is not at all one for only lookin gforward.

Open to Lake Ontario.

The waterway is now open to Lake Ontario, and this important fact has been demonstrated by the arrival here of steamers from Ottawa and from the St. Lawrence and by the fact that the Minister has come here by the waterway. We rejoice in that fact that we are very glad that the Minser's first visit to Peterborough has been on such an important occasion, and we are glad indeed to welcome him. The opening of the waterway to Lake Ontario will be of great benefit to a large territory. There are connecting navigable waters and the completed portion of the waterway and connecting navigable waters have a shore line of nearly 1,000 miles and have within ten miles of the shore lines an area of six million acres rich in agricultural, mineral and forest products. The value of these natural resources has been increased by the opening of navigation and the manufacturing industries will be benefitted. There are large water powers yet to be developed on the route, and greater industrial development can now be expected.

Pioneer Work.

While we who are here rejoice in the completion of this work to Lake Ontario, there are men whom we remember to whom a great credit is due for the time and labour they have expended in advocating and urging the construction of this waterway, said Mayor Duncan. We recall with gratitude the work done in this connection by such men as John Carnegie, James Stevenson, George Hilliard and the Hon. James R. Stratton, and one of these men, who in the days that are past laboured to bring about this day is still with us in the person of D. W. Dumble. To these men, and to others in Peterborough and in other places along the rotue, we owe much for the way they took up the advocacy of this project in the eighties and pressed it upon the attention of the Governments of the Dominion. We are glad that this day has come. We are greatly pleased that the Hon. the Minister of Railways and Canals has shown his itnerest in the work by making this inspection of the opened waterway aind that he has stayed with us this evening. We know that his interest will be deepened by what he has seen and what he will see, and that he will be a still stronger advocate, in his powerful position as Minister of Canals, of the opening of the waterway to the Georgian Bay. Canada has had many able heads of that great department, from different provinces of the Dominion, but we are pleased to welcome as its present head a representative from Eastern Ontario who knows our wants, shows himself to be a live, capable administrator and who has a grasp of the needs of the country and will see that those needs which come under his jurisdiction are adequately met, said the Mayor in conclusion.

Hon. J. D. Reid.

In his opening remarks the Hon. J. D. Reid referred to the early stages of the Trent Canal scheme and confessed that at one time he was inclined to look upon the project as a joke whenever the matter came up in the House. As a result of the trip from Trenton to Peterborough, he had been converted and was more than convinced that the project was a worthy one and justified the expenditure and the confidence of its promotors.

"I have heard about this canal many times in the twenty-seven years I have been a member of Parliament," he said, "but this is the first time it has been my privilege to see it. I never did believe there was such a waterway as I have witnessed since I left Trenton. Coming along this canal I find an immense quantity of power available from which there ought to be great benefits. I will give every assistance I can to prevent these magnificent power possibilities going to waste. This canal is now open for freight and passenger traffic.

Electrical Energy.

The speaker said that he was convinced that the waterway over which he had travelled in his trip from Trenton to Peterborough, would supply all the electrical energy that was necessary for this part of Eastern Ontario. The speaker was also of the opinion that the freight rates on the canal would be cheaper than the railway rates once the traffic was established. The mineral deposits in the north country would be also available for development under the new conditions.

"If I am minister for another year or two I will do all in my power to see that the work is completed. As it is now the war has made it necessary to almost suspend work on the northern end of the canal, but this will be resumed as soon as conditions will permit. The Trent Canal will either have an enormous freight traffic or the country will benefit from lower freight rates.

The Quaker Oats Plant.

"I was deeply interested in the trip through the Quaker Oats Company's plant," said the Minister. "I never say a finer plant in my life. It would be a great thing if we could only get the members of Parliament to take a trip over the canal and see where they have been spending the money. We made a mistake when we did not have it constructed years ago. Along the canal route we have seventy-five thousand horse-power waiting to be developed. This can be done at one-half the cost of the Niagara power developement and it is my intention to bring this important matter to the attention of Premier Hearst and Sir Adam Beck.

Magnificent Scenery.

"I have travelled considerably in my life, but I never saw finer scenery than I did coming along the route of this new waterway."

Dr. Reid touched upon the Government's railway policy asserting that one road had already been taken over and that others might be acquired.

In conclusion Dr. Reid promised to lend his support to the further development of the waterway and urge its speedy completion. "Patience and perseverance have won after eighty-five years," observed Dr. Reid.

Mr. R. R. Hall.

Mr. R. R. Hall congratulated the Hon. Dr. Reid on the opening of the Trent Canal between Peterborough and Trenton, and was pleased to learn from the Minister that his first trip over the Canal had afforded him such a pleasant surprise, not only as to scenic beauty of the route but as to the great importance such a magnificent waterway would be when completed in affording cheap transportation and an immense quantity of electric power at surprisingly low cost as compared with Niagara Falls.

Deepen Canal.

Mr. Hall pointed out that the Canal had a depth of eight feet from Peterborough to Trenton, whereas the completed waterway from Peterborough to Lake Simcoe had a draught of only six feet owing to the fact that at certain locks and at comparatively few places the water was shallow, but by a very small expenditure of money the minimum depth of the Canal could be made eight feet.

It was highly important that the Canal above Peterborough should be converted from a six foot canal to an eight foot canal because within reasonable limits the efficiency of a navigable channel increases as the cube of the depth; that is to say on a six foot canal a barge carrying 216 tons may be operated, whereas on an eight foot canal a barge carrying 512 tons may be efficiently operated. The extra two feet depth more than doubles the efficiency of the Canal.

Conservation Dams.

The speaker further pointed out that it was important during the navigation season of the year to preserve at all times an even uniform flow in the river and reaches of the canal so as to increase its efficiency. That could easily be done in connection with the Trent Waterway by the construction of conservation dams at the outlet of the Lakes tributary to the main Trent Waterway.

There are upwards of 82,000 acres of Lakes in the upper watershed which could be very effectively and cheaply used as reservoirs to store water which may be let down at the season of the year when the water in the lower lakes is approaching the lowest point. These conservation dams would serve a double purpose. They would preserve for navigation purposes the maximum depth of water necessary to operate the largest boats and barges, and would at the same time furnish to the power plants on the line of the canal the maximum quantity of power which is so essential to our industries.

Complete the Canal.

In conclusion Mr. Hall said that he knew that he was expressing the views of all present when he stated that he was glad to hear the Hon. Dr. Reid express his surprise and gratification at the magnificent waterway and the immense water powers that he had passed between Trenton and Peterborough and he felt that when he had passed through our Lakes to the North and reached Lake Simcoe that his enthusiasm would become so great that he would declare at Orillia that war or no war the canal must be completed, that the 00 000 voted by Parliament last Session must be spent this year toward completing the canal and that another million dollars or more will be voted at next session.

Mr. J. H. Burnham.

Mr. Burnham stated that it was largely due to the late Hon. J. Israel Tarte that the canal was now an accomplished fact. When others doubted its potentialities he alone seemed to have had the vision and energy to urge its completion. "We must therefore pay him a debt of obligation which we owe." Mr. Burnham urged the Board of Trade to take the lead in a movement to advertise to tourists the scenic beauties of the entire route of the canal. To impress upon the Government the necessity and importance of completing the system it behooved Peterborough, as the largest place on its route to take hold of the work in a resolute manner, and to arouse a concerted effort from all the communities affected.

Belleville's Felicitations.

Mr. E. Gus Porter, M.P. for West Hastings, said he brought the warm and hearty wishes of the people of Belleville that the prosperity that has marked the progress of Peterborough might continue for a long time.

"I hadn't the faintest notion of the magnitude and the possibilities of the canal until I passed through it today. I can see no reason why it should not become a favoured route for tourists. I believe it will become as popular in that respect as in its industrial and commercial usefulness.

J. H. Sexsmith.

"There should be no doubt of the future," said Mr. J. H. Sexsmith, M. P. for East Peterborough. "Some men at Ottawa used to laugh at us when we emphasized the importance of the canal, but I believe we will see the day when thousands of tons of freight will pass over these waters. I am pleased to learn that the Minister has been so favourably impressed. One of the largest deposits of iron ore in Ontario is found at Blairton, five miles from the canal. Forty years ago, thousands of tons of ore used to be shipped from the Blairton mines over part of the present Trent canal, and then on to Rochester. I am living in hopes that we will see a great development in the electrical smelting of iron ore, because in Peterborough and Hastings counties there are iron deposits sufficient to last this province for a great many years. This ore is only waiting the capital and energy to develop it."

Mr Sexsmith expressed the hope that Hon. Dr. Reid would be able to find a way to provide for the completion of the last section to Georgian Bay.

Mr. C. A. Munson, M.P.

"I need not assure you that I am glad to know that the Trent Valley Canal is a practical fact from Lake Simcoe to Lake Ontario," Mr. C. A. Munson, M.P. for Northumberland, stated. "Every five minutes on our trip some new beauties of scenery burst upon our view. It is a revelation to make that trip. I didn't believe we had such

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its colour and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even colour, that beautiful dark shade of hair, which is so attractive, use only this old time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite to impart colour and a youthful appearance to the hair. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of diseases.

Presentation To Mrs. M. B. Lyle

Ladies of Trinity Church Express Their Appreciation of Mrs. Lyle's Services

At the Ladies' Aid meeting of Trinity Church yesterday afternoon, a very pleasing event took place, in the form of a presentation to the retiring treasurer, Mrs. Mary B. Lyle, the ladies showing their appreciation of her faithful service for 25 years by presenting her with a beautiful silk hand bag and purse of $25.00, also a bouquet of lily-of-the-valley.

Mrs. J. K. Moore read the address, Mrs. Stocker making the presentation.

Dear Mrs. Lyle,—We feel that we owe you a debt of gratitude for the cheerful, conscientious manner in which you have discharged the duties of treasurer of the Ladies' Aid Society of old Charlotte Street, then later Trinity Church, during the past twenty-five years. Always willing to sacrifice time and strength when the interests of the church were at stake, your valuable term of service has been a credit to yourself and the society.

Owing to the efforts of the ladies of the society, the annual thankoffering has become an important asset to our church income. To have occupied such an important position for a quarter of a century is indeed a testimony to the confidence reposed in you.

Others have been inspired by your earnestness and zeal, and have become members of the Ladies' Aid, and, Mrs. Lyle, it can be truly said of you, "She hath done what she could."

Will you accept this, in the spirit in which it is given, a spirit of admiration for the integrity and devotion to the cause which has been so dear to you, and may the remainder of our lives be spent as co-workers in this society.

Signed on behalf of the Society,
S. D. Cruickshank, President.
M. Watts, Secretary.

Mrs. Lyle, in a few well-chosen words, expressed her appreciation, after which a social was spent.

Preparing For Second Big Victory Loan

OTTAWA, June 5. — Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, is already working on details of the second big Victory Loan campaign, which will likely take place October or November next. The organization will be extensive and it is expected the bonds will be ready and engraved when the campaign opens, so that buyers who pay cash will not have to wait for their securities as in last year's campaign.

MINISTERS CONGREGATE IN LONDON, ONT.

London, June 5. — Hundreds of the leading ministers and laymen, representing Canadian Presbyterianism from the Atlantic to the Pacific, arrived here to-day to attend the General Assembly which formally convenes this evening in St. Andrew's church.

While the much debated question of the church union is apparently shelved owing to war conditions, several other big problems are to come before the assembly, which will likely continue its sessions well into next week.

It is expected that there will be quite a contest for the position of Moderator. Some of the members said this morning there was more uncertainty regarding this position than ever before, and it was stated as quite likely that one of the older ministers from a rural district would get this honour. Rev. Colin Fletcher, of Thames Road, London, is mentioned. Another view is that the post may go to a layman—J. K. Macdonald, who has been prominent in the councils of the Presbyterian church for many years. Rev. Dr. John Somerville, Associate Clerk, is also mentioned for the position.

ANOTHER STEAMER SUNK BY SUBMARINE

NEW YORK, June 5. — American auxiliary schooner Samuel C. Manget is another victim of submarine attack. The vessel was sunk Sunday afternoon 175 miles off New York and eleven passengers and men of her crew were brought here to-day by a Danish steamer.

LONDON, June 5.—(Reuters Limited.)—There is now a more urgent call for men for the fighting forces than ever before, said Aukland Geddes, Minister of National Service, in an address to-day at Whitchurch.

Five Nicholls Hospital Graduates Received Diplomas Last Night

nteresting Event Was Held in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute—A Large Attendance

THE GRADUATES

Miss Florence E. Archer, Miss Mary MacMahon, Miss Louie E. Steel, Miss S. A. M. Ellis and Miss Sarah F. MacDonald, the 1918 graduation class from Nicholl's Hospital, received their diplomas last night in the Collegiate Institute Hall.

Accompanied by the acting superintendent Miss Sanderson, the five graduates occupied the front row of the crowded hall. The audience which was the largest that has ever attended the graduating exercises included practically all of the city Doctors.

On the Platform.

The platform was tastefully decorated with huge Union Jacks and an abundance of beautiful bouquets which testified to the popularity of the young ladies. Owing to the regrettable and unavoidable absence of Mr. Richard Hall, Mr. John Crane occupied the chair.

Chairman's Address.

In his address, Mr. Crane, said that the work of mercy has gone on at a tremendous pace. Between twelve and thirteen hundred patients have been treated in Nicholl's Hospital 'and I have been told by competent medical men that Nicholl's Hospital is doing just as good work as any hospital anywhere."

Rev. J. R. Webb.

Rev. J. R. Webb, informed the audience that he was very especially warned not to talk on Florence Nightingale. She had been at every graduation class for thirty years and she should be given a rest.

"I then asked what other bird I could bring and suggested a Crane," remarked Mr. Webb.

"But even that did not suit them." Mr. Webb, said that these are days of service and only those that serve and serve well should be recognized I do not believe in the old custom of doing honour to the ministry simply because they wear the cloth. Not long ago the medical professions were inclined to be athestic. But that day is passed, we are not living in days when people pass by on the other side like the Senite, but we are like the Samaritan who administered to the man in need.

A nurse is as truly a minister of Jesus Christ as a minister. A doctor is also a minister of Jesus Christ we are all co-workers in the redemption of the body. The true nurse, the true doctor and the true minister all minister to the souls of men. I am speaking to a profession which has come into its own. The eyes of the whole world are upon the nursing sisters at the front, where all the romance has been torn away from a nurse's life and the true facts laid bare. At a Montreal meeting more nurses offered themselves for duty at the front, than any other profession in the city. You are going out to your life work and you will do your best, I am sure, you are going forth to serve your generation.

Congratulated by Dr. A. Moir.

Dr. A. Moir, who has just returned from the Medical Convention in Hamilton, addressed the graduates. He warmly congratulated them and said they had so equipped themselves, that they were a credit to the country. You have shown great diligence in your work and I cannot but help congratulating you of the choice of your life work. "The life of service is the life that tells. We have that well examplified in the part that the nurses have taken in present times. At the front the nurses can be counted not by hundreds ,but by thousands.

From the comparatively small hospital of Nicholl's, sixteen nurses have left for overseas service. I have never heard tell of nurse in the present war who has shirked her work, while in discharge of her duties. In the recent bombing of the British hospitals the nurses stood by until the last and were just as bravely as the men. Some people have the idea that the life of a trained nurse is very easy, but we who have a chance of seeing ,know that this is not so. You must love your work to be a success.

Hard to Decide

Dr. J. H. Eastwood, said that he had the privilege to have charge with Dr. Greer, of the bandaging class. It was very hard to decide which was the best, but they had selected Miss Mary MacMahon as the winner of the first prize. Miss Florence Archer, was the winner of the second prize.

In concluding Dr. Eastwood said, "You are five splendid girls, you are splendid nurses and I am fully confident that the world will be better for the work that you will have done."

The Programme.

The programme which was given was very greatly appreciated by the large audience.

Trent Canal Was A Revelation, etc.

beauties in Ontario, and I have been through the Thousand Islands and over the northern waters around Barrie. It has been impressed upon me that every dollar expended on the canal is being returned to the people, to the entire populace of Canada. The transportation of freight to the markets is one of the great problems Canada has to touch to-day and the Trent Valley Canal will be a very considerable factor in its solution. There is not a town in Northumberland but will be benefitted by the canal, not a farmer, who grows a bushel of grain, who will not be favoured by it. I assert that it will meet every expectation of those who advocated it so long."

Mr Munson conveyed the greetings of Cobourg to the people of Peterborough.

Mr. J. J. Turner.

After a historical sketch to the first journey over the Trent Canal route by the pioneers who settled in Peterborough in 1819 Mr. J. J. Turner, President of the Board of Trade, referred to the possibilities of electrical development in this district. There are already developed 29,000 h.p. which is either used here or exported to other towns, and another 55,000 h.p. are capable of development. Mr. Turner stated that the expenditure of $16,500,000 on the canal was justified in the electrical power acquired alone. To Hon. Dr. Reid he said. "I am glad to know, sir, that you will do everything in your power to open the north end, and I believe the expenditure will be fully justified."

THE TRIP UP.

After leaving Trenton, where an official reception was given to Hon. J. D. Reid, the government party, which was joined by officials from the city, proceeded up the canal in a Canadian Steamship Company boat from Lake Ontario waters. The trip, which was made under ideal weather conditions, proved somewhat of a surprise to the party, who had not realized the rugged beauty of the wild country along most of the canal.

Locks on Trip.

Notwithstanding the fact that 19 locks were gone through in the 38 miles between Trenton and the city, not a moment lagged from the time of departure on Monday morning to the arrival this afternoon.

Notable Point.

The most notable point on the trip and one greatly enjoyed and interestedly inspected by Hon. H. D. Reid, was the dam at Healy's Falls, near Hastings, where a waterfall of fifty-eight feet with a horse power of 10,000 dashes over the incline. Here the party stooped for some time that the falls might be thoroughly investigated.

Longest Stretch.

The longest stretch of open water is that between Hastings and the city, and along this route, which was passed since sunrise this morning, the party saw the country at its best, with both banks of the river showing every indication of a wonderful harvest wherever cultivation had been undertaken.

AT CAMPBELLFORD.

Campbellford, June 4. — After spending the night at Healey's Falls, seven miles north of here, the inspection party accompanying the Minister of Railways and Canals, on the opening trip of the Trent Canal, left at 8 o'clock this morning for Peterboro. Campbellford gave a great welcome to the steam yacht Ramona and her consort the Loretta, the first boats to come up the canal.

It was an event which this place has awaited for many years, and the fact that the canal is at last open for traffic was greeted with genuine joy.

The party was met down the canal by a Campbellford deputation composed of Mayor W. A. Russell, Councillors M. Mulhern, F. Smith, H. Redden and J. Irwin. The populace here turned out and made a most presentable appearance at the locks, and a brass band assisted at the welcome.

C. L. Owens, ex-M.P., the postmaster, expressed the gratification felt by Campbellford, and congratulated Dr. Reid upon his administration of the office of Minister of Railways and Canals; and Mr. Owens intimated that this is a manufacturing town and could become more so with better railway facilities.

RED LETTER DAY FOR TOWN.

The opening of the canal, he said, made a red letter day in the history of Campbellford, and he expected many visitors.

Dr. Reid was cheered heartily by the large gathering when he replied in his first speech on the inspection trip

TRENTON'S "GOD SPEED."

Although the opening of the canal was supposed to be a bit of a surprise and ceremony was dispensed with, owing to its modest dimensions, because this is war time, there were a couple of thousand people on the bridge at Trenton to give a send-off to the Minister and his inspection party. Mayor Ireland and Miss Ireland, accompanied by P. J. O'Rurke, chairman of the Civic Executive Committee, and Councillors V. VanAlistine, F. Abbott, H. S. Langdon, G. Sarles and R. S. Haines, represented the town on the trip, travelling as far as Frankford. Many people in automobiles and on bicycles followed the boats for miles along the road beside the canal. At each lock there were cheering crowds, and amazement was expressed that so many people turned out when no official announcement had been made of the opening. Some boarded the steamer and were taken along to the next lock so that they could say that they were passengers on the first boat that went through the canal.

TOWN BEAUTIES GUESTS.

Below Campbellford, a bevy of the town beauties, chaperoned by Mrs. Shaw, became guests. The young ladies were Miss N. Turner, G. Payne, N. Hoover, R. Morton, C. Shaw, F. Quinlan, A. Hume, A. McIntosh and R. Rhoades. They kept Dr. Reid, R. Gus Porter, M.P., and G. Munsen,M. P., very busy until the boats docked here.

Amongst those in the party in addition to the Minister were: W. A. Bowden, Chief Engineer at the Department of Railways and Canals; Col. Monserrat, Chief Engineer of the Quebec Bridge; A. T. Phillips, Superintending Engineer of the Rideau Canal; C. A. Munsen, M.P., for Northumberland; J. A. Sexsmith, M. P., for East Peterborough; E. Gus Porter, M.P., for West Hastings, and Judge Willis, Belleville.

Mr. A. J. Grant, has been chief engineer of the Trent Canal for the past twelve years and during that time has given his best efforts and that of his staff likewise to the work that when completed will mean much to this city and district. Mr. A. L. Killaly, has been superintendent of maintenance for several years, and in this capacity has taken care of the up keep of the canal very thoroughly.

Girls! Use Lemons! Make a Bleaching, Beautifying Cream

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter point of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener, and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It naturally should help to soften, freshen, bleach and bring out the roses and beauty of any skin. It is simply marvelous to smoothen rough, red hands.

Big Docket For Judge Huycke At The June Sessions

The docket for the June sittings of the County Court and General Sessions presents four actions, all of them damage suits, as follows:

The Atlantic Fruit Co. vs. W. J. Oke for $273.52.

Dr. F. L. Robinson vs. A. A. Fowler for $500 and costs.

Francis Trennum vs. Wilson Harlow for $1,000 and costs.

Jack Ellis Hope vs. the Lakefield Electric Light Co. and S. R. Leggott for $2,000 and costs.

Judge Huycke will preside at the sessions, which open next Tuesday at one o'clock.

The Atlantic Fruit Co., Peck, Kerr and McElderry, solicitors, claim $273.52 from Walter J. Oke for goods delivered to him last June. The defendant alleges that he received a car of bananas from the plaintiffs, but the fruit was soft and rotten. He refused to accept it, he states, and notified the company to that effect. They, in turn, instructed him to sell the fruit, the deposition continues, and Mr. Oke thus regarded himself as an agent. G. N. Gordon is the defendant's counsel.

A Lakefield Case.

In the Lakefield action, Mrs. Frances Hope alleges carelessness and a faulty system for the distribution of electricity, in her claim for $2,000 and costs from S. R. Leggott and the Lakefield Electric Light Co. for injuries received by her 8 year old son, Jack Ellis Hope. On Sept. 21st, 1917, while playing on his lawn at home, the boy came in contact with a guy wire with which it is claimed there was connection with electric wires on the same spot.

O. A. Langley is solicitor for the plaintiff and O'Connell and Corkery for the defendants.

A Mining Case.

Francis Trennum, a miner in Belmont township, claims $1,000 and costs from Wilson Harlow, a farmer in Rawdon township, Hastings county, for alleged fraudlent representations which induced the plaintiff to purchase from Harlow certain mineral claims in Belmont which he was supposed to own. The mineral rights were on the east half of lot 4 on the first concession of Belmont, for which Trennum asserts he paid Harlow $200. Peck, Kerr and McElderry represent the plaintiff and George Trasher of Belleville, the defendant.

Dr. Robinson's Suit.

Dr. Robinson's action to recover $500 from Mr. A. A. Fowler is an aftermath of the accident at the corner of Hunter and Aylmer streets on August 23, 1917, when a taxicab, owned by the plaintiff, and driven by Charlie O'Hara, was mauled in a collision with Mr. Fowler's touring car.

The Farmers Are Disappointed At Reception Which They Received At The Capital

Special Meeting Will Be Held in Toronto on Friday Next—Say Attitude Has Been Distorted,

THE CANNING MOVEMENT

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO June 5.— The special committee appointed by the United Farmers' Association has brought in a report stating that, while they stayed in, and worked unremittingly to bring their views before Parliament they did not achieve any satisfactory progress and "only by persistent effort did they secure a reading of their resolutions in the house so that the protest of the farmers could be recorded in Hansard.

"Faced with the harvest situation that now presents itself, we have called a farmers' mass meeting to be held in the Labour Temple on Friday, June 7th at which fresh action will be taken," said Secretary J. J. Morrison this morning.

"Real Viewpoint."

"Our whole attitude," continued Mr. Morrison, "on the present food problem, has been distorted, twisted and misrepresented by a large majority of city papers who have made an appeal which was not calculated to unite the farmers and the dweller in the city."

"It is because of this that we feel our real viewpoint should be given the fullest kind of publicity that have sent out the circular calling for the meeting in the Labour Temple on Friday next.

"As the circular states the battle is not yet lost, it has only begun. When farmers' deputation was at Ottawa on May 19th the representation was practically confined to Ontario and Quebec. The great west was silent. The west is with us now—wholly with us, and this will be made clear by a prominent official of the organized farmers of the west, who will address us on June 7th. In bringing their report to the United Farmers' Association of Ontario the committee state that in their opinion, "immediate steps should be taken to ensure the fullest consideration of the situation that now confronts us.

County Council Will Meet On Tuesday, June 18

The June session of the County Council will open on Tuesday, the 18th, with a comparatively light programme.

The grant to the Y.M.C.A. will be disposed of, the Court House work will be wound up, and there are certain debentures to be considered. It is not likely that there will be any attempt to commit the county to the Good Roads system.

The farmers are apparently adamant in their opposition to this scheme and have given it more attention than is generally believed.

FURNITURE ON THE WAY.

The furnishings of the court house are on the way to Peterboro and are expected to-morrow. Every effort will be made to have the court room ready for Judge Huycke next Tuesday.

PLOT TO SMUGGLE CROWN JEWELS INTO THE UNITED STATES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, June 5.—An alleged plot to smuggle into America the Crown jewels of the dethroned Romanoff dynasty, stones values at two million dollars, is believed to have been discovered by United States customs officials, it was learned here to-day.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HIS MERMAID

By HENRY THOLENS

...Copyright, by T. C. McClure...

"By Joye, Jack, you must wait until I get my camera for that afternoon sun over the water. Aren't those clouds magnificent? The rocks on the beach, the woods over yonder, the waves almost too lazy to break as they come rolling up—I can see the picture now, printed deep down on sepia paper, fast to a prize at the amateur exhibition."

Jack laughed good naturedly.

"All right, old man; sail in, but hurry up," he said.

Five minutes later George Carrington had snatched his camera from the broad hallway of the Berkeley inn, snapped it at the waterscape, and he and Jack Grayson were off on a fishing trip. It was the last day of their vacation, spent wandering down the coast at random, seldom two nights in the same place.

The final day's sport over, Carrington sped back to the city in a train, camera, fishing kit and grip beside him, limited and tired, but happy. He reached his apartments and thought of the last picture of clouds and rocks and sea. He must develop it forthwith, and he did.

An hour later they sat together on a window seat listening to a prima donna's song.

"I have a picture I would like you to see, Miss Langford," he said diffidently. He took the photograph from his pocketbook and showed it to her.

She gave a little startled cry, and the unmounted print fell from her hand.

"Why—why, you were at Berkeley inn!" she exclaimed.

"I took a picture of the beach, but not that one," he said slowly. "And yet that is the one I found in my camera."

Their eyes met for an instant, and the girl flushed crimson. Silent and bewildered, she studied the photograph. Suddenly she broke into the laugh of the water witch again.

"No less surprising was the picture my sister took of me," she exclaimed excitedly. "The water and rocks were lovely, but I was nowhere to be seen!"

"Now the mystery is no longer mysterious!" laughed Carrington. "It's plain enough. I saw another camera in the hotel office, but never thought until this instant that I might have picked up the wrong one. Your sister took a picture with my camera, and I took one with hers." Suddenly he became silent and after a moment's [illegible] mered, "I—I suppose [illegible] a mystery, but may I [illegible]

Training a Dog.

It may surprise some people to be told that dogs have a strong sense of justice, so, unless you want your pup to gain a poor opinion of you, be careful when you punish him. Never punish unless the pup can associate the punishment with the offense. The circumstantial evidence may be very strong, but you had better wait and catch him in the act. Common sense is about all that is required to rear a puppy into a dog which will be a faithful, useful, steadfast companion—common sense and consideration. Whenever I find one of those "anything will do for the pup" kind of people I can see in my mind's eye what the humans in that family look like.—Outing.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if you feel Backachy or have Bladder trouble!

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless, and makes a delightful effervescent lithiawater drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

War Trade Board Decides.

It will be in the dicretion of the War Trade Board to decide what quantities, if any, of the list of imports barred from entry into Canada through the order issued yesterday shall be admitted under license. While applications for entry go to the Ministry of Customs it is the duty of the War Trade Board to revie wsuch application, to investigate whether or not the applications have a basis of justification. The purpose of the licensing is to limit imports which are non-essential.

Certain questions as to what actions will be taken in connection with goods already ordered or in transit will have to be ordered by the War Trade Board. Licensed will in all probability be granted in connection wit hgoods in transit though such action may not be taken in connection with all goods ordered since many firms order as far as a year ahead.

80,000 Bushels Saved For Export By Wheatless Days

America's Aid to the Allies Has Lifted Food Menace and Greatly Reduced Ration Lines

NEW YORK, June 6.— What has been accomplished in the campaign of wheat conservation in the United States is shown by a statement given out by the Food Administration.

The total export of wheat and wheat products from Canada and the United States from July 1 to May 1 was 110,000,000 bushels in terms of wheat. Had consumption been normal, it is estimated the actual exportable surplus from the last harvest would have been from 10,000,000 to 30,000,000 bushels.

Assuming the higher figure, the American people have saved virtually 80,000,000 bushels of their normal consumption with which the Allies have been fed and the submarine defeated. Shipments of grain products to the Allies from the United States and Canada for April comprised 836,034 tons, compared with 855,000 tons for March.

Of the April shipments 539,752 tons, equal to 26,027,000 bushels of grain or grain products, came from the United States, of which 9,124,412 bushels were wheat or wheat products, in terms of wheat, compared with 12,910,659 bushels in March: Approximately 160,000 further tons of cereals were delivered to the ports during April for May shipment.

The falling off in food shipments is due to two causes, one the increased use of shipping for the transportation of troops and the other the lessened demand for food in Europe.

As an indication of the improved food situation among the Allies the number of people, standing in "queues" for rations in London increased from a daily average of 223,232 during the week ending February 23 to 2,865 daily during the week ending April 20.

District Deputy Grand Master, Dr. Kaiser, of Oshawa, delivered a most eloquent address. He presented the lodge with a gavel from oak wood taken from a tree grown on Vimy Ridge. The gavel is a beauty, and contains the history of the battle of Vimy Ridge, and the heroic part taken by the Canadians there. Dr. Kaiser gave the lodge great praise for their work.

Other members from Oshawa, Port Hope as well as members of the Millbrook lodge, delivered forceful addresses.

Supper was served in the S. O. E. rooms after which several toasts were given and ably responded to.

Bro. T. A. Kelly made a very capable presiding officer. Altogether the meeting was a grand success.

The postponed May meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary, St. Thomas' Ch., was held on Monday night at the home of Mrs. Westmacott. The usual devotional and business part of the meeting was followed by an interesting report of the annual meeting in Toronto given by Mrs. Westmacott, who represented the branch. There will be no meetings during the summer months.

THE LATE ALFRED LEACH.

The death of Alfred Leach, which took place on Saturday, June 1, after a long illness, removes one of the best known and most highly respected citizens of Millbrook.

Deceased was born at Collingwood 75 years ago. At the very early age of 19 years he was a full fledged chemist. Forty six years ago he opened a drug store in Millbrook, and up to the time he took ill, about three years ago, he was always to be found on duty at regular hours.

In military matters he was always enthusiastic. He was a veteran of the Fenian Raid. His fine collection of all kinds of guns made hundreds of years ago, will no doubt be prized by his family.

Politically, Mr. Leach was a staunch Conservative, and in religion an Anglican. He was a charter member of J. B. Hall Lodge, A. F. and A.M. and also a charter member of the I.O.F.

In September, 1879, he was married to Miss Mary Agnes Dawson, by the late Ven. Archdeacon Allan. To this happy union six sons and one daughter were born, all of whom survive him.

The funeral to St. John's cemetery, Cavan, on Monday, June 3, was very largely attended.

Rev. Canon Allen conducted the church services at the house and the grave, assisted by Rev. Capt. Spencer, who read the 90th Psalm, and the hymn, "Thy Will be Done," was sung.

The pall bearers were six Bro. Masons, viz., W. T. Wood, A. A. Smith, R. J. Doak, G. A. Duncan, Edward Moore and Dr. Jamieson.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Burnham, of Peterborough, were guess of Dr. and Mrs. Burnham, on Friday.

Pathe

The Simple "Why" of Pathe Superiority

SOME articles achieve fame by their intrinsic merit as viewed by the public. Others by the puff and blow of their producers. The Pathephone success is as simple as it is sure. It is due to its being an improvement upon anything which has come before it or since.

The original Pathe' Freres took the old-time talking machine and developed it until it is now the supreme achievement. Note these improvements: Instead of the old, scratchy, ever-changing steel needles—a genuine polished sapphire ball. Instead of a metal sound chamber—an all-wood one (on the violin principle). Instead of recording in narrow sound waves—a unique Pathe' method with long broad sound waves, more contact, more tone, richer music. Instead of "varnished boxes"—handsome cabinets—in historic period designs. Instead of playing only one or two kinds of records—the Pathephone will play all makes of records.

Mrs. Collins Attempts A Reprisal

CHAPTER LXXXV.

For a moment I thought Mrs. Collins would burst a blood vessel, she grew so red and angry looking. Then, with a little shrug of her shoulders, she acknowledged the introduction to David spoke to Evelyn graciously, and turned to me:

"You are fortunate in not being obliged to trust yourself to the sharp eyes of a maid." Then, as both David and Evelyn became engaged, talking with Maige Loring, she continued with a look that would have killed me if looks could kill: "A young, country-bred brother and a devoted friend, combined with a bow-window and heavy curtains, make an ideal arrangement."

I was furious! Yet, before I could frame a reply, she had crossed the room and was chatting lightly and gayly with Merton and the others.

How I envied her her sang-froid! I knew I hated her yet I would have given almost anything to have some of her attributes. Mrs. Sexton was right. I must learn to hold my own with these women, if ever I was to be happy. Since David had been with me, I had grown lax. I had been my own natural self with him, had talked and acted as I used to before I left home. I must not allow myself to let down again. Julia Collins' shrug and light, careless tone — although she must have been inwardly raging at what I had said about Celeste gossiping with her maid —had been a lesson to me A salutary one.

Luncheon at the Studio.

The two ladies remained about half an hour then, with many apologies for disturbing us, they left.

"I should not have seen them," Merton remarked, "but I thought it best. They are especially delighted if they find something to gossip about, particularly Julia Collins. I wanted them to see you were well chaperoned."

"CONTOUR" an ARROW FORM-FIT COLLAR

At the time, I wondered at his speech. Afterward, I found that Celeste had gone to do some shopping and had met them. They had questioned her and she had told them I was at the studio, but she had mentioned neither David nor Evelyn.

Just why Julia Collins acted as she did, I did not comprehend until long afterward.

Merton asked us to luncheon at the studio. Just a cold lunch; his man had not provided for company. But we had such a jolly time. David was so enthusiastic over everything, that I scarcely knew what I was eating until I heard Evelyn remark that "the salad was delicious."

"What do you call it?" David asked. "I must tell mother about it. I never have eaten it before. These fancy things are a long time getting back into the country places."

"A Palm Beach salad," Merton answered, although I don't quite see why it shouldn't be a Coney Island, or Bath Beach, just as appropriately. Robert will give you the recipe before you leave."

"You're a queer kid!" Evelyn laughed. "I didn't suppose young boys ever thought of such things as recipes."

"They do when they have a mother like mine. She'll be more pleased with that than anything I could take her. The next time she entertains the "Ladies' Aid" she will spring it on them."

George is Amused.

We walked home all three arm in arm. David was going the next day and Evelyn seemed almost as sorry as if he had been her brother. George had said he would get tickets for a show that evening, so we decided to remain in and visit until dinner time.

"What an old cat that Mrs. Collins is! But she's stunning to look at," David said.

"She is handsome," I returned, "but I like Mrs. Loring better, although I am not crazy over either one. They are altogether too patronizing, or too inquisitive. But I can take care of myself now. When I first knew them, I was frightened to death for fear I would let them know how green I was."

"Green" You! They should have known you before you were married. You're ripe enough, now. Sometimes I hardly know you."

When George came home we told him of our good time at the studio. He laughed heartily at the idea of David's thinking to ask for the salad recipe. "I think he liked David, and that his presence relieved the strain we were under when alone. George had not corrected me once, and I had made no scenes by crying or by remaining up when he was out. How I wished that David could stay with me permanently.

We went to the theatre—a musical comedy, again. We had a box, and David laughed until he cried at the antics of the comedian. George laughed in sympathy and I was as happy as could be, sitting between them. Oh, if it could only always be so, I thought as I learned contentedly back and watched the stage.

To-morrow—David's Last Day.

POEMS OF THE WAR.

Patriotic Verse Written by J. Edgar Middleton.

The name of J. Edgar Middleton is familiar to many Canadians. He has been writing verse for a number of years, and it has been appearing regularly in newspapers and other periodicals, while several of his poems have found their way into Canadian anthologies. Mr. Middleton has recently made a collection of a few of his best efforts, and they are being published in book form under the title, "Sea Dogs and Men at Arms." As a great deal of the verse in this "Canadian book of songs" deals with the war, the volume has been given a very appropriate frontpiece, a reproduction in colors of H. B. Wollen's familiar painting, "The Canadians at Ypres."

Although the poems touch largely on the war, Mr. Middleton has included verse in the contents of the book that give it a decidedly local flavor. There is one poem entitled, "The Eternal Why," which is a tribute to the late S. T. Wood, the well-known nature writer; and the tender little poem, "Billy," doubtless refers to the death of Lieut. "Billy" Willison, who died in France. When writing "To the Absent," the poet had in mind the 47 members of the Mendelssohn Choir who are now on active service. Mr. Middleton also deals with the wider field of Canada in such poems as "Under the Black Eagle," written in the metre of "Before Sedan," and telling of the tragedy of Dr. Beland and his devoted wife. One of the happiest efforts in the volume is "The Canadian," which expresses so well the feeling of many men in the Dominion for the Old Land.

I never saw the cliffs of snow,
The Channel billows tipped with cream,
The restless eddying tides that flow
About the Island of my dream.
I never saw the English downs
Upon an April day;
The quiet old cathedral towns,
The hedgerows, white with may.
And still the name of England,
Which tyrants laugh to scorn,
Can thrill my soul. It is to me
A very bugle-horn.

A thousand leagues from Plymouth shore,
In broader lands, I saw the light;
I never heard the cannon roar,
Or saw a mark of England's might.
Save that my people lived in peace,
Bronzed by the harvest sun,
And thought that tyranny would cease,
That battle-days were done.
And still the flag of England
Streamed on a friendly breeze,
And twice two hundred ships of war
Went surging through the seas.

Mr. Middleton has placed in the volume a few memorial poems of Imperial significance, like "Lord Kitchener" and "King Edward the Seventh." It is in his sea songs, however, that the poet is seen at his best. These are written with a fine swinging rhythm, and they have a spirit and a dash that recall the work of Henry Newbolt. In fact, we will be surprised if some reviewer who likes such classifications as "the Canadian Kipling" or "the Canadian Wordsworth" does not feel that it is showing critical acumen to call Mr. Middleton "the Canadian Newbolt." These poems invite quotation, but space will only permit the use of one, "Arrived, H.M.S. Good Hope":—

Collingwood on the Sea of Glass,
Rolling up to the Jasper Walls,
Came about on the starboard tack,
Stood by the mizzen halliard halls,
Broke a signal to Hawke and Hood,
Both hull down on the shining sea;
This was the fluttering word he sent:
"Cradock is anchoring aft of me."

There, in his ship of battle grey,
There, with his crew all smart and trim,
Under-bo'sns and warrantmen,
And the jollies saluting him,
Collingwood, from the Sovereign deck,
Marked the ship on the golden swell,
Said to his flag lieutenant, "Sir,
We are only a cockle-shell."

"Man the gigs!" I must go aboard.
Such a ship for the Sea or Glass!
Look, the ensign is floating still,
(But, it's oh, for the sailor's lass!)
They are done with the westward Trades,
Done with the long Pacific swell,
Done with the gales of Hatteras,
England called and they served her well."

Cradock stood on his shattered deck,
While the spirit in silken smalls
Mounted the ladder, took his hand,
There in sight of the Jasper Walls,
Collingwood of the Sea of Glass,
Nelson, Jervis and gallant Blake,
Cheered the Admiral, Ship and Crew,
Dead and gone for Old England's sake.

The Market In Cauls.

We believe that there is still some market for cauls among sailors, who retain their belief in the efficacy of the membranes as a protection against shipwreck and drowning. Notices of "Cauls For Sale Within" were to be seen recently in windows in the vicinity of the docks of both London and Liverpool, but it is some time since we have noticed an advertisement of a caul for sale in the daily press. It may be remarked that the sale of cauls, so far from being a very ancient custom, is a comparatively modern innovation. The witchcraft of the middle ages declared against the caul retaining any virtue whatever if parted with by gift or sale to any but a member of the child's kindred.—London Lancet.

DEADLY SHRAPNEL.

Good "Man Killers," but Their Effectiveness Is Limited.

Shrapnel, so called after their inventor, the British General Shrapnel, are thin cases of tough steel containing a large number of bullets—in the British artillery 263 and in the French and German 300—with a small bursting charge at the base of the projectile.

The bursting charge breaks the thin steel case, when the bullets sweep forward with the velocity imparted to the projectile by the gun. Shrapnel are regarded as good "man killers," but they are quite ineffective against buildings, where shells are deadly. For the attack of field guns and buildings and for action against troops in trenches most armies employ howitzers, which are short, squat guns that toss their projectiles high in the air, high angle fire.

In the British army every division has fifty-four field guns and eighteen howitzers. These howitzers are of 4.5 inch caliber, firing a shell 4.5 inch in diameter and weighing thirty-five pounds. They have a range of 7,200 yards, which is 1,000 yards greater than the range of the British field gun.

The defect of the howitzer is that its shell is very heavy, and consequently much fewer rounds can be carried than with the field gun. There is no security that a single howitzer shell will do twice the damage of an ordinary field gun shell, though it weighs twice as much.

The French do not employ a howitzer in their field artillery. The Germans use a heavy pattern of six inch caliber, firing a shell of about ninety pounds, and a lighter pattern of 4.2 inch caliber.—New York Sun.

NERVES AND WATCHES.

When They Don't Agree There Is Sure to Be Poor Time.

One of the troubles of watchmakers is the man who gets on his watch's nerves. There are lots of customers on whom a good watch is wasted. A good second hand watch that has kept perfect time for other people will with certain other people go irregularly when it is not standing still. It is common knowledge in the trade that watches are greatly influenced by their owners.

Nobody knows the reason, but two explanations have been offered. One is that watches are sensitive to personal magnetism, the natural electricity that human beings contain in varying quantities.

The other is that a watch may be disturbed by the vibrations set up by a footstep which is heavier than the ordinary. The man who puts his heels down heavily usually needs to set the regulator toward slow to keep it from gaining.

One of the mysterious sides of the subject is that watches seldom keep good time on people of nervous, excitable temperaments.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Unique Cross.

In the heart of the Rocky mountains may be seen the Mountain of the Holy Cross, which is 14,000 feet in height. It derives its name from a gigantic cross on one side, near the summit, formed by fissures in the rock. It can be seen for many miles with great distinctness and is looked upon with superstitious fear by the natives.—Exchange.

All Right.

"That girl's all right," said the blond girl in the dressing room after she had looked everywhere for her overshoes. "The one who has just left, she's gone off with both the right overshoes and left me the left ones."—New York Times.

His Mistake.

"I cannot live without you!"

"You have evidently got me confused with my cousin. It is she who is wealthy."—Houston Post.

Some Traveler.

"Has he traveled much?"

"He must have. I understand he's gone through two fortunes already."—Detroit Free Press.

It is a great blessing to be perfectly callous to ridicule.

Poetic Justice.

A couple in a certain village, each the parent of six children, had meted out to them a kind of poetic justice in which they failed to see the poetry.

The woman, a widow, pleading that she had no home and was therefore unable to care for her children, induced the local authorities to admit them to an orphan asylum. The man, a widower, pleading he had no housekeeper and therefore no one to care for his children, induced the authorities to admit his six also. Thereupon, being freed from all incumbrances, these two married.

All went well for a few months, when the authorities, learning of the situation, promptly dispatched the twelve children back to their parents, and, the woman no longer able to represent herself as homeless or the man as without a housekeeper, they were forced to receive them.

TORTURING, ITCHING ECZEMA

Mrs. J. B. Horth, Paspebiac, Bonaventure Co., Que., writes:—"Thanks to Dr. Chase's Ointment I have been completely cured of that horrible disease eczema. I was held as if in prison from going among other people, for I was ashamed of the raw, flaming sores. Doctors could do nothing for me and I was almost desperate with suffering when I began to use Dr. Chase's Ointment. In one month I was completely cured and think that this was little short of a miracle."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HIS MERMAID

By HENRY THOLENS

...Copyright, by T. C. McClure...

"By Jove, Jack, you must wait until I get my camera for that afternoon sun over the water. Aren't those clouds magnificent? The rocks on the bench, the woods over yonder, the waves almost too lazy to break as they come rolling up—I can see the picture now, printed deep down on sepia paper, fast to a prize at the amateur exhibition."

Jack laughed good naturedly.

"All right, old man; sail in, but hurry up," he said.

Five minutes later George Carrington had snatched his camera from the broad hallway of the Berkeley inn, snapped it at the watercape, and he and Jack Grayson were off on a fishing trip. It was the last day of their vacation, spent wandering down the coast at random, seldom two nights in the same place.

The final day's sport over, Carrington sped back to the city in a train, camera, fishing kit and grip beside him, tanned and tired, but happy. He reached his apartments and thought of the last picture of clouds and rocks and sea. He must develop it forthwith, and he did.

"A vacation of jolly good fun without a romance," he mused. "Nature, sunshine, fresh air, a good chum and good fishing; nothing more to be desired."

The film sank in the developing fluid, and in a few seconds the outlines of a coast scene appeared. First came the blotches of black, representing the high lights—clouds and the crests of waves. By an alchemy which never ceases to be marvelous all the delicate gradations of light and shade filled in until the perfect picture appeared.

Then occurred something which caused Carrington to gasp in astonishment and almost drop the developing tray, for in the center of the picture, head and shoulders visible above the crest of a breaker, appeared the form of a young woman, like a mermaid arising out of the sea. There was a saucy tilt to the laughing face, and the bare arms were outstretched as a beckoning mermaid's might have been. Carrington knew that no human being had been in that expanse of sea while he was on the beach.

With almost feverish haste he made a print from the film. There was no doubt about it. It was no freak effect.

The girl's face, which he had never seen before, seemed to mock him in mystery. Clad in a dainty bathing suit, she fitted into the picture as if an artist hand had posed her there, a dainty bit of indisputably human life that rounded out the scene and perfected it. Fate had tossed a romance into his vacation after all.

He recalled the events of the day. Grayson and he had reached the inn just before noon, tired by a tramp of a half dozen miles from a fishing station farther down the coast. Dinner, then a rest; the snapshot and the final two hours' fishing that closed the fortnight's holiday, leaving the camera in the hotel office beside his grip while he was gone; then supper and the train back to the city. All this was clear enough. But how did the mermaid creep into his camera? Carrington stared at the laughing face in blank perplexity. Only one point was certain. It was the prettiest face he had ever seen in his life.

A paper he had recently read in a scientific journal flashed across his mind. It dealt with the photographic discovery of a new light ray invisible to the eye, but duly recorded on the peculiarly sensitized photographic plate.

"Nonsense!" he promptly said. "That's a flesh and blood girl. She has the face of an angel, but angels don't wear bathing suits with all those frills."

Next day he jumped on a train and was whisked to Berkeley inn. He sought the manager and showed him the picture.

"You recognize her, of course?" Carrington asked, with a careless air.

"I should say I did," said the manager, with a smile. "That's the handsome one of the Langford girls, who were here a month with their aunt. Went back to town only a couple of days ago. Splendid picture. Taken right here on the beach, too," he added in a quizzical tone. "I didn't know you were acquainted."

Carrington rejected the conversational tender. "Yes; I think it's pretty good," was all he said. But just before train time he sought the porter and casually asked him the destination of the Langford baggage two days before.

"New York, sah," came the ready response. "Thank you, sah."

The journey had not been altogether in vain. And while other passengers on that train chatted gayly together or read their newspapers or watched the panorama of forest and farmland and the twinkling lights of villages there was one young man whose eyes and attention did not wander from a photograph he held before him.

Three months later he was at one of Mrs. Bloomer Billings' receptions. He did not know Mrs. Bloomer Billings, but he had not been idle during the autumn months, and without being a Sherlock Holmes he decided that he must get an invitation, and he did. Mrs. Billings was a literary lady whose assemblages were diverse and often astonishing. Artists and writers attended them, musicians and player folk, with a leavening of accepted "society." They were truly heterogeneous gatherings.

Eagerly Carrington scanned the rooms. A long haired violinist had just finished a Beethoven sonata, and there was much clapping of hands. Carrington was presented to Mrs. Billings, who was surrounded by a bevy of pretty girls. A moment of gallant conversation, and then his face lit up with a sudden joy that caused his hostess to look up in politely suppressed wonder. In that group, now in a setting of pink and white, but with the same laughing face of the glistening beach and wave, stood his lady of the sea.

An hour later they sat together on a window seat listening to a prima donna's song.

"I have a picture I would like you to see, Miss Langford," he said diffidently. He took the photograph from his pocketbook and showed it to her.

She gave a little startled cry, and the unmounted print fell from her hand.

"Why—why, you were at Berkeley Inn!" she exclaimed.

"I took a picture of the beach, but not that one," he said slowly. "And yet that is the one I found in my camera."

Their eyes met for an instant, and the girl flushed crimson. Silent and bewildered, she studied the photograph. Suddenly she broke into the laugh of the water witch again.

"No less surprising was the picture my sister took of me," she exclaimed excitedly. "The water and rocks were lovely, but I was nowhere to be seen!"

"Now the mystery is no longer mysterious!" laughed Carrington. "It's plain enough. I saw another camera in the hotel office, but never thought until this instant that I might have picked up the wrong one. Your sister took a picture with my camera, and I took one with hers." Suddenly he became silent and after a moment or two stammered, "I—I suppose this is your sister's property, but may I not keep it?"

The girl tossed her head and smiled in mock hesitation. She had been turning the picture around and around in her hand. Then the smile and the warm blood left her face in company, and there was an almost imperceptible tremor of the long dark eyelashes. On the back of the photograph she had read:

"My mermaid."

Again their eyes met, but hers were quickly withdrawn. Her hesitation was real now.

Both were silent another moment. He sat eagerly, expectantly. Her eyes were fixed on the floor, and as she slowly extended her hand and placed the picture in his he felt the warm touch of her finger tips.

WITH CONSTIPATION

If the truth were only known you would find that over one-half of the ills of life are caused by allowing the bowels to get into a constipated condition.

When the bowels become constipated the stomach gets out of order, the liver does not work properly, and then follows the violent sick headaches, the sourness of the stomach, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Keep your bowels regular by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. They work on the bowels gently and naturally, and will cure the worst cases of constipation.

Mr. Sylvester Clements, Galt, Ont., writes: "I desire to express my heartfelt thanks for what Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills have done for me. I have been suffering from a bad stomach and constipation and would be off work 4 or 5 months a year. I was hardly able to be inside without getting a severe headache. I tried doctors' medicine and other remedies, but got no relief until a friend advised me to use Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. Now I can work inside without any headaches or pain. I would not be without your remedy for anything. I write this so that anyone suffering the same as I did may use them and be cured."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Why Rye Bread Soars.

At present one of the gravest problems facing restaurant and hotelkeepers is what they are going to give the people to eat when the rye flour runs out. At present they are forced to serve only one ounce of wheat bread to any one individual at any morning or noon-day meal, along with two ounces of rye bread. Rye bread is exceedingly hard to get and has increased two cents per one pound and a half loaf, and is bound to increase further, so long as the demand exists. It is said that the cause of this increase in substitute flours is that when the Canadian Government fixed the price of wheat it did not fix the price of other grains.

As a result of the high price of barley many farmers are grinding their own wheat and others are actually mixing a percentage of wheat flour with bran and shorts to feed to their hogs.

In the whole of Ontario there are not more than 3,000,000 bushels of rye grown, while the western provinces produce not more than five or six hundred thousands bushels, making a total of three and one-half million bushels for the whole Dominion. There are only two or three firms milling rye flour in Toronto, and these in very small quantities. It sells at $16.50 per barrel as against $10.95 for wheat flour. When asked the reason for the increase a miller said: "We can't get the rye and the demand is great. A large percentage of Canada's rye went to the United States long before our Food Controller's orders about rye bread came out."

The only other substitutes would be corn, barley and rice, but there is no corn to speak of in Canada and the United States have used for some time and are still using as much corn bread as possible, while the milling of barley would involve considerable changes in the plants.

Russian Airmen In Canada.

Five Russian aviators, officers of the Royal Flying Corps, arrived in Canada recently on a trans-Pacific liner to offer their services to the British Royal Flying Corps. They have served on the Austrian and Austrian and Roumanian fronts, and all have been decorated for bravery. Col. Duklan, who heads the party, has been wounded three times. When Russia lapsed into anarchy, the aviators said, they resolved to come to Canada. They practically fought their way out of the country, they asserted, and, after weeks of hardships, reached Japan, where British consular officers arranged their passage overseas. In addition to Col. Duklan, the party is composed of Capt. Rosmahof and Lieuts. Katarssiski, Petrenki and Astakof.

Dizzy Spells, Indigestion

Napanee Man Could Scarcely Walk at Times, He Was So Dizzy—Indigestion and Kidney Trouble Overcome By This Treatment.

NAPANEE, Ont., March 19. — The experience of Mr. Nolan of this town will interest all who suffer from indigestion and accompanying derangemens of the liver, kidneys and bowels.

Indigestion is such a common trouble, that many suffer for years without knowing how readily they could obtain relief by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to arouse the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels, and thereby remove the cause of much discomfort and suffering.

Mr. John P. Nolan, Dundas street west, Napanee, Ont., writes: "For some time I was troubled with weak kidneys, and used to have a scalding, burning sensation in my stomach. This was accompanied by dizziness, and occasionally it would be so severe that I would stagger while walking. I commenced using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and in a very short time my kidneys were in normal condition. Then I tried Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for the dizzy spells and I am glad to say that under this treatment they gradually disappeared. At present I am enjoying good health, and am pleased to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food."

This statement is endorsed by S. Casey Denison, Mayor of Napanee.

COUNTY ROAD SYSTEM.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: The County of Peterboro is frequently referred to recently because the council refuses to place a burden on the whole county when not more than 12 per cent. of the farmers would directly benefit thereby.

One hundred and forty miles of county road system would not be regularly used by more than 12 per cent. of the farmers of the county; it matters not what 140 miles would be designated.

As a result of such refusal of the County Council the county has some notoriety, yet the same critics do not refer to the fact that at the beginning of the war 7 per cent. of the population of the city and county enlisted.

In 1917 the city and county raised beween $100,000 and $150,000 for patriotic purposes due to the war. The city and county also paid over to the Provincial Government $20,000, Provincial War Tax, as well as an amount received by way of auto licenses, yet it is advanced that in order get government assistance for the main roads it would be advisable to raise $13,800 from the farmers to get back $9,000, when as stated before only 12 per cent. of the farmers would benefit. Various opinions are advanced as to the cost of constructing such roads in the County of Peterborough, and great anxiety is displayed by those advancing such opinions.

It is gradually advanced that less would accomplish the desired result; for instance, in the Norwood Register, October 31, 1917, $3,000 per mile is set out. In January, 1918, less than $2,000 was set out to the county council. In the local papers recently $1500 is set out. $1500 per mile road would take 10 years at 1 1-2 mills on the $ to the farmer and would not last three years without heavy expenditure for maintenance. 40 per cent. of construction is met by the government, and the less for construction the less it will cost the government; for when a road is once constructed the 40 per cent. ceases and 20 per cent. is paid towards maintenance, and the poorer the construction the greater expense to the farmers for maintenance, for they will then have 80 per cent. of the cost of the same.

Auto owners are justified in demanding assistance to the main roads from the fact that they pay a direct tax by way of license fees and such money should be expended on roads they use but why should the farmer be heavily burdened to have a part only of such money available for main roads, paticularly when the auto owners of the city use those roads continuously and only a small percentage of the farmers continuously.

There is no limit to what the farmers may expend on such roads, yet where a city or town has a certain population such city or town shall contribute to a certain suburban part adjacent to such city or town on the county road system, yet it shall not exceed 1-2 mill any one year, and the number of miles is very limited beyond the city limits. 75 per cent. of all auto traffic over such main roads will come from the city and city autoists do nearly all of their country travelling over the main roads. 90 per cent. of the city autos are used solely for pleasure.

In a recent article it was pointed out the amounts received up to 1917, by certain counties from the government for country roads, but no reference is made to the number of years it took to draw such moneys, nor how much it cost the farmers to draw the same, but if you consider the amount 40 per cent. from the government and 60 per cent. would be the farmers' share for construction, and 80 per cent for maintenance; also these are the counties that have been at it for some years. The majority of the counties are only just practically speaking, starting.

The same article refers to Victoria County expending $6727.59 in 1917, then the county raised $4036 of that, and the government paid $2691 of that yet what percentage of the auto licenses received by the government from Victoria county in 1917 is $2691? It is very gratifying to observe the keen interest the government has in the farmer, if you judge by arguments as the great benefit is always going to come to the farmer.

It is to be hoped that the farmer will no longer invite the yoke that goes to make him the human ox.

Respectfully yours,
ED. M. ELLIOTT.

WONDERS OF JAVA

A Glimpse of the Most Beautiful Island in the World.

WAS ONCE A MIGHTY EMPIRE

Only the Architectural Ruins of Its Ancient Civilization Now Remain Its Royal Prisoners and the National Sport of Tiger Fighting.

The island of Java has been called by more than one traveler the most beautiful island in the world. It is in shape much like Cuba. It is long and narrow, about 700 miles one way and less than 100 the other. Some of the mountains are 10,000 or 12,000 feet high, but there are no snow clad peaks. They are all clothed to the summit with the richest tropical vegetation for they are almost directly under the equator. There are at least thirty or forty volcanoes in the island, many of them still active.

The island is controlled by the Dutch. About the time the pilgrim fathers sailed from Holland to land on Plymouth rock another expedition from the same country carried the Dutch flag to the other side of the world, and Dutch governors have ruled in Java for about 300 years. But the remarkable architectural remains in the interior bear testimony to the extinct civilization of a mighty empire once enthroned upon this island and of an ancient religion that was supplanted by Buddhism.

Although the Dutch are complete masters, there are still native rulers left in the island, emperor and sultan, who are allowed to retain their lofty titles and live surrounded with an imperial etiquette, although they are in reality little bet than state prisoners.

The emperor lives in his "kraton," a large inclosure in which is the palace. Before the palace stretches the so called "Alon-Alon," a broad, open space, often flanked on one side by a mosque, and this is the arena for the tiger fights, which are the favorite diversion of monarch and subject alike.

For these combats hunters trap tigers in the mountains—magnificent beasts, not born in a cage and half subdued by long confinement, but real kings of the forest, caught full grown and with their strength increased by rage at their captivity.

Sometimes the fight is with a bull or a buffalo, but more often with trained fighters of the human race, and a striking peculiarity of the combat is that not infrequently the onlookers themselves are forced to take part in the performance.

Within the "Alon-Alon" a great square or ring is marked off, and along its sides the mass of the spectators take their places, the men armed with spears of different lengths. Those with the shorter spears kneel in the front rank, while those with the longer weapons stand behind them, so that together they present a close hedge of bristling spear points.

If the tiger tries to break through the ring of spectators he must, if the spears are firmly held, impale himself on either the longer or the shorter ones, while the men on either side can easily run him through with their lances. That means that each individual in the wide circle must be dexterous in the use of the spear and also know something about the habits and disposition of the tiger.

The leading role is naturally taken by professional tiger fighters. The big wooden cage in which the fierce beast has been confined is dragged into the middle of the great arena, and as it is opened an unarmed and unshielded fighter advances toward it and with a certain measure of ceremony and even of politeness challenges the tiger to come forth.

Suddenly realizing its freedom, the beast usually starts in wild flight toward the ring of spectators, only to halt before the impenetrable array of gleaming spears. From side to side of the ring it bounds, always met by the same impassable barrier, until finally the real tiger fighters, each armed only with a lance, enter the ring. Usually there are two or three, but only fighters of the first rank dare to encounter the enraged animal unsupported and alone.

They watch the moment in which the tiger crouches for its spring and kneel low, with a tense grasp of the spear, which they point toward the tiger in such a manner that he cannot help impaling himself on it. Besides the courage that the moment calls for, the vaunted skill and daring of the Spanish toreador are the veriest child's play, for the charge of the great beast may be so fierce that it knocks the lance aside, and then there is nothing but the spears of the other men to save the tiger fighter from being killed and mangled by the angry creature.—Youth's Companion.

When Pencils Were Treasures.

It is not easy nowadays to find a lead pencil that is not too old at forty—as it were. In the early days of lead pencils the produce of the Seathwaite mine was deemed so valuable that strong guards of soldiers were engaged for its protection, and a special act of parliament was passed penalizing illicit traffic in plumbago, which then realized from 3 shillings to 5 shillings an ounce. Although the miners were stripped and carefully searched when leaving off work, they managed to smuggle a good deal of produce out of the mine.—London Spectator.

SCRAPS AND A DINNER.

A French Chef's Feat With Food That Had Been Discarded.

A year or two ago I was chef in a country gentleman's household in England. The morning after my arrival I looked around the kitchen garden, and in the dust bin that stood in the back yard I saw a mixture of food that could have been turned into a first class dinner.

In about four quarts of milk that had turned sour were swimming stale half loaves, drumsticks of fowls, old ham bones, cold boiled potatoes, trimmings of dough made for piecrusts, cracked eggs, some old codfish and some spoiled macaroni.

Next day I found a second consignment, very similar, about to be carried away and thrown out. I stopped this lot, sorted it out and, with the help of a little stock, half a dozen eggs and a hare that had been shot on the estate, served a seven course dinner for a family of ten that night, and the master of the household called me up and complimented me before the whole family on the best dinner they had had for a year.

Afterward his wife sent for me and told me that, though pleased with the dinner, she feared I had been too extravagant and said that her rule was not to allow more than 7 shillings per head in housekeeping. It was a severe shock to her to hear I had fed the family on the sins of the cook that had left the day before, the cost being not over ninepence per head.—From an Interview With a French Chef in National Food Magazine.

The Struggle.

The road to eminence and power from an obscure condition ought not to be made too easy nor a thing too much of course. If rare merit be the rarest of all things it ought to pass through some sort of probation. The temple of honor ought to be seated on an eminence. If it be open through virtue let it be remembered, too, that virtue is never tried but by some difficulty and some struggle.—Burke.

GERMAN ATTACKS WERE REPULSED BY THE BRITISH

THE FRENCH TROOPS HAVE IMPROVED THEIR POSITIONS

Heavy Artillery Fighting On The Western Front

CANADIANS FIGURED IN SOME IMPORTANT RAIDS

Sometimes the Artillery Fire Increases to Barrage Intensity--Ontario Troops Are Engaged.

GERMANS CAPTURED

(By W. A. Willison, Correspondent of the Canadian Press.)

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, June 6. — For four weeks the Canadian troops south of Arras have been giving the enemy anxious days and nights. While our heavies have been engaged with special targets, our lighter guns work in counter battle and in concentrations of harassing fire on the enemy, communication supports and front line trenches. Our infantry has been constantly active. Night after night the enemy posts and trenches have been raided, while the Germans have, except for one occasional raid in strength, and marked artillery activity, made little reply to our worrying tactics. Ontario troops are largely concerned in these raids.

Our troops in this neighbourhood have done really splendid work, and time has neither diminished their eagerness or weakened their strength. Instead they have just given the enemy another signal proof of their raiding prowess by bayonetting and bombing their way along hostile trenches capturing 196 prisoners, three machine guns, one light trench mortar, blowing up many dugouts and inflicting heavy casualties. Men of Central Ontario with other troops carried out these latest operations.

Attack Succeeded.

They were everywhere successful in their attacks. All afternoon and evening our artillery shelled the village. Just after midnight the fire increased to barrage intensity with machine guns and trench mortars combining in a concentrated bombardment. As soon as this barrage lifted the Ontario troops jumped to their tasks. They moved on in the darkness to attack eight and ten systems of enemy trenches in a tangle of wire, trenches and dugouts. Heavy fighting took place, and in some places the enemy offered stout resistance, holding position until killed in hand-to-hand fighting or being blown away with bombs. In other spots, however, the Boches crowded into shelters trying to hide, showed marked readiness to cry "Kamerad" when discovered. Those who did not surrender were bayonetted. The bomber pressing on bombed dugouts, adjoining shell holes, destroying the former and inflicting many casualties on the Germans who had run into them for shelter.

MAY BOMBARD AMERICAN CITIES

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, June 6.—English newspapers believe the submarine operations along the American coast are intended to lure back American destroyers and patrol boats now in European waters, but are confident this object will not be accomplished.

The bombardment of the American coast cities is considered entirely probable.

Searching For A Submarine Base

Norwegian Steamer Was Sunk Tuesday Off the Virginia Cape—The Crew Was Picked Up

ONE GREAT DANGER

(By Carle Groat—United Press) (Service.)

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The navy today was making a search for a possible secret German submarine base on this coast. The sinking of the Norwegian steamer Eidsvold was the latest U-boat incident in official cables up to early today. This sinking occurred Tuesday off the Virginia coast, and the crew was picked up.

There are sufficient boats in the coast patrol to maintain ordinary vigil, but to dog a submarine effectually with the resources on hand is a large problem. Officers, however declare it is possible to accomplish the purposes desired with the present materials.

Waters Well Charted.

The waters around the Virginia capes are believed to have been well charted by the Germans when the cargo submarine Deutschland was here.

One great danger remaining in the situation is that the U-boats still have untouched a supply of torpedoes to be used on big craft. All their victims so far have been sunk by other means.

GERMANS ARE PREPARING FOR ANOTHER DRIVE

Action May Develop Further to the Left of the Present Battle Front

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, June 6.—It is clearly evident that action will develope further to the left of the present battle front, probably on the Montdidier and Noyon front," Marcil Hutin, the French military expert, declared to-day.

"The right wing of the Crown Prince's army doubtless is preparing for violent pressure north of Compiegne (in the vicinity of Lassigny).

Taking Breath.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, June 6.—British military writers agree that the present slackening of the Marne offensive does not mean the German effort has ended. On the contrary, they said, it is a halt to "take breath, to bring up artillery, and reorganize their transport system before the next blow, which may change its direction slightly, but will still be towards Paris.

CHARGES WERE THROWN OUT.

Minister Tried at the London Conference.

Canadian Press:

WINDSOR, June 6.— To-day's session of the London Methodist conference was notable for the trial of charges of making heterodox statements, defendant being Rev. Dr. Knowles of Petrolea. The complainants were William McIntosh and J. M. Morris, of Petrolea and Dr. Calder of St. Catharines. It was charged that Dr. Knowles attacked the deity and stated that Christ was not perfect. Although no announcement was made, it is understood that the charges were thrown out by the committee which tried them.

AMERICANS HELD BRIDGE

"We Had the Time of Our Lives" Said Some of the Men When They Returned For a Rest After Battle of the Marne

A BITTER FIGHT

(United Press Service.)

(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE MARNE, June 6.—Fighting with machine guns mounted in the windows of the Chateau Thierry, Americans to-day held the crossing of the Marne. They out-shot and out-gamed the enemy.

"We had the time of our lives," said some of the men in this battle, who had come back for rest. "We had heard that trench warfare was dull and uninteresting— but this is the life."

For three days the battle was most bitter. The Marne runs through Chateau Thierry, dividing the town. One side was held by the enemy; the other by Americans and French. After two days of constant travel, the American reserves arrived at the greatest battle in history.

Held the Bridge.

Riding in Fords, within two hours they were in the thick of it. Their guns were dumped from the Ford wagons and hastily mounted in the streets and in the houses of Chateau Thierry. Then for three days they held the bridge and prevented the Germans from getting across.

Despite our withering fire the enemy came on repeatedly from the other side of the stream. Our machine guns were going constantly. Officers aided in picking off the Boches with their revolvers. Then the enemy mounted machine guns in the windows on their side of the river just opposite the Americans and opened fire.

Waves Cut Down.

One group of Americans had guns in an old mill, directly over the water and the Boches were just across. For two days they fought, trying to dislodge each other. German bullets whizzed into the windows and plumped into the walls of the room. But the Yanks' shooting finally won, inflicting heavy casualties and silencing the German guns.

Our guns in this mill also commanded a wheat field at the edge of the town through which the enemy repeatedly attempted to advance. At times as many as nine waves of skirmish lines were visible in this field. They endeavoured repeatedly to reach the river by this means and each time they were driven back.

AERIAL OFFENSIVE CONTINUES ON A STUPENDOUS SCALE

Disabled Machines Come Spinning Down to Earth Like Rockets —Pilots Leap Out In Mid-air.

A HORRIBLE DEATH

(By William Philip Simms—United Press Service.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, June 6.—Just as events on the ground are shaping themselves for the final crash which must eventually decide the fight of the world, the aerial offensive is daily waxing fiercer.

The mutual struggle for mastery of the air since May 14, a stupendous battle miles above the earth, has scarcely stopped a day or night.

British airmen brought down 336 Germans in less than three weeks, up to June 2 of which 283 were totally destroyed. In many cases enemy planes, spinning from the sky toward the ground like rockets, crashed, and burned until only black smudges were left.

A Terrible Disaster.

Sometimes in their agony, pilots and observers leaped from their flaming planes in mid air, whirling over and over, and landing far from the wreck of their machines.

During the same period, more than 526 tons of high explosives were dropped behind the German lines, or well over a million pounds. The Zeebrugge, the Bruges docks and railway stations and munition works in cities far inside Germany, like Mannheim, Landau, Karlsruhe and Cologne, were attacked repeatedly and set fire again and again.

In one day British airmen, often mere boys, shot thirty-four Prussians from the sky and dropped 59½ tons of bombs on the enemy's military centres, going as far as Bruges. Disdaining the anti air craft shells which burst about them, and swooping low to the ground, they started a disastrous fire along the water front.

Enemy Air Fleets

The next day, the same sky raiders charged a number of German air fleets, demolishing 26 craft, the wrecks falling in somersaults to the ground. Elsewhere, they dropped 53 tons of high explosives, going as far as Karlsruhe, where during a ferocious attack by Boche planes, they bomb trains, railways and war works. The bombing squardrons were protected so perfectly by a fighting patrol, that only one British plane failed to return. It was seen landing near Karlsruhe, under control. Some vital part has been hit.

These two exploits occurred during the last two days and nights of May.

On June 1, I saw an air battle continue hotly after 25 planes had been brought down in duels, high up in the blue haze, the same night, 27 tons of bombs were dumped on the Zeeburgge mole and other "tender" spots in that vicinity.

Meanwhile, German war planes have been more daring than ever before, many towns and villages behind the Allies lines have been bombed. Hospitals seem to be the worst sufferers. Several hundred patients, doctors, sisters and attendants have been killed outright, some have been burned alive and many have been wounded. The most pitiful cases perhaps, were wounded soldiers whose horrible compound fractures were just beginning to heal, their wounds were re-opened and their limbs rebroken by the great shock of the explosions.

I visited some of these hospitals today, the experience was terrible and heart rending.

Over the spot where this is written, the unceasing drone of British planes, going over the lines in pursuance of their day's work comes from the sky.

Americans are now able to increase rapidly the Allied advantage above the ground, airmen here are confident the enemy soon will be completely outdone. Even now he seldom ventures to fly alone. Nearly always the German planes are found in great droves, when one is alone. It is pretty certain he is acting as a decoy, hoping to be attacked by a single Allied plane, whereupon a whole squadron will dive from the clouds.

When a German observer is ordered to reconnoitre behind the Allied lines, he usually is accompanied by at least seven battle planes, even then the enemy airmen dislike the job.

Day by day the crossing of our lines is becoming a stiffer task, among the clouds, as on the fields of France, Germany is now making her final bid.

SIGNS OF COMING OFFENSIVE ON THE ITALIAN FRONT

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, June 6.— Prospects of a great open battle between the Austrians and Italians on the Venetian Plains were seen by Italian military men here to-day.

Aviators have reported large Austrian cavalry forces along the Lower Piave, apparently in readiness for such action. It is reported German Uhlans have been forwarded to aid them. In addition, Turk mounted forces may have a hand in the prospective struggle.

Are Strengthening Their Positions

Battle on Western Front is Likely To Be Resumed Any Moment--Artillery is Being Placed

DIVISIONS PATCHED UP

(United Press Service.)

(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES ON THE MARNE, June 6.—Despite the present stabilization of the Marne battle front from Chateau Theirry to Noyon, there is no indication on the part of the Germans to retrench or fortify themselves, which might show an intention to rest on their present line.

Consequently, the battle may be resumed with increased activity at any moment.

Allies Getting Ready.

The Germans have brought up artillery and have relieved their decimated divisions. In the meantime the Allies have been steadily trenching their positions, especially along the Marie and the Villers-Cotterets Forest. Both of these positions are indispensable to the Germans, especially for the purpose of protecting their flanks before undertaking to march towards Paris along the Ourcq and the Marne.

Expert Swears Pathe Records Are Best

An interesting bit of testimony, in a patent suit of large importance recently on trial in the Federal District court for the Second District of New York, had to do with the perfections of Pathe records.

Mr. Woodruff, an acoustician of nation-wide reputation and one of the foremost authorities upon recording and pressing in the talking machine trade, testified under oath that, in his opinion, "Pathe records are the best samples of recording and music on the market to-day and excell anything else in quality." Mr. Woodruff concluded with the assertion that he could not consientiously testify otherwise and that he did not expect to profit in any way by his testimony.

The expert's testimony was of especial interest in view of the fact that the Pathe company had no interest in the legal proceedings in which he was a witness, as the company was neither plaintiff nor defendant and its interests would not be affected one way or the other by the outcome of the trial.

Lakefield Business Men's Excursion Was A Success

LAKEFIELD, June 6.— Lakefield's business men, about sixty-five strong, made their annual tour on Stoney Lake yesterday. The Stoney Lake, which was chartered for the occasion by the Business Men's Association, left the wharf at 1.30 and after a trip around Burleigh, wound up at MacCracken's for supper and returned to the village at 11 o'clock p.m.

GERMANS ORDERED TO GIVE NO QUARTER TO PRISONERS

Startling Disclosures Made by the Former Head of Krupps' Munition Plant.

KAISER ANXIOUS FOR WAR

(Associated Press.)

GUMLIGEN, Switzerland, June 6.—Germany was wholly in agreement with Austria-Hungary concerning the ultimatum sent to Servia at the outbreak of the war, says Dr. Wilhelm Muehlon, formerly director of Krupps in further disclosures on the responsibility for bringing on the conflict. Emperor Wilhelm was personally responsible for Germany's participation, and forced the German leaders to support his war policy. Dr. Muehlon was head of Krupps at the outbreak of the war, and recently startled Europe with his disclosures.

He relates an incident following the outbreak of the war, when Emperor Wilhelm required all German leaders to become involuntary supporters of his war policy. Assembling them as guests the Emperor exclaimed suddenly: "Now, gentlemen, advance, and as we grasp hands, promise me you will stand with me to the last breath."

No Quarter.

Commenting on this Dr. Mulehlon stated: "The guests could hardly do otherwise when thus bidden by their Emperor in his own castle to shake hands with him, and thus there was extorted that which would be of value only if given freely. Dr. Mulehlon declared that an order issued by the Crown Prince of Bavaria to his troops in Belgium amounted to a command to give no quarter to prisoners." He added: "I have received letters from the field which brings me unheard-of information that the Emperor has himself said he had enough prisoners, and has told his own officers he hoped they would take good care not to make too many captures. This news is quite authentic."

Allies Agreed To Declaration

(Special to Examiner.)

London, June 6. — At the Inter-Allied War Council meeting in Versailles, June 3, the British, French and Italian premiers agreed to the following declaration, it was was officially given out to-day:

"First, the creation of a united and independent Poland, with free access to the sea, shall be one of the conditions of a solid and just peace, and the rule of right in Eurpoe.

"Secondly, the Allied Governments noted with pleasure Secretary Lansing's declaration, and desire to express their earnest sympathy in the nationalistic aspiration toward freedom of the Czecho-Slovaks and the Jugo Slavs."

Steamship Was Badly Damaged

(Special to Examiner.)

An English Port, June 6.—The Kenilorth Castle, with the passengers on board, arrived here damaged to-day from a South African port. It is not known whether she was attacked by a submarine or struck a mine.

Two explosions followed a collision with some heavy object. Some of the crew and passengers were lost. One lifeboat, in which there were a number of nurses, overturned. The inrush of water drowned some of the crew.

The collision occurred shortly after midnight, and the Kenilworth Castle began going down by the head, the fore compartments filling with water. The bulkheads held, however, and the vessel regained an even keel, although her bow was torn and twisted.

Four lifeboats took to the water. Several of those who were thrown into the sea when one boat overturned, were rescued by the destroyers

Th Kenilworth Castle displaces 12,975 tons, was built in 1904, and is 570 feet long. She is owned by the Union Castle Mail Steamship Co., and is registered at London

CLAIMED TO BE DEMENTED AND WAS ARRESTED.

Frank Curtis, formerly of town, but now a resident of Seymour, was arrested by Constable Williams, on a charge that he was not in his right senses. Curtis caused a small sensation on the previous Sunday when he he was supposed to have taken a dose of strychnine as an easy way out of this mortal life. He was discovered later in the day at a neighbour's. He says that he took the poison but as he is well physically, he isn't believed. He was handed over to the authorities at Campbellford for an examination as to his mental status.

Frank Jenne Says:

Cheap clothing looks cheap in a week, whilst a good suit will always hold its head up. I never advise a customer to buy a suit because it is cheap. Semi-ready High-School Clothes for boys are not in the "cheap" class. They are dependable, they are certain, if your boy hasn't worn a "High-School" suit, Come to me for his new suit and learn the merit of this clothing.

TALKING ABOUT OURSELVES

Toronto, June 5, 1918

The Examiner,
Peterboro, Ont.

Sincere congratulations to the Examiner on graduating the 1000 Columbia Prize Reporter or America.

John W. Tibbs

The above telegram received by the Examiner from the head of the Canadian Press refers to the triumph scored by a former Examiner reporter, Mr. Harold A. Littledale, now of the New York Evening Post, whose series of articles exposing abuses and leading to reforms in the New Jersey state prison won him the 1000 dollar Pulitzer award for the best example of reporter's work done in the United States during the year. Naturally the Examiner feels gratified at the success of a former member of its staff as well as pleased that the event should be the occasion of congratulations from such a source as the Canadian Press. Mr. Littledale started his journalistic career on the Examiner and will be remembered by many citizens. The Examiner unites with other friends in extending to him the heartiest of congratulations upon his great work.

MORE TROUBLE.

Unless the city council has in mind the opening of a municipal restaurant to feed the homeless on Sundays, the aldermanic board had better be prepared to meet the onslaught of a large body of indignant citizens. As the result of the restricted hours put in force by the council, the restaurant-keepers of Peterboro have decided that they will not open at all on Sunday. They claim that they will be operating at great inconvenience if they open for business only at meal times, and therefore the decision has been arrived at to close the doors tightly from Saturday night until Monday morning. This will prove a hardship to hundreds of citizens who depend upon the local eating houses for their meals; but restaurant keepers can hardly be blamed for their action. If citizens are inconvenienced, and undoubtedly many will be, the blame can be laid on nobody's doorstep but that of the council. The measure passed the other night was backed by no popular demand, and is resented by many residents, who regard it as a "blue-law" regulation, absolutely unnecessary in a city the size of Peterboro.

A WORTHY CAUSE.

It is to be sincerely hoped that the campaign shortly to be launched on behalf of the Playgrounds Association will be rewarded with the enthusiastic support that the merit of the cause warrants. Supervised playgrounds in Peterboro have been a success from their inception; they have meant happier, healthier children, and contented mothers, and the city cannot afford to allow anything to interfere with the operations of the playgrounds during the summer months. Some people giving the matter little or no consideration, are inclined to argue that the project should be dropped until the war is over. Such a policy would be short-sighted and mis-guided. Surely the fact that over half the little ones who enjoyed and benefited by the playgrounds last summer were children of soldiers overseas, is sufficient answer to the citizens who think that the effort of the Playgrounds Association should be abandoned.

Unless it is the children themselves there are no firmer friends of supervised playgrounds than the mothers of the youngsters who enjoyed the privileges offered last year. The mothers have the satisfaction of knowing that their children are in good hands and are therefore relieved of the anxiety that is usually in evidence when the little ones are out of sight. They know, too, that under the supervision of the experts who have charge of the grounds the children are being developed physically along rational lines. They appreciate as well the fact that the consideration of one towards the other that is demanded in the playgrounds is a character builder. The children are taught that the game is the thing—not the victory. The principles of British fair play in sport is inculcated into the youngsters who learn to win like gentlemen, and lose in the same way.

The funds necessary to carry on this splendid work are small in comparison with the results achieved, and there should be a ready and hearty response to the appeal, making this year's effort possible, and wiping out last summer's deficit.

A TONIC STATEMENT.

The official statement made public by the Supreme Allied War Council, in which full confidence is expressed in the outcome of the war, should be reassuring to the people who have been inclined to be pessimistic over reports from the front. The statement however does not minimize the danger, pointing out that the peril has not yet passed, that the enemy is seeking to gain a decision in the west before the full strength of the United States can be brought to bear, and that the attacks of the enemy will be renewed, exposing the allied nations to critical days. In spite of these facts, however, the Supreme War Council announces emphatically and cheerfully its conviction that the allies will baffle the enemy's purpose, and in due course bring him to defeat."

The confident tone of the statement should have a tonic effect upon the pessimists. In it breathes the same spirit that animates the fighting forces at the front. The following extract should be a source of inspiration to every one:

"The arrangements for unity of command have greatly improved the position of the allied armies and are working smoothly and with success. The Supreme War Council has complete confidence in General Foch. It regards with pride and admiration the valour of the allied troops.

"Thanks to the prompt and cordial co-operation of the President of the United tates, the arrangements which were set on foot more than two months ago for the transportation and brigading of American troops will make it impossible for the enemy to gain victory by wearing out the allied reserve before he has exhausted his own.

"The Supreme War Council is confident of the ultimate result, and the allied peoples are resolute not to sacrifice a single one of the free nations of the world to the despotism of Berlin. Their armies are displaying the same steadfast courage which has enabled them on many previous occasions to defeat a German onset. They have only to endure with faith and patience to the end to make victory for freedom secure.

"The free peoples and their magnificent soldiers will save civilization."

THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

(Toronto Globe.)

The completion of the Trent Valley Canal between Lake Simcoe and Lake Ontario will, for a period, deprive Parliament of a staple subject of debate, and the Federal elections in several constituencies of some of their local and financial interest. One can pick up any copy of Hansard for the past thirty-five years and find some reference to this time-honoured project. The idea of connecting Lake Ontario and Lake Huron by a navigable waterway through mid-Ontario, originated nearly a century ago, and surveys were ordered by the Legislature of Upper Canada as early as 1833. The plan has not yet been fully realized, as the Severn River, which joins Lake Simcoe to the Georgian Bay, must be canalized, but the main purpose has been achieved. A large district, principally in the counties of Ontario, Victoria, Peterboro and Northumberland, including a number of important towns, has been provided with a new means of internal communication. The access to Lake Ontario by the Trent River will also bring the district into touch with the Great Lakes during the season of navigation, and will reduce to that extent transportation charges. The movement of freight in the season of 1917 was 17,267 tons one way and 27,242 tons the other way, but this was before the completion of the system.

If the scheme has been somewhat discredited in the country, and a long standing theme for jest and irony, the responsibility has belonged chiefly to Parliament. The habit of increasing the appropriation on the eve of elections gave the public the impression that the canal was mainly political, destined less to carry freight than to carry a number of votes for the Government of the day. It was not a practice good for public morals, and it is to be hoped that sort of thing belongs to a past era in Canadian politics. In 1903 the late W. R. Brock complained in the House of Commons that the expenditure, which up to that time had been only $4,000,000, had been going on for twenty-two or twenty-three years. He demanded that the utility of the project be investigated by a Commission, and that it be either abandoned or proceeded with on business principles. It has taken another fifteen years to carry it to its present stage, at an additional cost of $12,000,000. The people in the large area served by the new system claim that it will promote their industrial and agricultural interests, and that the water powers scattered along the route will become an important factor in their development. May their hopes be fulfilled.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The action of the restaurant-keepers in deciding to close all day Sunday, will be an inconvenience to many citizens. Perhaps those who own motor cars will transport the less fortunate to some place where it is not a criminal offence to sell meals on Sunday.

The Supervised Playgrounds are too valuable an asset to be lost. The project should be liberally supported.

The embargo against high-priced cars will not bother many newspaper men.

BUILDING OF PETROGRAD

Peter the Great's Ruthless Methods in Erecting the Capital.

Most disadvantageously situated of all the capitals of Europe—indeed, of the world—Petrograd is a monument of the pride and energy of Peter the Great. He wanted a European capital in order to signalize and immortalize his conquests. In 1703, when the first foundations of the city were laid on the marshy island on the delta of the Neva, at the eastern end of the gulf of Finland, the surrounding territory had even then not been entirely conquered.

Peter went to work with his usual energy and with his usual ruthlessness to create a capital in what was worse than a desert. He himself superintended the building of the city and gave the directions of the details to half a dozen lieutenants. The work was pushed with almost incredible rapidity, so that by 1712 sufficient advance had been made to permit the transfer of the imperial family from Moscow.

One measure ordered by Peter was that thousands of peasants must settle in or near the new capital. A special tax was put on his empire to meet the expenses of building the city. Such a small difficulty as the scarcity of masons was nothing to a man like Peter the Great. He simply forbade the erection of stone buildings anywhere else in the empire until Petrograd was finished.—New York Times.

MILITARY COWARDICE.

A Sample of Its Punishment During the Thirty Years' War.

Punishment for cowardice in the German army at the time of the Thirty Years' war was so severe as to be ferocious. In the year 1642 the Swedish General Torstensson stormed Leipzig. A force under the command of the Grand Duke Leupold gave him battle before the gates of the city, but during the engagement the Madlonische regiment became suddenly panic stricken and fled.

Punishment immediately followed. When the regiment had again assembled six other regiments surrounded it and tried it by court martial in the open field. The verdict was that the colonel and the captains should die by the sword and that every tenth man among the noncommissioned officers and men should be hanged.

The stern verdict was carried out to the letter, except that at the request of Leopold the men were shot instead of hanged. Colonel George Madlonische was beheaded after he had sought in vain for a pardon. The survivors were consigned to quarters with other commands, and the regiment never regained its name or former prestige. In those days there was no alternative but to be brave. Cowardice meant either death or everlasting disgrace.—Youth's Companion.

GERMANS BUYING IN ASIA

Placing Orders for Cotton and Other Products Years Ahead.

LONDON — The Germans are steadily pushing the tenacle of their economic control far into Central Asia, where they are buying up available crops, including cotton, and placing orders for many years ahead says The Daily Chronicle. The foundation of there development is in the German control of Rumania and the Ukraine.

"Control of the Rumanian and Ukrainian harvests would provide Germany not only in this, but in any future war with a complete solution of her food problem." The Chronicle adds. "She would also, thanks to her unlimited access to Central Asia, have little further trouble with any but tropical raw materials.

"Her Eastern policy can only be undone adequately by the Allies after they have achieved victory, but more attempts ought to be made now to frustrate present developments."

PITY THE MAN who thinks business can be made to prosper independent of newspaper advertising.

PERSIAN GULF PEARLS.

The Divers Are Practically Slaves of the Boat Masters.

Bombay, noted for its pearl markets, is not a pearl producer, though the gems are bought there for shipment to all parts of the world. The pearls sold in Bombay come from the Bahrein islands, a small archipelago on the western side of the Persian gulf, which, although adjacent to territory under the control of Turkey, is governed by an independent sheik under special British protection, the British government maintaining a political agent there.

Of this group of islands only those of Bahrein and Muharak are of any size. Their importance, however, is out of all proportion to their extent, for they are the great center of the Persian gulf pearl fisheries, which are the world's chief source of supply for pearls. The sheik of Bahrein is said to have a customs revenue amounting to about $400,000 per year, which makes him the richest ruler in the Persian gulf. The pearl fisheries under his control may in a good year bring to his islands as much as $2,500,000.

It is difficult for newcomers to obtain the services of good divers owing to the system in vogue, which practically makes this class of men slaves to the masters of the pearling boats. The men's earnings in the majority of cases are insufficient to keep them all the year round, and consequently they take advances from their masters year after year to such an extent that they can never repay their debt. When a diver elects to engage himself to another boat the owner of the latter has to pay up the debt due to the former master should he engage him.—Argonaut.

One of Hook's Puns.

Theodore Hook, the inveterate punster, could pun with gayety upon matters that touched his own pocket. He enlivened the usually prosaic and unwelcome duty of paying his taxes by a word of advice to his neighbors to do likewise—which it is to be hoped the worthy Mr. Winter, the collector, found of some assistance:

Here comes Mr. Winter, inspector of taxes.
I advise you to pay him whatever he axes
I advise you to pay him without any flummery,
For though his name's Winter, his actions are summary!

The Farce.

Farce is a modern term founded on the Latin verb farcire, to stuff. This was originally an allusion to the practice of the ancient buffoons padding out their stage dress to abnormal dimensions. Later the padding was dispensed with, but the wide garments were retained.

Just Goes Out.

"Mother, when the fire goes out, where does it go?" asked a child of her parent.

"I don't know, dear," replied the mother. "You might just as well ask me where your father goes when he goes out."

Very Effective Method For Banishing Hairs

(Modes of To-day)

At very little cost any woman can rid her face of hairy growths if she will use the delatone treatment. This is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This paste is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No harm results from this treatment, but care should be used to buy real delatone.

REPLACED BY WOMEN

No Men Under 35 in Royal Household, King Orders.

LONDON, June 6.—King George has put into effect a rule doing away with all men up to 35 years of age in the royal household.

In the King's private room at Buckingham Palace hangs a "war service roll" giving particulars of the service of all soldiers drawn from

Local Marble Works Will Not Be Affected

Peterborough Plant Will Be Able to Secure Raw Material

M. Arthur Cook, the manager of the Vermont Marble Company, said that so far as he reads the order-in-council placing an embargo on marble, it will not affect the local plant. The order mentions cut marble while that which the Vermont Co. brings in from Vermont is in block form. Should the order intend however the cut material, it will materially affect the works with a tendency towards closing them down.

Foch Will Not Weaken His Lines To The North

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, June 6. — Demonstrations in force against new portions of the western front are looked for by the War Department official now that the German third drive has been slowed down to struggle for improvemnt of local positions west and south of Soissons.

Officers regard the fact that no new blow has been struck at opponents when he decided to let the Aisne front stand on its own strength, even at the cost of much territory overrun by enemy until he could assemble additional units from scattered points along the line beyond Rheims. The very success of the Germans in pressing on to the banks of the Marne it was argued, meant that Foch was resolved not to weaken his lines to the north.

Seven Thousand Prisoners Killed

Russian Transport Was Mysteriously Mined.

(Special to The Examiner.)

COPENHAGEN, June 6.—Seven thousand Red Guards prisoners were killed by their White Guard captors, a despatch from Helsingfors declared to-day. It was stated that Finnish officials propose to send 7,000 other Red Guards into Germany as labourers.

The despatch also reported the mysterious mining of the Russian Transport Europe in Helsingfors Harbour.

Supply And Distribution Of Coal Makes Labour Men Anxious

Arrangements Are Under Way For a Big Deputation to Wait on the City Council at the Regular Meeting in July.

INDEPENDENT LABOUR PARTY

Dissatisfaction with the city's coal programme, and with the dealers method of distribution was freely expressed at the Trades and Labour Council meting last night and it was decided that the delegates should report the conditions to their locals and urge their members to attend in a body the July meeting of the City Council.

It was stated that some citizens are able to place orders for the coal they will require while others are informed that the acceptance of orders is suspended. The Labour men realize that both the City's Fuel committee and the coal dealers have troubles of their own, but it was openly stated that citizens of means are supplied to the limit permitted by law, while the poorer people are put off, and finally do not get coal until winter. In consequence they have to pay the highest prices, although they can least afford. Some persons it was alleged can get ten or twelve tons, while others are refused. One dealer is said to have six hundred orders on his books, and has since been turning the people away. The Labour Council wants to know why there should not be a more equitable distribution since the average citizen feels that he has an equal right with any other person to obtain coal.

It is understood that customers of the dealers are given first consideration, but this system is questioned under the present extreme conditions.

Form Independent Labour Party

Following the Good Friday convention in Toronto, there has been no discussion of the formation of the Independent Labour Party, but a motion was passed last night instructing the secretary to write for information as to the steps which should be taken here for the organization of a Labour Party. It was stated that Labour allied with the war veterans have an opportunity to at least gain a balance of power in politics. The success of the Labour movement in England is the inspiration that moves the Labour Council to get ready for action in Peterboro.

Painters Are Organized

The Painters' Union recently organized is making headway. Their representatives to the Labour Council are David Hartley, Thos. Duncan, T. Embury, J. Smith and J. N. Watson.

PRESENT BATTLE EXPECTED TO RE-OPEN WITH GREATER VIOLENCE

Enemy Cannot Hope to Break Through Present Line Without Additional Heavy Artillery.

THE STORM CENTRE

Special to The Examiner:

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES ON THE MARNE, June 6. —The enemy now finds his way barred by a line which he cannot hope to break without the medium of heavy artillery, which, as yet, he has not had time to bring up.

Within a very few days, the present battle between the Aisne and the Marne must be expected to re open with greater violence than ever, but the odds will be in favour of the Allies, as the surprise phase is past. This will be the bloodiest summer Europe has ever known.

ON THE BRITISH FRONT.

Special to The Examiner:

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, June 6. — Crown Prince Rupprecht's men continue to jostle each other under the June sunshine, although the storm centre still remains between the Aisne and the Marne.

Up here Hindenburg's guns thunder spasmodically, the British replying with a harrassing fire up and down the enemy's lines of communication.

During the early morning hours yesterday, the Germans began a heavy bombardment west of Marlancourt. At 3.20 a.m. a strong raiding party came over the top, advancing on the British positions. A short sharp struggle ensued. The Germans retreated in haste, leaving two prisoners. Meanwhile north of Lens and in the Cambral sector, the British conducted two raids, getting samples of Garmen fighting men in both places.

Smoke clouds were observed rising above Banaume to-day, indicating perhaps a large fire.

Rupprecht's artillery is especially active in the Mont De Marris sector and the Merbecq and St. Sylvestre neighbourhoods. The batteries in the Lys Canal areas and in the region of Amiens continue under bombardment daily.

Boys Of Nineteen Not To Serve Yet

Those of Twenty Are Next on the List For Calls to Service

It may come as cheerful news to the youths of 19 to know that there is no immediate intention on the part of the Ottawa officials to call them to the colours just yet. It is understood that the present intention is to first call up those who have become 20 since October 13 of last year, and to leave the boys of 19 until later. The 19's, it is planned, will be allowed until three months prior to their 20th birthday, when they will be called to the ranks and will be given sufficient training to have them ready to go overseas by the time they are 20. In the meantime, now that all the men from 20 to 22 have been instructed to report, attention will be directed to the older men in Category "A." One feature which is now taking up much attention on the part of the military officials is the applications which are coming in from young farmers between the ages of 20 and 22, or their relatives, for freedom from service for the summer's work. There have been so many applications of this nature received by the various commanding officers that only those of unusual emergency can be considered. Each C. O. has instructions to investigate each case carefully, and to pass along only those cases where extreme hardship would exist if the man is kept by the army.

Nelson Graham Run Over By Automobile Two Ribs Broken

W. Nelson Graham, newspaper and magazine dealer on Charlotte Street, was severely injured at noon to-day when he was struck down and run over by an automobile in front of the Dufrus Garage on Simcoe Street. Mr. Graham was riding a bicycle easterly past the garage when the automobile, driven by John Cahill, employed by Mr. Duffus, rolled out of the yard and ran him down. Although he was nine feet from the curb when he was hit, he was dragged fourteen feet before the automobile was stopped. Mr. Graham's injuries include two fractured ribs, and various bruises. His wheel was wrecked beyond repair, and his clothes were badly torn. It was stated that the front wheel of the car struck the bicycle and the rear ones ran over him and the bicycle.

Kawartha Lakes Charmed Dr. Reid

Hon. Dr. Reid, was accompanied in his trip up the canal yesterday by Mr. J. H. Burnham, Mayor Duncan, Robt. Stuart of the Quaker Oats Company of Chicago, Mr. W. H. Denham, Mr. W. G. Morrow and Mr. S. R. Armstrong. They reached Fenelon Falls towards evening and the Peterboro party returned home in Mr. Morrow's car.

The Kawartha Lakes were a long dissolving panaorama of vernal beauty, and even the Peterboro men to whom the lakes are familiar were entranced by the riches of the field and sky and shoreline. The Minister found in this section of the canal even greater beauties than during the first two days' sail, and was simply enchanted, continually remarking upon new stretches of rare scenery, and of localities that were touched into wonderful life by the magic of spring.

At Bobcaygeon, the people greeted the party at the Lock in large numbers, and Mr. C. E. Stewart read an address in behalf of the community. Hon Dr. Reid replied, and Mrs. Mrs-son Boyd and several other ladies took advantage of his presence to urge the saving of a row of maples along the canal bank which they believed to be threatenedd by proposed enlargement of the canal bank.

Frequent calls were made at interesting places along the lakes. The trip will be completed today, it is expected.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Last night's report of the Council meeting indicates that they should be sent to Salem, Massachusetts, and one would think that some of the members of the Council had descended from the Blue Law experts of one hundred years ago. It is a good thing there will be an election by general vote this year, because the reactionaries will then be eliminated. Telling a man what to eat by the Municipal Council, and limiting his hours on Sunday when he can eat a meal, savours of the dark ages. Restaurants are very necessary in this town for the business men, and particularly for the busy house wife on Sunday who tries to take a rest and take a meal with her husband and children in a restaurant. When the All Highest City Council decides when we shall eat, how we shall eat, the next thing they will be doing will be trying to impose on us what we shall eat.

Yours truly,
GEORGE STREET.

Dear Sir,—There is much disquieting and very foolish talk going the rounds as to the conscription of young ladies for overseas and for western farming. Such foolish talk does not sound well and is a blot on the fair name of our country, so let us hope we will hear no more of it, however it originates. In time of war strong man was created to go out and fight for his cuntry and for his women folk. Woman's position is to remain quietly at home waiting and praying, "by far the hardest part" I think. Of course, the nurses may wish to go overseas, as many already have. Women and girls will find it hard enough to try to take a man's place on the farm as they were never meant for it, but during war they must simply do their best in the blazing summer heat. It is certainly hard to see them do it. And in the city it is the same, the men have gone and young ladies must take their places. Some men may be trying to shirk their duty, but let us hope not.

A FARMER.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

In view of the proposed By-law closing the restaurants at twelve o'clock on Saturday nights and on Sundays, except at certain specified hours, I think it desirable that a few facts should be placed before the citizens:

1. It is probably not generally known that many workmen in a manufacturing city like Peterborough are called upon to work on night shifts, and that large numbers of these workmen, where they can possibly do so, make use of the restaurants for their midnight meal, the meal taking the place for the night worker of the mid-day meal of the day worker.

2. Travellers arriving on the midnight train Saturday night would reach Peterborough when all eating houses would, under the new By-law, be closed, and a few such experiences would result in their avoiding Peterborough as much as possible.

3. On Sunday the proposed regulations give permission to remain open from 7 to 10 a.m., from 12 to 2 p.m., and from 5 to 7 p.m. This simply means that if anyone by motor reaches Peterborough at 2:15 on Sunday afternoon they must go hungry until 5 o'clock, and on the other hand if they reach Peterborough a few minutes after 7 Sunday evening they must go unfed until Monday morning. These regulations affect adversely not only tourists ad travellers, but are calculated to be a great hardship to workmen and others whose occupation or circumstances require them to obtain a meal at public eating houses.

4. The proposed regulations are not part of the general governmental policy, nor are they found to exist in any of the cities in Canada, and would simply reduce Peterborough to the position of a "cross-roads village," causing great inconvenience and hardship to many classes of people.

5. The Boston Cafe is prepared to cheerfully abide by any rules or regulations that the Government may consider necessary in the best interests of the people at the present time, but the proprietors feel that the proposed By-law can effect no real public good, and will, on the other hand, prove injurious to the City of Peterborough and its reputation among the travelling and tourist public, aside altogether from the injury it may cause the restaurant proprietors themselves.

6. The proprietors of the Boston Cafe would be only too glad to have a general regulation or By-law passed preventing the sale of ice cream on Sunday, and this could be effected without passing a By-law so severe in its nature as to be injurious not only to the restaurant proprietors, but detrimental to the general interest and convenience of the public.

I ask the Council, the press and the citizens generally to consider the seriousness of the step that is being taken, and not take a course which would make Peterborough a place to be avoided as far as possible by tourists and the travelling public.

Pale, Delicate Girls

Does your daughter inherit a delicate organization from you? The anaemia of young girls may be inherited or it may be caused by bad air, unsuitable food, hasty and irregular eating, insufficient out-of-door exercise and not enough rest and sleep.

It comes on gradually, beginning with langnor, indisposition to mental or bodily exertion, irritability and a feeling of fatigue. Later comes palpitation of the heart, headache, dizziness following a stooping position, frequent headaches, and breathlessness. In a majority of cases constipation is present. There may be no great loss of flesh but usually the complexion takes on a greenish yellow pallor.

Cases of this kind if neglected become serious but if taken in time there is no need to worry. The treatment is quite easy and simple. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which are free from any harmful or habit forming drug are just the tonic needed to remedy this wretched state of health. Though it is not noticeable improvement actually begins with the first dose. As the blood is made rich and red the pallor leaves the face, strength and activity gradually return and if the treatment is continued until the last symptom disappears the danger of a relapse is very slight.

If the symptoms of anaemia appear prudence suggests that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be given at once, and the sooner they are given the more speedily will the trouble be overcome. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for [illegible] Dr. Williams' Medi-

LETTER FROM A PETERBORO' SOLDIER

Russell Creighton Has Been Awarded the Military Medal

Mrs. E. D. Creighton, 408 Stewart street, has received the following letter from her son, Russell Creighton, who is now in France. The letter, follows:

France, 18/4/18.
Pte. R. Creighton,
No. 636688.

Dear Mother,—Just received your letter yesterday, and sure was glad to hear from you and that you are all well as this leaves me in the pink of health. I had a letter from Evelyn. She said she was going home this spring. I wish I could go myself, but I guess it will be some time before I get back. I suppose you know by this time that I got the Military Medal on the 4th of March, the same morning that I got hit. I am back with the boys now, but I didn't know I had won it until I got back. I haven't seen Raymond since we were on leave. I saw Malcomb Stimers to-day. He just came to France. He has been having a good time in England. I just got another letter saying you were sending money in it, but there was none in it.

Well, I think I will ring off for to-night. I will write again.

I remain your loving son,
RUSSELL.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continuallly being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly fee their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by McDermid & Jury and most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:— Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

EDITOR OF CHURCH PAPER IS CURIOUS

Asks What Becomes of the Y. M. C. A's Profits.

MONTREAL, June 4.—Arthur H. Moore, editor of the Montreal Churchman, in a letter to the press, discusses the question of the Y.M. C.A., and the war. He says that the Y.M.C.A. balance sheet for 1917 is one of those statements that give practically no information. A disbursement of over a million dollars is covered by four items, one of which is a balance in hand.

Mr. Moore continues: "The Y.M.C. A. is purchasing 300 tons monthly for its canteens with public money, and some parties are enjoying this huge trade. Who gets the profits?"

Mr. Moore, discussing a statement by C. W. Bishop, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A., that though forbidden by the army authorities from wholesale supplies, it had obliged chaplains' canteens, says: "In a previous article on this subject I might have told of amazing instances at Valcartier Camp, one where a responsible officer of a regiment went to the Y.M.C.A. and asked the loan of soft drinks for his men's regimental canteen out of the huge Y.M.C.A. supplies until a contractor, who had failed to deliver, brought in a stock in a day or two.

"He met the same blunt refusal that greeted a captain in Flanders, who went to a Y.M.C.A. hut with his men for a Holy Communion service in the early morning, when the hut was not in use."

Concluding, Mr. Moore says: "An editor of a religious journal, unaccustomed to the literature of giltedged prospectuses, may perhaps be pardoned for taking exception to a feature of the information given to the public in the big Y.M.C.A. campaign. It was published in all the papers that the Y.M.C.A. sells many useful things to soldiers for their convenience. Profits, if any, to be all spent for the benefit of soldiers.

"Here is what is actually camouflaged under this most fetching advertisement: The Y.M.C.A. sells hundreds of tons of goods monthly to the soldiers, a profit is charged on everything sold. These profits amounted to $820,000 in 1917. Again, the religious editor finds himself in difficulty in reconciling that 'if any' with the methods of a 'Christian' association."

ANOTHER DROWNING IN THE TREACHEROUS CANOE ROUTE OUTSIDE THE PIER AT LOCKS

Jack Watkiss, Aged 17 Years, Lost His Life in Turbulent Water Canoe Upset—George Panter Swam Ashore—Watkiss Drowned in a Few Moments.

A DANGER SPOT

Jack Watkiss, the seventeen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Watkiss, 256 McDonnel street, was drowned below the locks at 9.30 o'clock last night when he and his chum, George Panter, 16 years old, of 128 Rubidge street, were upset from a canoe in the swift current that makes a veritable death trap of the canoe approach to the quiet water above the dam.

It was just at dusk when Watkiss, Panter and a younger boy, Melville Watley, who lives at the corner of Wolfe and Rubidge streets, were returning from a short paddle down the river. They had hired a canoe at Reid's boat house, near the foot of Lansdowne street, close to the G. T. R. bridge, and were coming up stream. Hugging the north shore they found safe and easy going in the calm back-wash on the left hand side of the entrance to the lock. Then they turned out towards the main stream, and as they drew near the long pier that extends from the south, or the east side of the lock, Mr. W. Hutchinson, of 103 Gladstone Avenue, warned them of the danger beyond the breakwater, and told young Watley to get out of the boat. The boys heeded his advice and turned back to shore, leaving Watley to walk around the lock to the head waters.

UPSET BY SWIFT CURRENT.

The other two lads then put off again, and as the canoe passed the pier to make the turn up-stream it was caught by the rushing current, and in a twinkling was flipped over.

Panter started to swim to shore, and reached it exhausted. He was pulled out by Mr. George Welch of 25 Crescent street.

Watkiss was unable to swim, and was helpless. Mr. Hutchinson, who was fishing off the pier, quickly got a life buoy from the lock house, and ran to the water's edge, but the boy had sunk. After his first shout which was heard by persons on the bank farther down the stream, he disappeared apparently within a few moments after the upset.

Messrs. Haggart, Ben Moore and Tom Akins searched for the body last night, but without success. It was recovered shortly before noon to-day. Police Sergeant Blade and Constables Deannard and Bromley reached the river within five minutes of the accident.

An unusual and unfortunate circumstance was the absence of launches from that part of the river last night. Usually there are boats flitting around above the Belmont Club House, but last evening they were all down the stream.

The police ascribe the cause of the accident to the inexperience of the boys in the current. Their canoe was eeeeett K heTyeT eeeee eaught broadside by the surging water before they could turn the bow upstream. This is an extremely dangerous current. The last preceding victim was Lieut. Payne of the 93rd Battalion, who was drowned there just two years ago. Mayor Duncan has clamored for a breakwater beyond the pier but each year finds the canoe route still exposed to the rush of water from the dam a short distance above.

KING GEORGE ANSWERED THE CANADIAN MOTHER'S REQUEST

Boy of Seventeen Was Returned to Her Just as He Was About to Leave England For France.

UNIQUE INCIDENT

(Special to Examiner.)

SAULT STE. MARIE, June 6. — To have her son of seventeen granted a discharge from the Canadian army by King George personally, just as lad's regiment was embarking at an English part for France, is the proud and unique credit of Mrs. A. E. Steward of this city. Mrs. Steward had two other sons overseas and when her youngest son of 16 enlisted with the 227 battalion, giving his age as 18, she determined to move earth and heaven to get him back. Her query to Ottawa met with no response. Determined, she addressed a request to King George, London, England. Her letter did not reach its destination and after months of anxious waiting she wrote another. The petition received his majesty found time in midst of his arduous duties to listen to the appeal. He instructed the war department to let the boy go home. The 227th was then encamped at Shorncliffe, standing in the ranks, kit on back and rifle in hand, waiting the order to march to the ship board, Steward was commanded to step out and prepare to go home. Mystified, not knowing from where or by what means his discharge came, the boy had no course but to obey and is now in the Soo. It was not until he reached home that he knew the particulars. He is determined to return to the fight when his time comes. Steward's people are humbly following their living day by day and are joyful to think that their appeal was answered. With tears in her eyes the mother said, "I did not write in vain". It is thought that the incident is without equal in Canada's war history.

Lawrence is the man who was said to have been eaten by a bear last winter, boots and all. No bear will ever eat Lawrence. They are said to be rather particular as to their diet. —Bancroft Times.

THE ONLY MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she will use nothing else. Their use teaches her that they are absolutely safe; that they never fail to give relief, and that the little ones do not dread taking them as they do castor oil and other harsh purgatives. Concerning the Tablets Mrs. John M. Weaver, of Blissfield, N.B., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past ten years and have found them so good I always keep a box in the house." TOMATOES.

Perhaps there is no other vegetable that is more universally popular in Canada than the tomato. It is a tender plant and requires delicate handling. For instance the least touch of frost is ruinous and thus it cannot be put out too early in the season. The earlier varieties of tomatoes should be planted three feet each way or four by two and a half feet, for the greatest ease in getting among the plants. Care should be taken in transplanting them nor to disturb the soil about the roots of the plants. As cut worms are often troublesome about the time the tomatoes are set out it is a good plan to make a little collar of tar paper and put it around the stalk of the plant about two inches below and two inches above the soil. After planting the chief thing where tomatoes are concerned is cultivation. The surface soil should be kept loose from the day the plants are set out until they meet one another.

The commonest method in the home garden is to train tomatoes to stakes or wires. In this way they can be kept very clean and are more attractive looking than those grown while the fruit ripens more quickly, especially when the surplus leaves are ripped off to allow the free play of the sunshine.

To Bell Telephone Subscribers

It is the intention, coincident with the issue of next directory, about June 10th, to introduce Jack-per Line operating on all Two-party lines.

This will mean that instead of each subscriber on such lines having separate numbers, one number only will be assigned to each Two-party line, the subscribers connected thereon to be designated by the affixes "W" and "J" respectively.

This change in the method of operating Two-party lines will in no way interfere with the grade of subscribers' service.

As there will be a large number of changes in numbers, please consult directory before calling, to avoid errors.

Any information you may desire in connection with this change will be cheerfully given.

View From Mount Pilatus.

The mountain of the Rigi in Switzerland, commands a panorama of 40 miles in circumference, which includes the lovely lake of Lucerne, and is surpassed for beauty. The Rigi was known to only a few travelers in the eighteenth century, but after the peace of 1815 it became a resort for the curious, the first dwelling having been erected in 1814. Now many hotels are in a flourishing condition, and it is popular even in winter. There is a little chapel, with its walls covered with votive tablets, for many have been the victims in the ice gorges of this lofty peak.

Pipefish.

The pipefish take care of their young in a manner that is entirely peculiar. The newly laid eggs are taken care of by the male, which has a sort of fold on each side of its body. Beneath the "flaps" he keeps the eggs until the young are hatched and sufficiently grown to take care of themselves. While in the "flap" they are fed by the mother upon whom falls the duty of hunting around for food.

When Salt Was Expensive.

"As cheap as salt," is a common expression even in these days of high prices, but there were times across the line when salt was not any too cheap. Col. W. T. Gregory, the Leamington patriotic worker, possesses a well-preserved document which was a receipt for $520 in gold in payment for 520 pounds of salt. His father was the purchaser in the south in 1864, requiring the salt for the curing of meat—"and it had to be carted from Petersburg," remarked Col. Gregory. "Some people here are complaining about war-time prices, but here were real war-time prices on this continent in those days. What would they say if they had to pay a dollar a pound for salt?"

Many handsome gifts were given the bride. After the ceremony a luncheon was served. The happy couple left on the afternon train for Toronto, Hamilton and Niagara Falls. DR. JAMES BINGHAM DIED YESTERDAY

The Deceased Was Ninety-six Years of Age—Funeral To-morrow

Dr. James Bingham, Peterboro's oldest resident, died yesterday in the Nicholls Hospital, aged 96 years.

The late Dr. Bingham was born in Armagh, Ireland, in 1822, and came to Canada to reside in 1845, when he settled in Bowmanville He later removed to Toronto, where he studied Classics at the Academy, now the Queen's Hotel. In 1845 he graduated from Queen's College, Kingston, and started his career in the medical profession at Wolfe Island. From there he removed to Warsaw, where he married Harriet Burnham Choate, who by a strange coincidence predeceased him 43 years ago, on the same day of the year, June 5, 1875.

From Warsaw he removed to Peterboro 40 years ago. Since coming to Peterboro he was known for his charitable works which were many. Many families have profited by the late doctor's kindness for he was a man whose right hand truly knew not what his left hand did. In religion he was a Presbyterian; in politics a Liberal. For ten years he held the position of Medical Health Officer in the city. He leaves one daughter, Mrs. George Stevenson, Rosedale, Toronto.

Funeral to-morrow morning to Warsaw, where service will be held.

THE RED CROSS.

Its Real Origin Dates to Napoleon's Italian Campaign of 1859.

The Red Cross owes its real origin to the great and terrible campaign of 1859, when Napoleon made it his boast that he would free Italy "from the Alps to the Adriatic." At the great battle of Magenta 10,000 Austrians and some 5,000 French soldiers were left dead and dying on the fields.

A Swiss gentleman, named M. Henri Dunant, made a pilgrimage to that battlefield and was an involuntary eyewitness of the awful carnage of the battle of Solferino, a battle which lasted some sixteen hours and left some 30,000 dead and wounded. Henri Dunant realized that the medical service of what was probably the greatest army in the world was absolutely inadequate to cope with the casualties, and he was at once compelled to take some action to rectify the matter.

The result was that he wrote a small book for private circulation, entitled "Un Souvenir de Solferino," and this, with his private appeal, resulted in Napoleon III, commanding Dunant to his presence, where, with the great Marshal MacMahon, they seriously talked matters over.

The result of this was a conference of the powers, called together by the Swiss federal government, at which Henri Dunant placed his proposals. Out of this Geneva conference of 1864 resulted the Geneva convention, under which all medical supplies and personnel in war time are protected.

A Genuine Rupture Cure Sent On Trial To Prove It

Don't Wear a Truss Any Longer

Even Soldiers from the Trenches of Europe Write to Tell How the Wonderful Brooks Appliance Cured Their Ruptures, Sound and Well. Sent on Trial to Prove It.

From the battle front in Europe comes a letter written by Private John Carter, whose home address is No. 2 Shaw View, Flixton, telling of his complete cure of rupture from wearing the Brooks Appliance.

April 18th, 1915.
C. E. Brooks,
Dear Sir:
I received your letter by first post this morning. I beg to thank you for your Appliance which was instrumental in the way it cured me of my rupture. I have now been in Kitchener's army seven months, and I have gone through all the training, and I have never felt anything and not had the slightest trouble. I remember when I passed the doctor he remarked "There is nothing wrong with you, young man, you are in the best condition," and he sounded me all over, and I again thank you for the same, and I give my consent to use my letter as a testimonial to anyone, as I have been cured. Hoping you and yourfirm much success.

Yours truly,

If you have tried most everything else, come to me. Where others fail is where I have my greatest success. Send attached coupon today and I will send you free my Illustrated book on Rupture and its cure, showing my Appliance and giving you prices and names of many people who have tried it and were cured. It is instant relief when all others fail. Remember, I use no salves, no harness, no lies.

I send on trial to prove what I say is true. You are the judge and once having seen my illustrated book and read it you will be as enthusiastic as my hundreds of patients whose letters you can also read. Fill out free coupon below and mail today. It's well worth your time whether you try my Appliance or not.

Make up your mind right now that you will never pay out another dollar for trusses. They are expensive, uncomfortable and actually harmful. And when you once try a Brooks Appliance you could never be persuaded to ever again wear a truss.

And here is a letter from a mother who is thankful because a Brooks Appliance cured her boy so he could go out and serve his country.

2, Orchard Road,
Richmond,
Surrey.

April 11th, 1915.

Mr. C. E. Brooks,

Dear Sir:

A line to thank you for what your Appliance has done for my son. After wearing it from December to the following September I can say he is quite cured and is now serving his country in France at his own trade, a shoeing smith. You can make what use you like of these, my thanks.

I am, yours,

(Mrs. E. Whittle.)

The above is C. E. Brooks, inventor of the Appliance, who cured himself and who is now giving others the benefit of his experience. If ruptured, write him today, at Marshall, Michigan.

Wouldn't Take $100 for Appliance

Cranworth, Ont.

Dear Mr. Brooks—I am pleased to write you and let you know what your Appliance has done for me. I think I am all right now, as I have not seen the first sign of it since last fall. I can now run, jump and lift all I like and I would not take $100 for it if I could not get another. I do not wear it except when at hard work. Your appliance is just as good as ever. You can use this letter as you like for the benefit of others.

Yours sincerely,
GEO. KENNEDY.

REMEMBER

I send my Appliance on trial to prove what I say is true. You are to be the judge. Fill out free coupon below and mail to-day.

Rupture Thoroughly Healed

Ingersoll, Ont., Feb. 6, 1914.
Mr. C. E. Brooks:
Perhaps you will be interested in hearing what your Appliance has done for me. I know without doubt that my rupture has thoroughly healed after a term of sixteen years' suffering, and I attribute my restored and healed condition to the wearing of your Appliance, which held the bowel firmly and painlessly during the healing process. I have not worn it for months—neither do I feel in need of it.
Yours truly,
F. C. NOXON.

Ruptured 22 Years; Now Cured

East Sherbrooke, Que., Jan. 27, 1914.
Mr. C. E. Brooks:
Dear Sir,—I am very glad to hear from you, and happy to be able to tell you that my rupture was cured some time ago by your Appliance. I now need no truss after twenty-two years of torture.
Yours truly,
O. E. LENAY.

Cured Me Completely

Perth Centre, N. B., April 26, 1914.
Mr. C. E. Brooks:
Dear Sir:—I received your letter regarding the Appliance you sent me. It was a complete success and now I don't know that I ever had a rupture. It has cured me completely and I thank you very much for it.
Very truly yours,
REV. H. A. SIBSON.

Child Cured in 3 Months

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Mr. Brooks—Just a line to let you know your Appliance has completely cured our little boy and we are very well pleased with it. We had it on him for about three months, and since he has had it off the rupture has not showed at all.
Yours truly,
MRS. G. SUDDABY.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—Will you kindly permit me to explain why the public meeting could not be held on Tuesday evening, when the Minister of Railways and Canals was here, and to express the deep regret of myself and the Council that it had to be abandoned. Our information was that the Minister and party would probably arrive at Peterborough about three o'clock and we then announced the public meeting for early in the evening. On Tuesday afternoon we got word by telephone that the time of arrival would be later, probably about five o'clock, and the announcement was made that the meeting would be later. But the delays on the way were greater than was expected, and they did not reach Peterborough until about seven o"clock. That made the dinner late. Besides, one great aim we had in view was to impress the Minister with the necessity for having the canal completed to the Georgian Bay, and one important means for doing that was to let the Minister see the Quaker Oats mill in daylight, and demonstrate the need for water transportation for grain from the West. Mr. Robert Stuart had come from Chicago, at our request, to assist us in this. The people will recognize that to do this was of first importance. For that reason, the Minister was taken to that plant, and was greatly impressed, as was shown by his reference to it afterwards in his speech. This made the time after eight o'clock before the Minister got to dinner, and we had to, most reluctantly, let it be known that the public meeting could not be held. I am satisfied that the people will see that, though regrettable, this course was unavoidable, and will approve of what we did under the circumstances.

I would like to take this opportunity, also, to thank the 57th Regiment Band for their kindness in turning out and being ready to take part in the meeting.—Yours very truly,

GEO. H. DUNCAN, Mayor.

CANADA HAS MADE GOOD IN SHIPBUILDING INDUSTRY

The London Times Makes This Statement of 1917 Tonnage, and Most of It This Year

GREAT ACHIEVEMENT FOR THIS COUNTRY

London, June 7.—(Via Reuter's, Ltd.)—The return of new merchant ships completed in May, says the Times, shows a great advance on the previous month, and his is not the only proof of the energy now being shown into shipbuilding. The accounts of new ship yards created where three months ago there was nothing but open fields is another piece of evidence. There has also been a great deal of enterprise in the extension of existing yards. These achievements afford proof that the industrial energy of the country is not exhausted and has an abundant reserve force.

"Other items of news point to a general increase of activity in shipbuilding, not only here, but in the United States and Canada, an activity hich will certainly be stimulated by the new German offensive off the American coast.

"According to the chairman of the Imperial Munitions Board, there is in Canada one quarter of the total merchant tonnage produced by the United Kingdom in 1917, and four-fifths of it will be completed this year.

"That is the remarkable achievement for a country in which ten years ago ship building hardly existed in embryo. All this enterprise will bear fruit in due course and before this time next year the shipping positions will be totally different from that of to-day."

Archibald Hurd, writing in the Daily Telegraph, says the output of British tonnage during the twelve months ending May 31 was almost exactly twice that of the preceding 12 months. He continues:

"Since the spring of last year the progress has been consistent and steady if not swift. It has been marked by no sensational developments, and will be marked by none.

"While it is a subject of congratulations that this upward movment can be recorded it may be recalled, on the other hand that considerably over a year ago it was stated that our resources, if labour and material were made available would enable us to build three million tons yearly, or twice what has been built in the past twelve months.

"The truth is that the output of three million tons yearly is impossible so long as the present shortage of labor continues, and long before the supply for skilled and unskilled workmen could be made good the demand for more material would have to be increased."

WAR GARDEN BULLETIN

Issued by the Canada Food Board in collaboration with experts on the staff of the Dominion Experimental Farm.

CREEPING VEGETABLES.

The creeping vegetables, such as squash, egg-plant, cucumbers, peppers and pumpkins are all tender and should not be planted until all danger of frost is over. They require warmth and sunshine and are useful to fill up blanks in the garden, although they have a tendency to take up a lot of space. They should be protected at nights for two or three weeks after being set out.

A forkful of well-rotted manure worked into the soil under each hill will help greatly where cucumbers are concerned. Place hills three feet apart with rows 3 or 4 feet apart.

Plant ten or twelve seeds in each place and thin when the plants are well started. If beetles appear, dust with fine street dust to which a very little kerosene has been added.

Eighteen inches should be allowed between each pepper plant. Egg plants are set out with two feet between each. Three or four plants will supply a family of six.

May we supply you with your Moth Preventatives and Disinfectants

Moth Flakes, Moth Bags, Moth Balls, Cedar Flakes, Formaldehyde & Formaldehyde Candles and other disinfectants such as:—

GRAIN MARKET

Following a weak opening the grain markets yesterday took a sudden and unexpected upturn which carried July corn to 3 1-8c at the close above Wednesday's close. Oats acted similarly, opening weak, and then going up to a strong finish at the close. Winnipeg July oats closed 7-8c up and Chicago 1 3-8c up. The reason for the sudden change is not so easily accounted for, but it is thought submarine activity may have had something to do with it.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards: Receipts yesterday 21 cars, with 142 cattle, 50 calves, 725 hogs, and 104 sheep and lambs.

There was a very small market yesterday with only 142 fresh cattle offering and small stuff correspondingly light. Prices of butcher's steers were steady to firm with Wednesday's market. There was a good demand for all classes of butcher cattle, and a stronger tone pervades the market generally. With the exception of hogs all small stuff is firm and strong.

Packers are holding hogs easily down to the $18.50 fed and watered basis, and predict confidently that prices will again go lower next week.

C.N.R. Tourist Sleeping Cars mean Comfort to the Traveller

The interior is somewhat more modest in appointment than the standard or first-class sleeping car. Of solid steel underframe and with highly polished dark green finish, the Canadian Northern's tourist cars present a very pleasing appearance. The interior is finished in mahogany, with slate carpet to match and cork composition flooring to deaden sound and lessen vibration. Commodious smoking room and toilets; kitchenette with appliances for light cooking, running water, etc., are greatly appreciated. Roomy berths, accommodating two persons if desired, are just one-half the first-class rate. Second-class ticket holders may also occupy these cars, and the Dining Car is always available at meal time. Trains leave Toronto Union Station 10 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays for Winnipeg and points west.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

DAVID'S LAST DAY

DAVID'S LAST DAY.

CHAPTER LXXXVI.

David's train went at noon. It was all I could do to keep the tears back while I helped him pack. George couldn't go to the train, he said, at breakfast, but he was very cordial to David and invited him to come again.

"He isn't half bad when you come to know him!" David remarked after George had left for the office.

"Indeed, he isn't!" I rejoined, glad to talk to him of George. I was so afraid he would tell the folks at home I was not really happy. They would worry so, if he did.

"I thought he was the limit when I first came. But he has his good points." David said this so soberly I screamed with laughter.

"Of course he has! Just see how generous he is. I never have to ask for anything. And he has been awfully good about taking us out." I did not say that I should probably sit alone as soon as David left.

"You acted sort of afraid of him, I thought when I first came, and it made me hot under the collar."

"Nonsense! And David, I want you to tell dad and mother how wonderful he has been to us. And that I have a beautiful home, won't you"

"Sure I will, Sis!"

I went to the train with David and cried all the way back home. I should miss him so dreadfully! It had been a little bit of my girlhood days back again.

OFF FOR THE SUMMER.

The next two or three days were so busy that I didn't have time even to miss David. Evelyn came over, and watched Celeste pack. It seemed almost ridiculous for one woman to have so many clothes. Hats, dresses, shoes, everything that I could possibly need and wear.

"I love my tennis clothes," I said, as Celeste packed a short skirt, "they are so comfortable."

"Your husband will be proud of you on the tennis courts; it's awful fashionable to play, and you do it so well."

"Thank you, Mrs. Reeves. But I wish I were going with you and Kurts instead of to those fashionable places. "I really meant it. How much more I should have meant it had I known George's plans I little dreamed!

We were to start the next morning. I had hoped George would come in early as there were one or two things I wanted to talk to him about. But he didn't. I waited until after 11 o'clock; then, fearing to make him cross, I retired.

At breakfast the next morning, he remarked:

"I don't know whether I told you or not but Mrs. Collins is going on the same train with us!"

"What?"

"Didn't you hear what I said? That is a very annoying habit you have. If you paid attention you would not have to ask me to repeat."

RESENTMENT AND DISAPPOINTMENT.

"I said that Mrs. Collins was going to take the same train," he went on.

"Is she going to Newport, too?"

"I believe so, after a while. She is going to Narragansett now, and I have promised we will also stop there a few days. You never have been there, and it is very gay."

"But I had rather go right on with you!" I exclaimed

"I shall also be at Narragansett," coldly.

"But I don't like"—I stopped. No matter how I resented being with her it would do no good to so express myself. It would only anger George and to no purpose. I would keep still but if Julia Collins thought that she was going to get the best of me by tagging along with my husband she would have to be pretty smart! I would see that she had no chance.

Even then I did not realize how helpless I would be in the hands of a woman of her type nor the ideas of life I should absorb.

"I am sorry you do not like my friends." George waited a moment — then finished; "but you will be polite to her, no matter what you feel!"

I said nothing more but to the resentment I naturally felt was added a feeling of keen disappointment. George had been so kind while David had been with us, and as we were leaving home for some weeks I had thought perhaps he would be with me more—let me have his companionship. Now I was sure that he would still treat me like a child. I always showed to such disadvantage before his friends.

When we reached the station, Julia Collins, her maid, and her two dogs were already here. She greeted me as if I were the best of frinds, while I hid my feelings the best I could, by petting the darling little Pekinese.

To-morrow: At Narragansett.

RIFLE SIGHTS.

The Drop of the Bullet in Its Flight Makes Them Necessary.

The average person if asked to explain why a rifle is sighted would probably be unable to do so beyond some vague remark about taking correct aim.

Sights are necessary because a bullet does not travel in a straight line, but, under the influence of gravity and friction, begins to drop almost as soon as it leaves the muzzle. Thus the bullet of the British service rifle drops six inches in the first 100 yards, but when it has gone 200 yards it will have dropped not twelve inches, but two feet. The drop increases by leaps and bounds with the distance. Were there no sights on the rifle and you wanted to hit a mark at 200 yards you would clearly have to aim two feet above it.

This would be awkward, for you would lose sight of the mark aimed at, to say nothing of the difficulty of correctly estimating a distance of two feet at 200 yards.

The sights of a rifle enable you to keep your eye on the mark, although the muzzle of the rifle is actually pointing above it. The movable slide of the backsight enables you automatically to point the muzzle just so many feet above the mark aimed at as is necessary to counteract the known drop of the bullet at various ranges.—London Answers.

Teaching Cubs to Kill.

Have you ever seen a cat catch a mouse and hand it over to her kittens to teach them how to kill? Well, a tiger is merely a big cat, and she teaches her cubs almost in the same way, only not with mice. An East Indian officer witnessed a scene of this kind. An old bull bison had been the victim, and the tigress had disabled him by breaking one of his forelegs just below the knee. She never touched the throat, the usual place of seizing, but allowed the cubs to worry the disabled animal. The eyewitness relates that the cubs acted exactly like kittens, advanced and retreated and worried the victim, all the time mewing and snarling, while the tigress sat near by, watching their antics and occasionally giving the bison a blow with her paw when he showed undue activity.

The Element of Chance.

Human progress might be otherwise defined as human success in minimizing the element of chance. In science there is substitution of expedients for the primitive accidents of the rule of thumb, just as in philosophy and morals, truth and untruth, right and wrong, are being unwrapped from their veils of uncertainty and set clearly in opposition to each other. In other words, the gambling spirit in life is less and less countenanced, and gaming, once fashionable, is now taboo even in the most innocent forms.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Royal Society of England.

The Royal Society of England is the oldest and most renowned scientific body, except the French Academy of Sciences, in the world. It was organized in 1645, and every great English scientist has been a member of it. Benjamin Franklin was the first American member.

PATTI STOOD PAT.

She Wanted Her Money Before She Sang, and She Got It.

One of Adelina Patti's peculiarities was that she never sang a note until she had her salary either paid or so fully assured that there was no doubt as to her getting it. When she sang at the Academy of Music, in New York, at one time the manager was sorely put about to find money to pay her, but she always stoutly refused to sing until she had her salary.

One night at a quarter past 8 her representative went to him and said: "Madam is all dressed except her shoes. She will put those on when she gets the money."

The manager, half distracted, rushed about the house and succeeded in raising one-half the amount due the prima donna, which he hastily sent to her. But another quarter of an hour passed, and, though the audience showed great impatience, there was no Patti, whereat the manager ran to her room.

"My dear madam, why do you not go on? I have sent you half the money, and the rest will reach you before the end of the first act."

Patti smiled dolefully, exhibited the tips of her feet and said: "You see, I have only one shoe on. I cannot go on the stage without the other. It would be quite impossible."

Almost crazed, the manager rushed out and discovered that the other half of the money could be raised.—New York Tribune.

"Take My Doll to Freedom."

Lieut. Jack O'Brien, of the French Legion, who is in Canada doing recruiting work, brings home a pitiful relic of Hun barbarism from the war. It is a doll which a little French girl handed to him in France one day as the Germans were sweeping down upon the village in which she lived.

"I want you to take Dollie to freedom," said the little child, "for I don't want the Germans to get it."

Later, when he revisited the little French village he found a scene of desolation and ruin. The dead bodies of men, women and children, horribly mutilated, lay about, and among them O'Brien found the remains of the little girl.

Some time later O'Brien was given British and French honors for a gallant act in saving the day when a body of Russians had sold themselves to the enemy and were preparing to turn their machine guns against the French. O'Brien, at the head of a body of picked men, slashed his way to the Russians and taking the guns turned them upon the traitors themselves.

An Actor In Khaki.

A good story is told of a young actor enlisted in Canada, and in his difficulty what was more natural than that he should turn to his profession for help, for he had been trained with the greatest actors in the land. He practiced in seclusion, and one day, when his trained recruits had been drafted and a new batch had appeared, he strode to the job in the full panoply of the Cockney drill sergeant, pungent with the wit and wisdom of the Mile End Road. He never had a greater success in any part, and if his points were not applauded they were promptly obeyed.

Palpaitation of the Heart and Nerve Troubles
WERE CURED BY
Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

When the heart begins to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beat fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, it causes great anxiety and alarm and the least excitement or exertion seems to affect it.

Many people are kept in a state of morbid fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable through this unnatural action of the heart.

To all sufferers from heart troubles we would advise the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which by their action in strengthening the heart and regulating the beat remove all the distressing conditions, and impart vigor and vitality to the system.

Mrs. Thomas Davidson, Mount Brydges, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer in the past with nerve troubles and palpitation of the heart. I tried several remedies, but without any good results. My son came in one day and advised me to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. After using one and a half boxes, I am fully recovered, and am in a perfect state of health, thanks to your valuable medicine."

Canada's Fondness for Automobiles.

It will surprise most Canadians to know that among the nations of the world their country holds third place in the number of automobiles in use. In 1917 there were 199,302 cars registered in Canada, an increase of 47,705 over 1916, while the number of new cars registered in that year was nearly 76,000. The increase for 1918 is expected to be on a proportionate scale. One Canadian in every 40 owns a car; and, roughly speaking, there is one automobile for every eight families. Considering that in 1903 there were only 220 automobiles in Ontario, and that in 1917, 84,353 auto licenses were taken out, the increase is nothing short of amazing. A marked feature of the pre-eminence which Canada enjoys is the ever-increasing proportion of motor licenses which are being taken out by farmers, a fact which in itself affords a strong guarantee that good country roads will soon be the rule rather than the exception.

POPPY AS AN EMBLEM.

Decorates the Graves of Heroes In Flanders Fields.

There is only one real rival to the Maple Leaf as a possible national emblem that could be grown on Flanders Field and be used to make beautiful the graves of the fallen Canadians, and that is the poppy, according to Mr. Percival H. Mitchell, president of the Toronto Horticultural Association.

"In my opinion," said Mr. Mitchell, "nothing should be considered as a national emblem other than the Maple Leaf. We are at present wrapped up in the Maple Leaf, and I do not see any reason why we should ever change it. If we consider a flower which has been introduced into Canada and which through several generations has become a wild flower, why not the poppy? No Canadian who has ever read 'In Flanders Field' will ever look at a poppy again without thinking of the graves in Flanders. Surely there has been sentiment wrapped up in the poppy that, through Col. McCrae's poem, will keep it very close to the hearts of Canadians. Many of the suggested spring flowers would be very lonely looking. If you could have something to carpet the graves like the phlox (subulata) it might be better. You want something that will mass. I am inclined to suggest the ox-eye daisy or black-eyed Susan, and, if those listed are grown, there should be several varieties planted so as to prolong the blooming season. Any flower or flowers selected should have the following points: They should grow under all conditions; they should have a long blooming season and the flower, when out of bloom, should still have some substance to the plant; they should be hardy and perennial; they should be decorative; they should not have been chosen by any other country or state, and they should be typical of Canada."

Mr. Mitchell said it would be difficult to mass the columbine, and that its habitat was the woods and shaded places. He was inclined to speak a good word for the aster and said there were altogether fifty-nine species and a standard form might be found. The bunch-berry seemed to be rather an insignificant little thing for such a purpose, and though it grew far north it might not grow in Flanders, and it would be difficult to get the hepatica and the trillium to grow in the open. Only the columbine and the perennial aster seemed in any way to meet the case and they did not seem very promising, as they are mostly short-lived and do not present much of an appearance after the time of inflorescence.

But Mr. Mitchell returned to the Maple Leaf and pointed out that now it is strengthening its traditions more than ever. It has passed through the war. It is on the crests and badges of the battalions and can be worked effectively into design.

BEARDS IN BATTLE.

And Why Clean Shaven Men Became Prized as Warriors.

The habit of shaving is not of a very ancient origin. According to James Stephens in "Here Are Ladies," when humanity lived a quiet, rural and unambitious life men did not shave; their hair was their glory, and if they had occasion to swear, which must have been infrequent, their hardiest and readiest oath was "By the beard of my father," showing clearly that this feature was held in veneration in early times and was probably accorded divine honors upon suitable occasions.

With the advent of war came the habit of shaving. A beard offered too handy a grip to a foeman who had got to close quarters; therefore, warriors who had no true hardihood of soul preferred cutting off their beards to the honorable labor of defending their chins.

Many ancient races effected a compromise in order to retain a fitting military appearance, for a barefaced warrior has but little of terror in his aspect. The ancient Egyptians, for example, who had cut off or could not cultivate or had been forcibly deprived of their beards, were wont to go into battle clad in heavy false whiskers, which, when an enemy seized hold of them, came off instantly in his hand, and the ancient Egyptian was enabled to dispatch him while in a trance of stupefaction and horror.

Clean shaven men became by this cowardly stratagem very much prized as fighting men, and thus the foundation of the shaving habit was laid.

UGLY DRIVER ANTS

All Living Creatures Fly Before These African Terrors.

THEY BUILD LIVING BRIDGES.

When an Army of These Formidable and Ferocious Insects Want to Cross a River a Suspension Tube of Their Own Bodies Provides the Way.

Why should driver ants cross rivers? The ants of our own woods have no such desire; they are busy little people, too much engaged in the practical task of finding and storing food to have any vagaries of this sort. They are contented and harmless if not disturbed or annoyed. An angry ant is to be avoided, and an angry swarm can make its displeasure felt in a very unpleasant way, as every one knows who has carelessly broken into a nest. But if left alone they are peaceful little workmen, absorbed in their own affairs.

The great driver or Bashikoney ant, however, has nothing peaceable in his composition. He is nothing if not aggressive and spiteful; neither is he contented. In the great forests of Africa these insects multiply to an alarming extent. They swarm in thousands, perhaps millions, and, formidable at any time, during the season of migration they are a terror to the whole district in which they live.

Myriads of these insects are seized with a restless desire for change. Obeying some mysterious instinct or following the commands of their queen, they set out upon their travels, and woe betide the man or beast that crosses their path! In a moment the hapless creature is covered with ants, and in an incredibly short space of time nothing is left but bare bones.

The driver ant is so called because it drives away all living creatures. When this most terrible host is on the march men and animals, great and small, take flight. Lions and tigers may be seen rushing along side by side with the timid gazelle. All are too much frightened to dream of attacking or avoiding each other. For once in their lives they are united in their terror of the common enemy. Size and strength are of no avail, and a rhinoceros or an elephant is as much terrified and is in as much danger as a rabbit.

When the vast army of ants arrive on the bank of a river a halt is called. They have no idea of turning back, but to cross that river they must have a bridge, and the making of this bridge takes time, and probably the engineers of the army have to bustle up to the front.

The making of an ant bridge is one of the most wonderful things in the world. The ants swarm on a tree, choosing one which overhangs the river. Upon the bough which reaches farthest over the stream they mass themselves and begin to form a thick rope of their own bodies. This they do by means of holding on firmly with their hind legs, while with the front pair of legs they grasp the bodies of other ants. Constantly fresh ants range themselves in front, and so the rope grows and grows until or last it touches the water.

By and by the floating chain is carried by the current toward the other side where probably grass and great reeds spring out of the water. The foremost ants seize upon the first object they touch, and from one slender foothold to another they climb until at last they reach land. The nearest tree is quickly climbed, the foremost pairs of legs doing all the work, and very soon the living rope is swinging high above the river. The bridge is made, and quickly the army crosses the stream.

Du Chaillu, in his African travels had an opportunity of observing one of these bridges, and he declares that it is made with a hollow center, the living bodies of the ants forming the walls of a tunnel, through which the main body of ants travel safely over the water. When the last ant has crossed and the bridge is no longer needed, the ants in the rear release their hold and drop one by one into the river. The ants do not like water, but they are protected from this position by the coat-of-mail they possess as far as they can, and the self sacrificing ants who began the great chain are quickly overwhelmed and drowned.

It is all very strange and very wonderful. Why do they leave at all? By what direction and by what laws do they act, and how did they learn to make bridges? Our naturalists have learned much of their ways and their doings, but there are questions they cannot answer; they are part of the mystery of life and nature of which the wisest knows little.—J. Cutler in London Family Herald.

Names of Nations.

The names of the great nations of Europe set many puzzles to the philologist. There is no doubt that France is the country of the Franks, the free men, or that Austria is the eastern empire. But one would not so easily guess that "Russians" means rowers or seafarers—a word of Swedish origin commemorating the Scandinavian vikings. The Britons have been supposed to take their name from a word signifying variegated, in allusion to their staining their skins with woad. Most puzzling of all is "Germans," which is not the Latin "germanus," own brother, but of Celtic origin, and has been variously interpreted as meaning "the people" or "the shouters."—London Chronicle.

Taken at Her Word.

A Bloomfield woman looked across her lawn to where passersby were breaking off the blossoming twigs of her favorite quince tree.

"We might as well cut the tree down as let it stand for people to destroy," said she.

Half an hour later the tree lay on the ground beside a little hatchet, while around behind the house the small boy of the family was getting a switching with one of the branches.

This teaches us that we should be sure of our audience before we employ hyperbole in our speech. — Newark News.

This will mean that instead of each subscriber on such lines having separate numbers, one number only will be assigned to each Two-party line, the subscribers connected thereon to be designated by the affixes "W" and "J" respectively.

This change in the method of operating Two-party lines will in no way interfere with the grade of subscribers' service.

THIS HURRYING AGE

Has Forced Authors to Recognize Changed Customs.

Stilted Manners That Characterized the Victorian Era Have Passed as Completely as Has the Stage Coach.

That the tempora and the mores have suffered as much in this century as the lares and penates may be poor Latin, but is sound truth, observes the Louisville Courier-Journal. The times and manners are distinctly different, and in one especial particular of social intercourse is there a powerful variance.

For instance, in Victorian times, it took the hero and heroine about twenty chapters to get acquainted. By that time he was calling her "Miss Dora," instead of "Miss Spenlow," and he gulped every time he said it. When his love and passion had boiled and bubbled until he was a wretched human caldron, and he had to repress a moan every time he saw her little hand on the arm of a dragoon, it took him eight pages to ask her falteringly if he might call her "Dora." She consented, and a proposal and marriage were the natural sequence. To call her Dora and not marry her was equivalent to breach of promise in the Victorian era. And nobody but the hero and the members of her family ever called her Dora, except perhaps her girl friends.

But in these times what a difference! All the young folks call one another Jack and Jill, and it is a curious and anachronistic youth who finds it hard to do so. In fact, he becomes a sort of gentle joke in his "set" and the girls think him rather slow. After he has met the lady two or three times he learns to consider it superogatory to call upon her in the name of her father. She is Gloria or Penelope in sua persona, and Miss Wilmerding or Miss Schulz to her seems poky. It is the same with the young married ones. You hear about them for a while from mutual friends, and then you meet them. You make a bow and say: "How do you do, Mrs. Kawsup." She does not resent it the first time. But the fourth time you meet her Mrs. Kawsup remarks: "It sounds so silly for you to call me that. Why don't you say Lucretia and I'll call you Agamemnon?" And it's done.

It is pretty hard on the novelist. Messrs. Dickens and Thackeray used to fill a couple of hundred excellent pages with working up the hero to the Dora and Clara point, and in the mild ventures of Anthony Trollope into the eternal triangle—his villains were perfect gentlemen and always wore stiff white shirts—he consumed much space wherein the Tertium Quid was negotiating to call the restless married lady by her first name. The reading public is too wise for that now, and the long-winded authors lie unread on the shelves of the library. One must start the book briskly; on page 1 the heroine is Dora to the hero, and on page 10 the home-wrecker is squeezing the married lady's hand and calling her Esmeralda.

Thus the fifth Georgian-Wilsonian period of life and literature as contrasted with the Victorian. And perhaps it makes no great amount of difference. Certainly it saves white paper and makes the serial stories shorter—two results of real value in this hungry, hurried age.

Honesty the Best Policy.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

One of the strongest allies in the movement for conservation of material is illustrated in an attractive dress, with slender lines, No. 8773. The dress is in semi-shirt waist style, with waist buttoning at the back. The smart shops are showing smart dresses made up in this style in striped washable silks, crepe de Chine, ponges, habutai and fine madras. The model shown here requires very little material. In fact, remnants or combinations of materials may be used to good effect. The front of the waist is all in one piece, with V neck having a tiny pointed collar. Either the full length or three-quarter sleeves may be used. The straight skirt is in two sections and is gathered all around to the slightly raised waist line.

The lady's dress pattern No. 8773 is cut in four sizes—36 to 42 inch bust measure. The 36 inch size requires 4¾ yards 36 inch or 2⅝ yards of 54 inch material.

GIRLS' PAINS AND WEAKNESS

Yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands of Girls Benefited

St. Louis, Mo.—"When I was only fifteen years old mother had to put me to bed every month for two days because I suffered such pain. I also suffered from a weakness and mother took me to a doctor but he did not help me. Finally mother made me take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has made me strong and healthy. So when mother or I hear any woman complaining we tell them about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it did for me."—Mrs. JOHN FRAME, 1121 N. 18th St., St. Louis, Mo.

Girls who suffer as Mrs. Frame did should not hesitate to give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial, as the evidence that is constantly being published proves beyond question that this grand old remedy has relieved more suffering among women than any other medicine.

For confidential advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of their forty years experience is at your service.

Equality of Sex.

There is a little girl in Springfield, Mass., who, like many of her sex, resents the imputation that the feminine mind is not so strong as the masculine.

One day her mother remarked on the apparent lack of intelligence in a hen.

"You can't teach a hen anything," she said. "They have done more harm to the garden than a drove of cattle would. You can teach a cat, a dog or a pig something, but a hen—never!"

"H'm!" exclaimed the child indignantly. "I think they know just as much as the roosters!"—Youth's Companion.

Mystery of the Stomach.

"Why does not the stomach digest itself?" is a question often asked. The Journal of the American Medical Association confesses that the reason has not yet been found. There are many theories, but not one of them is entirely satisfactory, and we are still unable to say more than Hunter said more than a century ago, "that these living cells remain intact under such circumstances 'because they are alive.'"—New York World.

Don't Diet Yourself

TO CURE

DYSPEPSIA

IT ISN'T NECESSARY

The sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion who has to pick and choose his food, is the most miserable of all mankind.

Even the little he does eat causes such torture, and is digested so imperfectly that it does him little good.

What dyspeptics need is not dieting, or artificial digestants, but something that will put their stomach right so it will manufacture its own digestive ferments.

For forty years now Burdock Blood Bitters has been making weak stomachs strong, and curing severe cases of dyspepsia and indigestion that other remedies were powerless to reach.

It restores the stomach to a normal healthy condition so that the food no longer causes distress, but thoroughly digested and assimilated, and goes on its way making rich, red blood.

Mrs. Henry Shaw, Campbellton, N.B., writes: "I was for five years troubled with a weak stomach, and could not eat any food that would agree with me. I tried different medicines, but could not get cured. A friend advised me to take Burdock Blood Bitters. I took four bottles, and now I am in perfect health."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ANTIQUITY OF MANKIND.

Geikie Places It at Between 250,000 and 500,000 Years.

In his work, "The Antiquity of Man In Europe," Professor James Geikie of Edinburgh university declares his belief that man has inhabited Europe between 250,000 and 500,000 years.

All such estimates are based on geological facts, such as the rate at which sediment is deposited or at which stalagmites grow, that are very hard to determine with any accuracy, but no one now doubts that man is far older than men of science originally supposed him to be.

"When we reflect," says Professor Geikie, "on the many geographical changes that man has witnessed—the submergence and re-elevation of enormous tracts, the erosion of valleys and general lowering of the surface by denudation, when we consider that he has lived through a succession of stupendous climatic revolutions; that he has seen widely contrasted floras and faunas alternately occupying our continent—tundras, steppes and great forests succeeding each other again and again—we must feel convinced that the few thousand years that have elapsed since the downfall of Babylonian, Assyrian and Egyptian empires are as nothing compared with the long aeons that separate the earliest times of history from the apparition of palaeolithic man in Europe."

POEMS OF THE WAR.

Patriotic Verse Written by J. Edgar Middleton.

The name of J. Edgar Middleton is familiar to many Canadians. He has been writing verse for a number of years, and it has been appearing regularly in newspapers and other periodicals, while several of his poems have found their way into Canadian anthologies. Mr. Middleton has recently made a collection of a few of his best efforts, and they are being published in book form under the title, "Sea Dogs and Men at Arms." As a great deal of the verse in this "Canadian book of songs" deals with the war, the volume has been given a very appropriate frontpiece, a reproduction in colors of H. B. Wollen's familiar painting, "The Canadians at Ypres."

Although the poems touch largely on the war, Mr. Middleton has included verse in the contents of the book that give it a decidedly local flavor. There is one poem entitled, "The Eternal Why," which is a tribute to the late S. T. Wood, the well-known nature writer; and the tender little poem, "Billy," doubtless refers to the death of Lieut. "Billy" Williamson, who died in France. When writing "To the Absent," the poet had in mind the 47 members of the Mendelssohn Choir who are now on active service. Mr. Middleton also deals with the wider field of Canada in such poems as "Under the Black Eagle," written in the metre of "Before Sedan," and telling of the tragedy of Dr. Beland and his devoted wife. One of the happiest efforts in the volume is "The Canadian," which expresses so well the feeling of many men in the Dominion for the Old Land.

I never saw the cliffs of snow,
The Channel billows tipped with cream,
The restless eddying tides that flow
About the Island of my dream.
I never saw the English downs
Upon an April day;
The quiet old cathedral towns,
The hedgerows, white with may.
And still the name of England,
Which tyrants laugh to scorn,
Can thrill my soul. It is to me
A very bugle-horn.

A thousand leagues from Plymouth shore,
In broader lands, I saw the light;
I never heard the cannon roar,
Or saw a mark of England's might;
Save that my people lived in peace,
Browned by the harvest sun,
And thought that tyranny would cease,
That battle-days were done.
And still the flag of England
Streamed on a friendly breeze,
And twice two hundred ships of war
Went surging through the seas.

Mr. Middleton has placed in the volume a few memorial poems of Imperial significance, like "Lord Kitchener" and "King Edward the Seventh." It is in his sea songs, however, that the poet is seen at his best. These are written with a fine swinging rhythm, and they have a spirit and a dash that recall the work of Henry Newbolt. In fact, we will be surprised if some reviewer who likes such classifications as "the Canadian Kipling" or "the Canadian Wordsworth" does not feel that it is showing critical acumen to call Mr. Middleton "the Canadian Newbolt." These poems invite quotation, but space will only permit the use of one, "Arrived, H.M.S. Good Hope":—

Collingwood on the Sea of Glass,
Rolling up to the Jasper Walls,
Came about on the starboard tack,
Stood by the mizzen halliard falls.
Broke a signal to Hawke and Hood,
Both hull down on the shining sea;
This was the fluttering word he sent:
"Cradock is anchoring aft of me."

There, in his ship of battle grey,
There, with his crew all smart and trim,
Under-bo'sns and warrantmen,
And the jollies saluting him,
Collingwood, from the Sovereign deck,
Marked the ship on the golden swell,
Said to his flag lieutenant, "Sir,
We are only a cockle-shell."

"Man the gig!" I must go aboard,
Such a ship for the Sea of Glass!
Look, the ensign is floating still,
(But, it's oh, for the sailor's lass!)
They are done with the westward Trades,
Done with the long Pacific swell,
Done with the gales of Hatteras,
England called and they served her well."

Cradock stood on his shattered deck,
While the spirit in silken smalls
Mounted the ladder, took his hand,
There in sight of the Jasper Walls,
Collingwood of the Sea of Glass,
Nelson, Jervis and gallant Blake,
Cheered the Admiral, Ship and Crew,
Dead and gone for Old England's sake.

Feminine Touch.

"Pa, what is meant by a feminine touch?"

"A feminine touch, my son, is a bow of pink ribbon on a fly swatter."—Baltimore Sun.

STRENGTH IN EXCITEMENT.

Either Fear, Rage or Pain Starts the Adrenal Glands to Work.

Many a person has wondered where he obtained the strength that enabled him to undergo some emergency that called for unusual physical exertion when under ordinary conditions he would be unable to control a tithe of that strength. It was from the adrenal glands, two little glands situated above the kidneys which secrete what is known as adrenaline and when stimulated discharge the same into the blood. The effect of this addition to the blood is to release sugar from storage in the liver and bring it into the blood, drive the blood from the abdominal regions into the heart, lungs, central nervous system and limbs. The resulting effect is to excite the muscles to irritability and enable unusual effort to be made.

Either fear, rage or pain will supply the stimulus required to set the adrenal glands into action. When a muscle is fatigued without any accompanying degree of excitement it may take a couple of hours for it to recover its normal condition, but if adrenaline is injected, or if through excitement the adrenal glands are stimulated to discharge and secrete, the fatigued muscle may regain its "irritability" in three minutes. The sugar set free from the liver and circulated in the blood stimulates the muscles, for sugar is the source of muscular energy. Fear, rage and pain are thus given us by nature as agencies to enable us to use our physical powers to their fullest extent in the crisis that produces the excitement.—Los Angeles Times.

Alkali In Shampoos Bad For Washing Hair

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Cooper's Hawk.

The almost universal prejudice against birds of prey is due to the activities of a few members of the hawk family, chief among which is the Cooper's hawk. Cooper's hawk usually approaches under cover and drops on unsuspecting victims, making great inroads on poultry yards and game coverts. This bird, together with its two near relations, the sharp shinned hawk and the goshawk, should be destroyed by every possible means.

He Wanted to Know.

"Charles," said the teacher, "do you know the causes of the Revolutionary war?"

Charles looked interestedly at his instructor and replied, as if carrying on a social conversation, "No, do you?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

Amber.

Amber is believed by the Turks to be an infallible guard against the injurious effects of nicotine; hence its extensive use for mouthpieces of pipes.

OUR DEFENSE

In the spring we may be attacked at any moment. Toxic poisons pile up within us after a hard winter, and we feel "run-down," tired out, blue and discouraged. This is the time to put our house in order—cleanse the system and put fresh blood into our arteries. You can obtain an alterative extract from Blood root, Golden Seal, Stone and Queen's root, Cherry bark, rolled into a sugar-coated tablet and sold by most druggists, in fifty-cent vials, as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This blood tonic, in tablet or liquid form, is just what you need for "Spring Fever," for that lack of ambition. It will fill you full of vim, vigor and vitality.

LINDSAY, ONTARIO.—"When my little daughter was five years old her liver was so sluggish that I feared she might be troubled with habitual constipation. I had read a great deal about Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and decided to try it with her, giving her small doses. I found that it not only helped her liver but it also proved to be a splendid tonic, as well. It was such a splendid medicine that I would never hesitate to give it to her again if she needed it, and I take pleasure in recommending it to other mothers whose little ones seem to need a liver regulator and blood maker."—Mrs. LOUISA BEACH, Box 1135.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Broken Tie

By Curtis Ellsworth Kingsley

Gurdon Espey, ringmaster of Silliery's Great Circus, flecked the ear of a water boy who had stumbled over a rope with the tip of his long-lashed whip, and gave the urchin a quarter to mend his bawling. He caught a stake man drinking out of a bottle, seized the offending vessel and smashed it against a plank.

"You're discharged, no tipping here!" roared the neat and nifty king of the sawdust circle.

"Ought to have known better," remarked a hustler to the culprit. "He's dead down on the hard drink. They say he goes clear around a block to keep from passing a saloon, he hates them so. Espey is a queer one—bet he's had a history."

Yes, Gurdon Espey had a history, and it had climaxed in making him the odd makeup of humanity he was. Strictness and severity were strangely mixed with the most generous of instincts. And then he would become angry if the remotest reference was made to these wayward impulses.

"Oh, mister! can we speak a word with you?" hailed the ringmaster as he came outside of the big tent, and Espey turned, with his habitual scowl, to be confronted by twelve boys ranging in age from eight to twelve years; their leader acting as spokesman.

"What is it?" he snapped out, always on the suspicious alert for applications for free passes, runaways anxious to join the circus, cut-rate nuisances, and the like.

"We want to know if we can hire your clown?"

"Well, that's good!" decided the ringmaster. "What for now?"

"Our circus."

"Oh! a rival in the field, hey?" rallied Espey. "And where may this circus of yours be?"

"Down in a lot, next to Mrs. Daniel's house," was explained hurriedly, and with a certain spice of pride. "You see, mister, little Eva Daniels has been sick for a long time. Now she's just able to sit up. And we all love her so much, and it's her birthday, and we want to give her a surprise."

"She's a fairy!" piped up a little fellow of eight.

"No, she's just an angel!" supplemented a companion.

"We've made a sawdust ring just like yours, only a tiny one," went on the spokesman of the party. "We've got quite a program. I swallow a sword. Dick Brown does some somersaults. Ned Bates walks a clothesline tight-rope. Of course, they're poor stunts, so we want to hire your clown for about an hour, to make Eva laugh and feel good."

"Do you happen to know how much a clown costs?" interrogated the ringmaster.

"No, sir, but we've got six dollars and fifty cents among us. You see, we all got fifty cents from our parents to come to your circus tonight, and poor little Eva can't be moved this far, so we've put our money together to hire the clown, and give Eva a real good time."

"Nothing doing," growled Espey, starting to pass on his way, when out of a side tent dodged a jolly-faced lump of rotundity.

"Who says it?" rollicked the same. "Sick girl, boy friends getting up a show for the little lady? What time does this greatest show on earth come on the boards, kids?"

"Two o'clock, sir," explained the spokesman of the group. "Oh, I hope you can come!"

"Come? I wouldn't miss it for fifty dollars! I'll be there in regular trim, and my trick donkey, Napoleon Bonaparte, and my little girl—for I've got one, bless her—in her gold chariot, driving two milk-white ponies. I should say it! Don't worry, Espey," continued the clown, waving a reassuring hand to the ringmaster. "It don't cost you anything, and the stunt will be a famous advertisement for our own show. See?"

Mrs. Alice Daniels was one of the poorest persons in the town, but everybody liked her and respected the modest, ladylike seamstress who had come to the little village a few years previous. As to little Eva, the widow's child, she was one of those lovely beings who weave themselves closely into the hearts of all on first sight. The noble sacrifice of her boy friends evidenced the power of witchery and love which the little convalescent universally inspired.

Her mother had propped her up in a chair looking out upon the open lawn and the lot beyond, telling her that her rare boy friends had got up a show especially for her edification. Eva was all excitement and expectancy. She was kept busy bowing and smiling and throwing kisses as "the actors" finally came into the ring. She clapped her little hands in the fullness of innocent spontaneous delight as "the star performers" of the group went through their amateur stunts.

Then Eva seemed translated into fairyland. The clown had kept his word. More than that, he had added the feature of music to the entertainment, for just as the lads had performed their share of the function two members of the circus band, playing cornets, appeared on the scene and, keeping march time to the marcl they delivered, the clown's daughter, all radiant with tulle and tinsel, drove slowly into the ring, seated in her gilded chariot, white ribbon lines guiding the two snowy ponies.

And then, the wonder of wonders for Eva, into the ring bounded the clown. Oh, but he was funny! and oh, the rapturous delight of Eva and the outside audience, as Napoleon Bonaparte came upon the scene, the gifted, tricl mule who chased his master in a circle, toppled him over his knees, threw him off his back and danced about him on his own hind feet!

Never was so much delight crowded into the space of a single hour, and the child wonder of the white ponies came into the room where Eva was and kissed her, and presented her with a great overflowing bag of peanuts, pop corn and candy, and the clown made a speech to Eva's "actor" friends, and the air rang with the acclamations of the juvenile group.

"So you're back from your grand philanthropic excursion, are you?" hailed the ringmaster, as the clown reappeared on the circus grounds.

"Yes, what's your interest, Espey?" challenged the clown keenly. "Say, you're not by any means the gruff old bear you pretend to be, and if you had seen all the good a little attention to the poor and lowly has worked out, you'd come out of that close shell of yours. Look here, I've given a pass to that odd dozen amateur actors for tomorrow night. See that it's honored, will you?"

"What about the six dollars and fifty cents? Of course you got that."

"Sure I did," acknowledged the open-hearted clown frankly, "and added as much more to it, and donated the whole of it to buy an invalid chair for the little miss," and then he was quite amazed at the persistency of the ringmaster in betraying an interest in details of the incident of the afternoon, even to the location of the widow's home.

At dusk that evening Gurdon Espey left the circus grounds after carefully placing a bank note in an envelope. He sought out the scene of the amateur circus of the afternoon and the home of Mrs. Daniels adjoining. He was almost stealthy as he advanced up the garden path. The front door was closed, but light streamed broadly across the middle of the porch, although it was in shadow.

Espey crept up the steps on tip toe. He stooped down, drew out the envelope and attempted to push it under the door, but this set so closely shut that the interstices would not admit the envelope.

"What is it, please?" spoke a voice at the shadowed end of the porch, startling Espey quite, and straining his vision, he made out a feminine form rising from a chair.

"I fancy I am detected!" and he half laughed in an embarrassed way. "I am one of the circus men, madam, and we are all so interested in that little tot of yours, that we want to make it easier for her, and I was leaving a trifle—"

There Gurdon Espey paused. There, directly in front of the window, both had come to a halt. The full radiance from the lamplight within flooded their faces. They were stunned at the unexpected confrontment — man and wife!

"Gurdon!" died upon the lips of the woman, and she wavered and was forced to steady herself by grasping the porch rail.

"Alice!" uttered the man, and the habitual cynical expression left his face, and the glowing eyes told of a new soul aroused.

She shrank back. It was under the memory of five years previous when she had fled from this man as from a pestilence, for soul and body were given over to drink until she had feared for her life. She had hidden away from him and now—he had found her.

"Alice!" he said, his tones tremulous, but not uncertain, "since the day of your absence and that of your dear little one awakened me to a realization of my utter unworthiness, no drop of liquor has passed my lips."

"Our little one," she corrected him, for she recognized in him the regenerated man.

"May I come back?" he added, with a longing glance through the window at a little white-robed form lying on a trundle cot.

Her hands clasped, her eyes were suffused, her care-worn, but still beautiful face looked up to him trustingly, hopeful, longingly.

"Oh, Gurdon!" she sobbed, "will you come back to us?"

Dehydrated Food Products.

As food for armies in the field dehydrated products are almost ideal. One of the most important features of the food conservation movement in Germany since the outbreak of the war, a writer states, has been the practice of dehydrating fruits and vegetables and Germany's efficiency in connection with the conservation of that country's limited food resources is strikingly demonstrated by the fact that, after more than three years' isolation from the world markets upon which she formerly depended that nation still manages to feed its inhabitants.

In June, 1914, there were 480 dehydrating plants in Germany, treating annually about a quarter of a million pounds of potatoes alone. In a food conservation campaign organized at the time of Germany's first declaration of war 246 new dehydration plants were added, 190 of which were aided by government funds.

END OF THE EARTH.

The Latest Figuring Puts It Only Two Million Years Away.

Scientists tell us that life on the earth began about 2,000,000 years ago. It has generally been accepted that life will last for 95,000,000 years.

Ninety-five million years is a fairly long time. None of us who are alive today need worry about what will take place 95,000,000 years hence. Even the most altruistic can scarcely be inspired by love for an inconceivably remote posterity.

But the French savants are altogether disturbing. Here comes one, M. Verronet, who says that the earth will permanently freeze within the next 2,000,000 years and that life will vanish. This is bringing the tragedy nearer home. We would gladly accept the older reckoning.

Verronet places mankind of today about midway between the beginning and the end. He computes that in the future life will exist as long as it has already existed. He specifies only one forty-eighth as long a life as those who have studied in the past.

There is only one consolation to be derived from the Verronet reckoning. As far as the influence of today is concerned 2,000,000 years is as good as 95,000,000. In either event those who are comfortably laboring today cannot expect to be lovingly remembered when the cataclysm of ice makes the earth a barren wilderness.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Overwork Paralysis

Doctors Said His Case Was Hopeless—Could Not Walk or Write—Speech Almost Gone—How Cure Was Effected.

ST. ANN,S, Ont., June 7. — Paralysis is far more easily prevented than cured. For this reason it is only wise to be warned by sleeplessness, headache, nervous indigestion and neuralgic pains and begin reconstruction treatment before the nervous system becomes too far depleted.

This letter from Mr. Hyatt is quoted to prove to you that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is effective even after paralysis has set in. It is not advisable, however, to neglect nervous disorders until such conditions are developed.

Mr. Avery Hyatt, Blacksmith, St. Ann's, Lincoln County, Ont., writes: "I am a blacksmith by trade, and ten years ago became afflicted with paralysis. I could not walk or read or write, and could talk with difficulty, so that it was a hard matter to understand anything I would say. Being only a young man, I was nearly discouraged. Two doctors told me it was brought on by overwork, and that my case was hopeless.

"One day my father read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and advised me to try it. I bought 12 boxes, and when the fifth was used I saw that I was getting better. By the time the 12 boxes were used I was cured I am well and strong and working every day thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Elmore J. Hodgins, J.P.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

BELGIAN KONGO SAVAGES.

Cannibals In War Paint Whose Past is Black Mystery.

In his book "Hunting and Hunted In the Belgian Kongo" Mr. R. D Cooper speaks of the remarkable people who live in the forest wilds:

"Threading our way down the stony path, winding in and out among the trees, we began to walk the remaining few miles along the sandy shore to Butiaba. A slight breeze sprang up from the southwest, and very shortly the sun had kissed the Bulegga mountain peaks that rose thousands of feet sheer from the water's edge in the west.

"Gaunt forbidding sentinels of the Kongo! What strange people dwell behind you—the dwarfs and others, with their poisoned implements of war—cannibalism with all its attendant horrors—a people that cannot tell us of their past. The ages gone by are all a blank to them. These people are akin to the beasts of the forest, inasmuch as they care only for the present. They live for the present. The past is gone. No records have been written of them.

"The war paint of vermilion colored pigments which is smeared all over their bodies adds to the hideousness of these savages, darting from rock to rock, hiding behind trees, lying hidden in the foliage overhead, waging war with all. Tragedy follows tragedy behind those Bulegga mountains in the Kongo, to the south of which lie the snow capped crests of rugged Ruwenzori."

Telegram Has Some Caustic Comment Regarding Latest Distribution Of Titles

WHEN THE WHIP CRACKED.

May 21st — Sir Robert Borden brought about the defeat of the motion to abolish titles in Canada by this ultimatum.

"I can only say as far as I am concerned that if the House does not propose to accept the choice which I have asked them frankly and with much respect to make, I should consider that I am relieved from my duty of carrying on any longer the Government of this country, and I should ask his Excellency the Governor-General to seek other advisers."

WHY THE WHIP CRACKED

June 3rd—Among the list of notables whom the King delighted to honour:

Companion of St. Michael and St. George.

JOHN WILLIAM BORDEN (Sir Robert's brother).

AUSTIN ERNEST BLOUNT (Sir Robert Borden's Secretary).

In theory the honours list is supposed to issue from the throne in recognition of individuals whose merits are known to the King, and too often unknown to everybody else. In practice that would require that he should have an acquaintance with his subjects, such as Col. Herb Lennox, M.P.P., has of his constituents, he knowing the activities, ailments and antecedents of each and every one. It is, however, extremely likely that King George is equally ignorant of the facts that Sir Robert Borden suffers periodically from boils, and that he has a brother named John William. It is official Ottawa which is responsible for the public recognition which has been accorded the latter item of the Prime Minister's private affairs.

On May 21st Sir Robert Borden balked a resolution of the Canadian House of Commons against the further bestowal of titles in this country by threatening that if it were pressed he would resign the Premiership and deprive of its head a Government which had been placed in office with the dominant purpose of winning the war. Through his position he had the strength of a giant, and although he used it as a baby, the Unionist members were cowed by his bluff stultified their institution, bedvilled Parliamentary practice, and stifled the protest of a title-sickened democracy. For the most part they did so with the understanding that for the present, at least, no more tinsel trappings were to be handed out to Canadian civilians. On June 3rd there appeared a list of honours, which included the names of Sir Robert Borden's brother and of his private secretary.

The element of time is evidence that the Prime Minister had full knowledge of these two impending Companionships of St. Michael and St. George when he used his position as Premier to throw out of the House the Richardson anti-title resolution, but in doing so gave the country false hope that the decoration-mill in Canada would close a while from grinding out empty honours. The inference is that Sir Robert Borden went to unpretty and unparliamentary lengths for no loftier purpose than to pluck from the birthday party tree a few silly gewgaws for members of his personal entourage. It is the action of Sir Robert Borden's career which is the least pleasant to contempalte.

Members of the House of Commons can hardly let the incident pass and still retain their self-respect. The constitutional precedent involved affects too vitally the value of the House, even as a deliberative assembly. The resolution which was autocratically suppressed was one which voiced no more than an expression of opinion: it was devoid of legisaltive effect. If the whim of the Prime Minister is to override the former right of a private member to have free discussion of a mere resolution, then the commoners might as well make an end to a shallow pretence and dutifully and dumbly abrogate a function which they have lost the courage to fulfill. If, on the contrary, the Canadian Parliament is properly jealous of privileges which it took long centuries to win, then they must speedily extort from the Prime Minister an admission that even they have rights and duties which more than counteract his personal foibles.

The last session at Ottawa was marked by a usurpation by the Prime Minister of sundry prerogatives of the people's representatives in Parliament assembled. The Prime Minister's highhandedness in this matter of titles has been so blatant and brazen that it is full time that the powers of the nation's parliamentary delegates be buttressed by a new Magna Charta against the assaults of a twentieth century Plantagenent. The bestowal through the Canadian Premier, in direct defiance of public sentiment and parliamentary protest, of so-called honours upon the Premier's own brother and his private secretary is a wanton exhibition of arrogance which cannot in the name of decency and decorum, be allowed to pass unchallenged. There must be some showdown. "KING" ROBERT IS OVERDUE AT RUNNYMEDE.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre At Once

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural colour is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

FIERCE FIGHTING ON THE FRENCH AND AMERICAN FRONTS

AMERICANS THREATENED

Hindenburg Aims to Force Uncle Sam's Legions Back From the Lorraine Border

MAJOR OFFENSIVE

(By J. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, N.Y., June 7.— Von Hindenburg has begun to show serious uneasiness at the effective part American units are playing in the fighting along the western front. Evidence of his disquiet appears in the new concentration of Teutonic forces along the American-Lorraine sector.

The purpose of the persistent arrival of enemy troops at Metz is mainly to threaten Gen. Pershing into withholding more Americans from the Marne, Aisne and Picardy fronts. The Germans well know that the Lorraine border, with its proximity to the Rhine, is the principal American sector in France. Hindenburg also is aware that all indications suggest this area will be the scene of America's ultimate major offensive.

Threatening to Attack.

Hindenburg, therefore, is now threatening to attack in Lorraine, hoping the Americans may be unable to protect their own positions and at the same time participate fruitfully at the other end of France in the defence of Paris and the channel ports. The Americans have now had an unbroken series of successes along the western front, including Cantigny. Along the Marne and north of Chateau-Thierry, they have won every objective. The reward, of course, is small. The German General Staff, however is highly experienced in making large deductions from small but consistent facts.

Very Strong Positions.

Full military and psychological study unquestionably has been given at German Headquarters to the morale of the American troops fresh to modern battle conditions. Hindenburg does not like the situation they are creating in Western France. The result is the Lorraine threat. The American positions are very strong and Hindenburg has had no encouragement to believe he can break through. There is undeniable temptation however, to the Germans to try to push the Lorraine front farther away from the German boundary. Were Hindenburg to succeed he would force the distance America's own offensive must go before it reached the Rhine. Faced by that condition it is even possible Gen. Foch might no longer use American troops in Western France, but would reserve them wholly for the future drive to the Rhine.

But this tantalizing will-o'-the-wisp holds forth the danger that an offensive against the Americans in Lorraine, might well be hurled back with terrible German losses. A stubborn, highly-organized defence by the Americans is the only absolutely certain element in the situation.

CONFERENCE IN IRELAND

Important Anti-Conscription Conference Was Held Last Night —Sinn Feiners Present—Also Labour Representatives

CONDITIONS CONDEMNED

Canadian Press:

DUBLIN, June 7.— A warning to Ireland that Lord French's recruiting proclamation does not mean the withdrawal of conscription was made in a statement issued last night by the anti-conscription conference after a four-hour session at the Mansion House. The Lord Mayor of Dublin presided at the meeting and John Dillon, Joseph Devlin and other Nationalist leaders, as well as representatives of Labour and Sinn Fein were present. The Lord Mayor of Dublin, it was announced, will proceed to the United States when the attempt to conscript is renewed. The imprisonment of Sinn Feiners without trial is condemned and the Irish military administration denounced. The statement says nothing of the attitude of the conference towards the recruiting conference.

Will Manufacture Khaki Cloth For The United States

Peterboro' Manufacturers Were Represented at Meeting Held in Ottawa

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 7.—As a result of a conference of the wool manufacturers of Ontario, which was held this week in Ottawa, a committee was appointed to look into the question of securing machinery and raw materials for the manufacture of khaki cloth for the United States. The manufacturers have been required to give an estimate of their capacity in this respect.

One of the chief difficulties in the way is the question of securing machinery. In Philadelphia, for instance, it is stated that machinery necessary for the manufacture of cloth has about quadrupled in value, and, at that, cannot be secured, excepting in very limited quantities. Raw wool is also hard to get.

The Ontario wool manufacturers have hitherto been a branch of the Canadian Manufacturers Association. They will probably organize on an individual basis also. Peterborough manufacturers were represented at the meeting.

Lance Corporal Lashbrook received his promotion on the field. He went over with the 59th battalion and was transferred to the 21st, and went through his share of the fighting. At present he is far from complete recovery, and will return to Montreal for further treatment with Private I. J. Curtis, who came home with him. ENEMY ATTEMPTS TO ADVANCE ON THE MARNE FRONT COMPLETELY CHECKED

Second Phase of the German Grand Offensive Has Been Reached —Americans in the Thick of the Fighting—Positions Recaptured

OFFICIAL REPORTS

LONDON, June 7.—The Germans do not intend to attempt any further or immediate progress around Chateau Thierry, says Reuter's correspondent. The enemy, he added, shows a lassitude which might well seem an internal effort at deception. The French still hold that part of Chateau Thierry on the left bank of the Marne.

The battle news makes it clear that the second phase of the grand German offensive has been entered. Great attacks on the Noyon-Rheims line, which began May 27th, have been replaced by local fighting in isolated sectors.

The Germans in these areas, far from gaining fresh ground, have lost some, and at least for the last two days their general advance has been brought to a standstill. The French indeed appear to have taken the initiative, and continue to press back enemy groups. French displays of the determination of the French reserves is responsible for the present equilibrium, which, however, they do now expect to remain permanent.

Their views differ widely on the question of when and where the Germans will make a fresh effort, but they agree in confidence that the scope for surprise tactics on the part of the enemy is being more and more restricted. It is pointed out that liveliness recently on other points of the line must not be regarded as indications that a blow is imminent there. It is more likely that the enemy, having failed to break through as he hoped is now taking a breath to collect his forces.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, June 7.—(Official).—In the fighting north of the Aisne the French captured the village of Le Port, west of Fontenoy. On the Marne front, north-west of Chateau Thierry, French troops captured the village of Vinly. The French also recaptured Hill 204, between the Marne and Rheims.

British troops regained a footing in the village of Bligny, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

American troops, fighting on the main battlefront, have gained ground on the line of Torcy-Belleau and Bourscbes, west of Chateau Thierry, the War Office announced in to-day's statement. West of Noyon, and north of Montdidier, in the Picardy area, local operations by the French were successful, and prisoners taken.

American marines, who began the second attack on the German lines late yesterday, captured the village of Torcy, and drove their way into Bourscbes, north-west of Chateau Thierry. This morning they were holding Torcy in the face of repeated counter-attacks, and were pushing back the Germans through the streets of Bourscbes. Virtually all their objectives in this attack was attained.

AMERICANS HACKED THEIR WAY THROUGH THE ENEMY DEFENSES

Battle is Increasing in Intensity Fighting Began Wednesday Night —Several Places Recaptured.

VIOLENT FIGHTING

(United Press Service.)
(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

With the Americans on the Marne, June 7.—American marines after hurling the Germans back one and a quarter to two and a half miles on a five mile front northwest of Chateau Thierry yesterday morning, renewed the attack late in the afternoon. The battle was increasing in intensity as this despatch was filed.

There was violent fighting all Wednesday night, the Americans occupying Bussinres, Torcy, Bouresches, Neuilly Wood, part of Belleau Wood, and the railway station and railway at Bouresches.

BEGAN WEDNESDAY.

The fighting began on Wednesday night and at 3.45 yesterday morning the marines started to advance, singing and whistling "Yankee Doodle" as they started across no man's land. The infantry on the right of the marines advanced in the face of a heavy fire.

In less than four hours the marines had completely cleared Neuilly Wood of the enemy, taking more than a hundred prisoners and ten machine guns.

The French infantry on the left took 160 prisoners.

Continuing their advance the Americans fought their way through the crack Prussian troops opposing them, pushing their way past Bussiares and occupyng Torcy, part of Belleau Wood and the village of Bouresches, besides the railway station and the railway in the latter place.

The desperate defence of the enemy prevented the Americans from attaining some of their objectives, but the attack was renewed late to-day, with great violence.

FIERCE ARTILLERY FIRE.

In regimental and brigade headquarters, officers who had not slept for five days and nights, sat at telephones during the attack, receiving reports and sending out orders.

Belleau Wood was subjected to a fierce artillery bombardment prior to the attack, but the infantry encountered elaborate machine gun defences which were still intact.

In the fierce fighting there the marines finally took the north west corner of the wood, the Boches then retaking the wood beyond in fierce counter attacks.

AT HEADQUARTERS.

I was at the brigade headquarters, when the report came in of the counter attacks.

"Hold on, hang on Sibey; we're coming out to help you," was the cheery word that a major phoned back, though he himself was near exhaustion from lack of sleep.

A few minutes later reports came in from various companies that they were reaching their objectives, and

The Harpathian Was Torpedoed

German U-Boat Has Moved Out to Sea About 60 Miles Since Last Heard From

AFTER BIG GAME

(Special to The Examiner.)

Washington, June 7.—The navy has lost contact with at least one German coastal U-boat raider.

This fact, apparent from the unhampered sinking of the British steamer Harpathian, 100 miles off the Virginia Capes on Wednesday, was confirmed by the navy officials to-day.

The Harpathian was torpedoed on Tuesday morning and her crew, with one wounded, was brought into the Hampton Roads last night by the steamer Palmer.

MOVEMENT NOT TRACED.

The submersible operating off the capes moved out to sea about six miles since last previously heard from, when it sank the Norwegian steamer "Nederveld." Navy men very frankly admitted that this movement had not been traced, but they were still hopeful that contact would be established with this U-boat whose depredations appears to be the burning of lone ocean going unarmed coastal steamers with no military value.

This appears to be the case from the fact that at no time was assistance asked for the Harpathian. Her wireless was used on one occasion, the U-boat thus sparing his torpedoes.

WELL KNOWN BAPTIST DIVINE DIED THIS MORNING

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, June 7.—Professor Thomas Trotter, D.D., LL.D., died at his home, 11 Kennel avenue, at ten o'clock to-day, after an illness of over a year. His death was not entirely unexpected as he gradually failed in health after an operation about twelve months ago. He was in his 65th year.

The death of Professor Trotter marks the passing of one of the pillars of the Baptist church in Canada. For forty years he was prominently identified with Baptist educationalism and up to the time of his last illness held the chair of homiletics and pastorals theology at McMaster University. He was one of the first professors of the College.

USED THREE DIVISIONS

One Entire German Company Was Dressed in French Uniforms —Allies Hold New Positions

A FIERCE FIGHT

(United Press Service.)
(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE MARNE, June 7.—(3 O'clock Despatch.) — The Americans who swept the Germans back two miles on a five mile front north-west of Chateau-Thierry yesterday and last night, were holding their gains in the face of determined German counter attacks this morning.

With the aid of French infantry, the American marines and machine gunners were consolidating their positions all along the new front.

In the region of Lucy-Le-Cocage (five miles west of Chateau-Thierry) an American position was being badly harassed by a German machine gun. An American patrol leaped on the lines, attacking the enemy position, killed the entire crew and captured the gun.

Machine Gun Fire.

Part of the advance was made across a wheat field, the marines alternately dropping in the wheat, then raising up and half crawling, half walking, into the face of the fierce machine gun fire.

The advance greatly improved the marines' positions, opening the way through a wood on a hill which has been giving the enemy a dominating position. Now the Germans are pushed completely off the hill. The marines took up positions on the farther side, giving them full sweep with their machine guns across an open field.

Most of the prisoners, who were Prussians, said they thought the British were opposite them. They said they were to have been attacking again to-day. They had not had any rations for five days. Other German prisoners said the Prussians got what little food there was.

The general morale of the Germans in this region is the lowest. Prisoners said that three divisions (36,000 men) had been used up trying to rush back the marines. They included the Jaegers, who are crack riflemen.

Entirely Surrounded.

One company of marines which was flanked during the advance was entirely surrounded. After fighting their way to an advanced position, they had to fight their way out again. They poured machine gun and rifle fire into the Boches, ripping through them to the main body of Americans.

One entire German company was dressed in French uniforms in an effort to deceive the marines. The latter could not figure how the French could be in front of them and fire into the marauders. The Germans forgot their camouflage and quickly cried "Kamerad."

French soldiers holding a position overlooking the fight, reported the execution by the marines' machine guns, as well as by artillery fire. The Boche dead were thick on the field.

Prussian Guards Are Hurled Back After Trying Four Days to Advance on the Marne Front

FRENCH COUNTER ATTACKS

(United Press Service.)
(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES ON THE MARNE, June 7.—Both Wednesday and Thursday's fighting confirms the fact that the Germans are checked everywhere. Their present attacks, which are purely local, are attaining no results, while French counter attacks invariably result in both prisoners and advantageous rectifying of local positions.

The first and second divisions of the Prussian Guards, after trying four days to advance along both sides of the Ourcq, to turn the forest of Villers-Cotterets from the south, were thrown back by French counter attacks with heavy losses.

German night bombing squadrons are now using illuminating bombs, attached to parachutes.

AFTER DROPPING A FEW NOTES THE FLYER HEADED FOR HOME.

The little town of Stirling was awakened early on Wednesday morning by the hum of the motors of an aeroplane. The intrepid airman flew so close to the ground that Mr. Wm. Witty of the Witty Hotel, who was on the roof, laid flat down thinking that the machine would hit him.

By ten o'clock the whole town was out watching the antics of the plane. After dropping a few notes the pilot flew back to his aerodome at Deseronto.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, JUNE 7TH, 1918.

SHOULD CONTROL PRICES.

It is to be sincerely hoped that the order-in-council placing an embargo on the importation of articles considered as luxuries will be followed by further Government action in regard to restricting prices, or otherwise the public will suffer through the new regulations. It is stated that a further order-in-council, providing that the prices charged before the embargo was placed in effect can be raised only if the dealers can convince the government that such increases are justifiable, may be passed. Unless some such step is taken the poor consumer may expect to find himself called upon to pay much higher prices for fruit. Already it is stated that the price of oranges has been increased by a dollar a box and that it is proposed to promptly raise the price of pineapples, although neither are in the least affected by the embargo.

SPEEDING UP NEEDED.

The new Civil Service Act would seem to need some speeding up if results satisfactory to the public, and for the benefit of the public service, are to be obtained. How long will it be necessary to wait after making an application for a position in the Civil Service and how long are such positions to be left vacant to the detriment of the service?

The answer to these questions will be awaited with interest by local returned soldiers, especially by the two veterans who applied nearly a month ago for positions on the letter carriers staff where there were, and are yet, two vacancies. On making application at the local postmaster they were informed that under the new regulations they must apply to the Civil Service Commission at Ottawa. The applications went forward at once with recommendations from the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association. In a day or two the Civil Service Commission replied by sending formal application forms, and these were promptly filled in and returned to Ottawa. The next communication from Ottawa was a sterotyped letter signed with a rubber stamp, and notifying the returned men that their applications had been placed on file. And from then on there has been nothing but silence, while the positions remain unfilled. One of the applicants, despairing of hearing anything more from Ottawa, has accepted another position.

Although there are vacancies to be filled, the two applicants, endorsed by the War Veterans, well recommended by other citizens, men who have seen long service in France, and one of whom has had previous experience as a letter carrier, are kept waiting for weeks and no action is taken.

Capt. Burnham says the government is to blame. That seems to be obvious. Why not divert the "red triangle campaign of truth" in the direction of Ottawa and see if some explanation cannot be found.

THE LOCKS DEATH-TRAP.

The death-trap below the Peterborough lock has claimed another victim. Along the whole stretch of the Otonabee there is no portion of the river as dangerous to the canoeist as this spot which has been the scene of a number of tragedies like that of Wednesday night and of many narrow escapes. In order to reach the boat-slide above the lock it is necessary to make a passage of the tumultuously rushing water with the greatest point of danger at the end of the long pier, past which the water whirls at mill-stream speed. Even to the expert paddler the feat of fighting a way up stream in safety presents difficulties; to the novice in a canoe, there is a deadly peril in the swiftly flowing water. The natural tendency is to paddle up the river in the shelter of the pier and then to cut out into the current, relying on skill and strength with the paddle to swing the canoe's bow around until the craft is pointing squarely up stream, after which the rest of the journey is not so difficult. It is in swinging out into the river that the majority of accidents occur. Before the inexperienced paddler knows where he is the swirl of the water striking his canoe broadside has overturned the frail craft.

For years there has been an agitation to have the government take some steps to remove the danger at this point. Only the night before Wednesday's accident Mayor Duncan, while waiting for the arrival at the lock of Hon. Dr. Reid and party, pointed out the peril that existed for canoeists and intended to have called the attention of the Minister of Railways and Canals to the situation, the late hour at which the Ottawa delegation arrived preventing an inspection being made. Mayor Duncan's plan to remedy the condition is to have constructed a cement breakwater running from the canoe slide to the end of the long pier and paralleling the latter. This would leave a narrow channel of smooth water, which could be navigated in safety even by the novice. The construction of such a breakwater would be a simple, inexpensive matter and it is to be hoped that the latest tragedy at this point will spur the authorities to action.

In the meantime this stretch of water should be shunned by all but expert paddlers and swimmers. The canoe is not a craft at any time for people who cannot swim and to attempt the passage of the river below the lock is suicide for those who have not learned to handle a canoe or take care of themselves in the water. The man who takes a girl into the peril of that passage in a canoe—a custom that is not infrequent—should be arrested for criminal carelessness. And the public should realize that while portaging a canoe around the lock is a matter involving some exertion, the extra work is compensated by safety, a condition which does not exist in attempting to reach the canoe slide via the water route.

THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

In time of peace the opening of the Trent Valley Canal would probably have attracted much public attention. We have now a new waterway from Lake Simcoe to Lake Ontario. From Lake Simcoe the Severn River, about thirty miles long, flows into Georgian Bay. When this is rendered navigable, there will be a new waterway from the Uper Lakes to Lake Ontario, enabling vessels to avoid the circuitous route via the Detroit River and Lake Erie. Against this advantage, there will be the smaller draught of the Trent system and the time lost in locking.

But a full view of the advantage of the new system cannot be obtained merely by considering the through traffic from Fort William and Port Arthur, Duluth and Chicago to the ocean. The Trent Valley is an inland system, serving the region between the Georgian Bay and the eastern part of Lake Ontario It will promote local trade, supplementing the railways. Now that we are to have a system of Government railways throughout Ontario the government can make the railways and canals work together, instead of carrying on a throat-cutting rivalry.

Besides this there are important water powers along the route. Some years ago it was estimated that between Lake Simcoe and Trenton there is 100,000 horse power available, equal to a million tons of coal. The power is not concentrated at one point, but scattered over a large area, simplifying the problem of transmission.

There will be power available for light, heat and electric railways for the towns, villages and rural districts along the line, and for manufacturing industry. The farmers will have in the manufacturing centres markets at their doors.

The region traversed by the canal and the waters which it links is one of remarkable beauty, which already attracts many campers, tourists, and fishermen, and the number of visitors will now be increased. From every point of view, the enterprise will promote the prosperity of Eastern Ontario.—Toronto Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The American marines are evidently following up the slogan, "The First to Fight." Their attack on the Marne front was a dashing and successful affair.

Remember the coming campaign of the Playgrounds Association. Success means two months' happiness for the city's children and two months' contentment and peace of mind for the city's mothers.

Children are too valuable an asset to the state to be neglected. The warning of the Ontario Safety League in regard to accidents caused by the carelessness and the appeal of the Playgrounds Association for funds to carry on their work, are two movements that cannot be neglected.

HIS TWO TENSE MOMENTS.

One Was a Ninth Inning and the Other at a Dinner Table.

I heard a prominent Cambridge man tell of the two most tense moments of his life yesterday. But the tension in each case was different.

"I doubt if I ever shall forget either occasion," he said reflectively. "They were big moments.

"The first was when I was in college. I was captain of the baseball team that year. We came to the end of the ninth. We needed one run to tie the score and another to win the game. Two men were down and two on the sacks when I came to bat. And for once in my career I did it. I lined out a three bagger, right over the railroad track. When I felt it go—well, that was one occasion.

"And the other." He chuckled, but a slow flush crept over his cheeks. "It was thirty years ago, soon after I left college. I went over to see a girl I thought was pretty nice and to meet her folks for the first time. I went on a Sunday. All the men were away. And they had duck for dinner." He stopped. "Ever carve a duck?" he asked meaningly. "No, neither had I before. Nor have I since." His flush deepened. "I never even went to see that girl again," he added plaintively.—Boston Journal.

Price Fixing Inevitable To Control Monopolies That Have Been Created By The Embargo

OTTAWA, June 7.—That price fixing may be one of the inevitable concomitants of any further extension of the list of prohibited imports, is an opinion which is growing at Ottawa.

It is pointed out that the embargoing of imports naturally creates a monopoly in such articles for home manufacture or home producer which is all too often taken advantage of to the detriment of the consumer. The increase in the customs and excise duties on certain articles under the recent budget has had that effect to a considerable degree, but the monopoly secured the home manufacturers through a complete embargo must of course be far more effective than can be brought about by any increase in duties.

It is felt that if the list of prohibited articles is extended, which is probable, steps will have to be taken, as they have been in Great Britain, to protect the consumer against artificial price boosting permitted by the monopoly created.

PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY

At the regular monthly meeting of the local Red Cross Society, which was held on Monday afternoon, June 3rd, the need of increasing the quantity of the supplies in June and July, was strongly emphasized. All workers who can go to the public library on Wednesday afternoons are earnestly urged to do so. An appeal is made also to those who work in the various Red Cross Auxiliaries to put forth renewed efforts during the next few weeks, for it is imperative that the shipments be augmented.

LIBRARY WORK.

The Library Work Room reported the following articles made from May 13th to June 3rd:

W. E. Breyfogle,

The report of the Packing Committee was as follows:

Madam President, Members of the Peterboro Red Cross: Your Packing Committee report 24 cases shipped to Montreal for May, containing the following:

Acknowledgments of parcels sent through the Canadian Red Cross Society have been received by the Prisoners of War Department of the local society, from the following:

Pte. Alfred David.
Pte. H. Godfrey.

The following card received from Lieut. C. V. Fessenden, of the 48th Highlanders of Canada, who was for many months a prisoner in Germany, but is now at Schereningen, Holland, will be of General interest:

Hotel Royal,
Schereningen, Holland,
April 6, 1918.

Dear Miss Morrow: Now that I am in Holland, it would indeed be ungrateful of me not to thank the Canadian Red Cross Society, through you, for the splendid way that you have sent parcels to Canadian prisoners, and also to thank you yourself for the work you have done. The parcels are always very sensibly selected, so that the things we get are always the things we want. The white bread especally is very good as it arrives quite fresh and is very welcome in a land of tinned food.

You have no idea what a relief it is here in Holland to get away from tin openers.

Yours very sincerely,
C. V. Fessenden.

Annual Meeting Of The Peterboro' Agricultural Board Held Yesterday

Farmers Met at the Home of Mr. Joshua Smithson, Otonabee and Discussed Some of the Leading Issues of the Day—Officers Elected For the Year

"FARMERS ARE ADVISED TO DEATH"

"The farmers are the most humiliated class of people today. We are told how much we are allowed for our cheese, our wheat, and in fact everything we produce, by the powers that be at Toronto. The manufacturers and pork barons are allowed to sell at unrestricted prices. But the day of reckoning is coming. We are not going to put up with this much longer. Perhaps I am going too far. You know the legislators make the laws, and if we talk against or resist these laws they put us in the penitentiary. Who makes these laws anyway. Last summer I was at Chemong Park and a lawyer from Peterborough came over to me and asked if I would put the harness on his horse, he couldn't seem to make it fit. He had the Dutch collar under the tail and the breechin around the neck. This lawyer, now a judge, is dictating to the farmerr in the Guelph district. That is what our legislators at Toronto are."

With these condemning words, Mr. R. N. Scott, of Smith township, echoed the feelings of the people present at the annual meeting of the Peterborough Board of Agriculture held yesterday afternoon on the farm of Mr. Joshua Smithson, Otonabee. Owing to the threatening weather the assembly was not as large as it has been in former years. Mr. Joshua Smithson was the genial host this years and the farmers literally took possession of his beautiful home on the Keene road.

Supported the War Measures.

Mr. Smithson in his address, heartily supported the war measures of the government. "If we lose the war, then we lose everything," said the genial Scotsman of 78 summers.

We look to a great stimulus in agriculture after the war. There is no doubt that Canada offers many advantages to the farmer.

Advised to Death.

Colonel T. J. Johnson said the farmer had been advised to death by the government. I may be an optimist, but I think the farmers of Peterborough county are placed in the very best spot on the globe. In England the land is worn. They always use fertilizer for grain and sometimes they do not take as much out as they put in. These methods are conservative and primitive. It costs about $3.00 to $3.50 to plough an acre of land there. There was a hay field close at hand where I was stationed and the farmers were loading the hay. They had a team tandem hitched to the wagon. One man was leading the first horse and in addition there were four other men, with one man with a white collar doing nothing but superintending the job. They have no hay forks like we have and their threshing outfits are tremendously slow. As to the grazing it is very poor. One acre here is worth two English acres. It is all right to look at, but it has not the strength of our grass. The reason is as an old Lincolnshire farmer told me 'the weather is too dull.' All I can say about the country is that it is a very beautiful one. Canada is one of the greatest countries in the world. But the farmers must wake up. More than anything we need co-operation and organization.

Mrs. W. R. Morris.

Mrs. W. R. Morris also spoke in behalf of Mr. R. B. Rogers, registrar of Peterborough East. The government hoped that all meetings would be addressed regarding the aims and objects of registration so that the people would have an intelligent understanding. Registration is law now and is compulsory. Every person over 16 years of age must register. The penalties are heavy for not doing so. You can not buy a steamship or railway ticket, you cannot be served or given a bed or can anybody sell to you. When a person registers he should carry his registration certificate because anybody has a right to ask you for it. Information will be given in the daily papers before registration day. If you are a housewife, I think you are doing national service and you will not be required to do other work.

Mr. J. N. Godfrey, K.C., of Toronto, is superintendent for East and West Peterborough. Mr. R. B. Rogers is registrar in East Peterborough, and Mr. F. Dobbin in West Peterborough. It is the intention to use schools and all women as far as possible at the registration centres.

Hosts of Mistakes.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., stated that if the advance of the Germans should continue for a few miles, Canada would be a portion of the German Empire and not of the British Empire. Canada takes a great share in this struggle and a great many mistakes have been made. In the United States they have made so many that they have agreed to forget all about them. There is the aeroplane and ship fiascos and hosts of others. Now the United States Government is squeezing out all hostile elements and are going ahead rapidly with the war. In Canada we did not know how to go to war. We should have had registration at first. One thing that has been accomplished however, is that the men that we have sent to the front have fought magnificently. They have had many sore trials and every variety of difficulty to face. We must be equally brave and show it. We are not asking the soldiers to be brave; they are asking us to be brave. We will in time be thoroughly organized, after registration. It will enable people to help each other.

Officers Elected.

In the election of officers, the popular president Mr. Clayton Telford, was re-elected. The officers for the ensuing year will be:

President—Mr. Clayton Telford.
Vice-President—Mr. Sherman Garbutt.
Sec.-Treasurer—Mr. Allen Mann.
Auditors—Mr. R. N. Scott and Mr. Joshua Smithson.

A motion was moved that a letter of condolence be sent to the wife of the late Mr. J. H. Garbutt.—Carried unanimously.

Everybody considered that the farming community has suffered an irreparable loss by the death of Mr. Garbutt.

The meeting adjourned to partake of the good things which the ladies had provided.

Among those present were Mr. H. C. Garbutt, North Monaghan, Colonel T. J. Johnson, Mr. Charlie Brown, Mr. Alex. McGregor, Mr. Jack Gillespie, Mr. Ronald McKee of the Farm and Dairy, Mr. J. Hartshorn, Mr. R. N. Scott, Mr. Lancashire, Mr. Dawson Kennedy, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P. Mr W. Laing of the Peterborough Customs House, and Postmaster John Edgar, Ex-Reeve Knox of Norwood was also there.

NAVAL AERIAL OPERATIONS REPORTED BY THE ADMIRALTY

Several Bombing Raids Were Successfully Carried Out—Enemy Machines Destroyed.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, June 7.—A review covering recent naval aerial operations is published by the Admiralty.

Eight bombing raids it says, have been made on the following military objects: Zeebrugge, Ostend, Bruges and Thourout railway junction. Large quantities of heavy bombs were dropped. In the course of aerial fighting two enemy machines were destroyed and three driven down out of control. One of ours is missing. In home waters during the same period, escort duties and anti-submarine patrols were carried out. Submarines were sighted and attacked and enemy mines located on several occasions.

A squadron of large seaplanes carried out a long reconnaisance on the North Sea. A large formation of hostile machine was met and engaged, resulting in two enemy machines being shot down. On the return trip two of our machines were forced to alight close to the coast owing to engine trouble. They have been interned.

JOINT GUARDIANS FOR GODFREY CHILDREN

Judge Huycke gave his decision in the matter of the custodianship of the Godfrey children this morning. The application for guardianship had been made by Bentley Walker and [Stanley] Godfrey, and after careful inquiries the Judge decided that although both were competent to become the guardians, the proper people were the aunt of the children, Mrs. Alice Godfrey and Mrs. Bentley Walker, who had been in charge of the children since the death of their mother. He therefore appointed them joint guardians.

Applications were made for letters of administration by Bentley Walker and Stanley Godfrey. The Judge however, appointed Mrs. Alice Godfrey and Mrs. Bentley also to this.

THOROUGH PREPARATION FOR REGISTRATION IN PETERBORO'

Helpers Are Active and Eager and Bulky Work Will Be Disposed of Efficiently If the Present Signs Count.

The immensity of the task of the national registration which must be completed by June 22nd, is reflected in the activity with which Ald. Dobbin's office hums these days. Piles of cards, pamphlets and other printed matter have been received from Ottawa, and the staff of helpers are bending to the preliminary work with an energy that assures a thorough registration in the city. Mr. Dobbin's district is the electoral riding of West Peterborough. He has compiled a list of registration booths for the entire district. These will be made public shortly.

Booklets explaining the duties of the deputy registrars and other assistants are not the least important of the "literature" supplied by the Government. The volunteer workers are preparing packages of all the material that will be needed at each registration booth in the city and townships. Instructions are given in detail, and in the meantime concrete illustrations, object lessons, in registrations are presented at meetings of the deputies. The whole district should be well covered, and if any persons are so foolish as not to register they will certainly not have the excuse that adequate facilities were not provided.

ORANGEMEN HAVE SUCCESSFUL YEAR

The forty-second session of the Royal Black Chapter of Eastern Ontario opened in Kingston on Tuesday afternoon. There were about seventy-five members present. Mayor J. M. Hughes welcomed the visitors to the city and referred to the splendid service which Orangemen are rendering to the Empire.

T. K. Allan, K.C., of Kemptville, the Grand Master, said he had to report one of the most, if not the most progressive year in their history. During his term of office five Preceptories have been instituted: Forest Mills, Millbrook, Havelock, Bobcaygeon and Kirkfield and another is being formed.

Referring to the home rule convention, the Grand Master expressed the hope that the negotiations now proceeding might solve the problem.

This afternoon the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East with 300 delegates attending was opened by the Grand Master, O. W. Landon, of Lansdowne.

A number of Peterborough delegates are in attendance.

SALE OF CAKE HAS FALLEN OFF.

PETERBORO CONFECTIONERS REPORT DECREASING SALES.

The sale of cakes has fallen off considerably ar the local confectioners since the government forbade the icing of cakes. The local dealers say that the people are ready and willing to abide by any measures which will help out in the national crisis, and very little complaint has been made. One peculiar feature is the fact that the merangue which is substituted for sugar icing is as expensive to the confectioners as the former icing.

PETERBORO FIRM GETS A LARGE ORDER FOR FLAGS.

J. J. TURNER & SONS WILL SUPPLY SIGNAL FLAGS FOR THE BRITISH NAVY.

The largest contract that has ever been awarded by the British government to a single firm in Canada has been given to the J. J. Turner Co., Ltd., for flags.

SECRET CODE.

The bulk of the order is for signal flags of the secred code of the British navy. This whole contract will mean a large amount of money to change hands in the city.

Already the firm has advertised for fifty expert machine operators and this call will likely be augmented by as many again in a few weeks.

Some idea of the foresight of the firm may be gained by the fact that premeditating a large order of the kind, thousands of flags which are in general order had been completed before the government order was received.

You seem in a nawful hurry, youse fairly on the run.
Is you goin' to the Council house to have a little fun?

Compulsory Rationing Will Not Be Introduced In Canada

New Food Regulations Apply to Places Where Boarders Are Kept

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 7.— The new food regulations just announced are not a precursor of compulsory rationing in private homes. They merely apply to places where boarders are kept. In the case of places serving 15 meals or more a day, over and above the requirements of the actual household, licenses must be secured and paid for and the regulations must be observed on pain of the cancellation of such licenses. Places serving less than that number are not required to have licenses, though they are expected to observe the regulations. Licenses, in short, must be secured by housekeepers with five or more boarders.

Compulsory Rationing.

But it is not the intention of the Food Board to institute compulsory rationing in private homes. An attempt is being made to work out a system of voluntary rationing with the co-operation of the Provincial authorities. The latter are being urged to recommend a system of voluntary rationing which shall be suitable to the ideas of each individual province and the Food Board will give the publicity necessary to make known the systems advocated for the various provinces.

The Food Board believes that the expense of enforcing compulsory rationing, upon a widely scattered population in the Dominion would not be justified by the amount of conservation effected.

World Happenings

Canadian Press:

LONDON, June 7.—Phillip Noach, Kitchener, Ont., a deserter from the O. R., was to-day sentenced to years in the penitentiary. He was arrested at Kitchener, Noach, who was heavily armed, put up a stiff fight, in which he was wounded.

Peterborough Represented.

Canadian Press:

BRANTFORD, June 7.—The annual Ontario conference of Typographical Unions was opened in the A. O. F. Hall here this morning, with Mayor MacBride, himself a printer, extending the welcome. Delegates were present from Woodstock, Hamilton, Guelph, Montreal, Toronto, Peterborough, London, with others expected in to-day.

Lodge Meeting Concluded.

Canadian Press:

KINGSTON, June 7.—At the concluding session of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East, a committee was appointed to express to Sir Edward Carson the appreciation of the Grand Lodge for the noble stand he is making on behalf of the Protestants of Ireland, and also to convey to the Right Hon. Lloyd George, Prime Minister of England, and Bonar Law our sentiments in regard to the Protestants of Ireland. Retiring officers were re-elected, and Cornwall selected for next meeting.

Allowance Too Small.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, June 7.—The morning session of the Presbyterian General Assembly was taken up largely with a discussion over the allowance paid widows of ministers. In view of the faithful and great services given, it was held by Rev. Dr. Tanner that the allowance was ridiculously small. J. K. Macdonald, of Toronto, made a strong plea for an increase, dwelling on the inadequacy of the present sum. The matter will be taken up again later. The Assembly was addressed this morning by the Bishop of Huron, and Rev. Dr. Hanson, of Montreal, replying.

Ship Launchings.

Special to the Examiner:

WASHINGTON, June 7. — Ship launchings in May, like the deliveries, set a new record. Seventy-one hulls, totalling 344,450 dead weight tons, were put into the water. Thirty-nine of them were steel, with a capacity of 228,750 tons, and 32 wood of 115,700 tons. May launchings exceeded April by 26 ships and January by 55 ships.

Another Peace Offer.

Special to the Examiner:

PARIS, June 7.—"It is reported that most of the German political parties have agreed upon the desirability of offering peace to the Allies," the Echo D'Paris declared to-day.

"Chancellor Hertling will make a very sensational speech in the Reichstag soon."

Russians on the Move.

Candian Press:

HARBIN, Manchuria, June 7.—Gen. Semenoff, leader of the anti-Bolshevik forces in Siberia, reports that Bolshevik troops to-day crossed the Onon River, in Trans Baikalia, and strongly pressed a number of attacks, which were checked. An Austro-German force, composed of a cavalry brigade and four companies of infantry, is threatening General Semenoff's communications.

Submarines Destroyed.

Special to the Examiner:

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Senator Swanson, acting chairman of the Naval Committee, after a conference with the Navy heads to-day, declared that that Allied forces have destroyed sixty per cent. of all German submarines constructed, and that they have cut the shipping losses in half.

Not Disturbed

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINTON, June 7.— Senator Swanson said his information was obtained from the highest navy department authority. The indications of the last few days are that the German submarines that came over have been driven at present from the coast and from main lines of travel of American vessels. The navy department is not disturbed, and is doing everything possible, and I am confident no German submarine will be able to do any damage on this side. Movement of troops and food to Europe will continue uninterruptedly.

Peterborough Restaurants Will Be Closed All Day Sunday

Proprietors of Local Eating Houses Find It Impossible to Comply With Latest Regulation and Remain Open.

PUBLIC AFFECTED

Following the restaurant regulations restricting the city restaurants to a five hour Sunday, the restaurant keepers of the city met on Tuesday and as a result decided that the sales made in the time allowed would not justify their opening on Sunday at all. As a result the restaurants will be shut from Saturday night until Monday morning. Jim Hum, Manager of the Chinese Cafe, predicts an exodus from business activity of the majority of the restaurant keepers as a result of the new Act, as the Saturday and Sunday sales are worth practically all the other five days.

Boston Cafe.

Mr. N. Douros of the Boston Cafe, is heartily in accord with any war measure that may be enacted, but he finds little to commend itself in the recent action of the City Council in limiting the time restaurants may remain open on Sundays. With overhead expenses amounting to forty dollars a day, the Boston Cafe, like all other restaurants in the city, is finding it increasingly difficult to comply with the many regulations that are being issued. The recent enactment of the City Council will work a greater injury to the travelling public than it will to the restaurant keepers of the city.

Commencing on Sunday next all the restaurants in the city will be closed all day.

Americans Hacked Their Way Through establishing communication with each other.

In the meantime trench mortars were ordered up and blew up the Boche positions that were still holding out.

The flash of artillery lighted the sky all night. The banging of the guns was constant.

ADVANCED POSITION.

At dawn I went to an advanced position at the extreme right. The German artillery was becoming more active.

Practically all the fighting had been carried out through wheat fields and woods. The Americans would rush ahead a little way, pause to resist a counter attack, then rush on again.

The Boches clung to the railway station at Bouresches for several hours but finally the American rush could not be denied and they swept into the village, fighting their way through the streets, storming the station, and winning control of the railway.

REACHED OBJECTIVES.

Canadian Press:

WITH AMERICAN FORCES ON THE MARNE, June 7.— The attack made by American marines on German positions north-west of Chateau-Thierry early gave promise of being as successful as this morning's assault. The marines reached all their objectives set for the first hour within that time limit and pushed beyond them. Early reports indicated that the Germans are on the run for the time being and surrendering right and left. This is the second attack today.

On the Thursday night the Americans reached the outskirts of the towns of Bussaire and Torcy. Thursday morning allied troops, French on the right and the Americans on the left had advanced to within 500 yards of Bussaire. Attacking again at 5 o'clock Thursday evening French and Americans up to 1:30 p.m. had widened the advance line to about six miles between Gandelu on the west and Belleau Wood on the east. At that hour the Americans were at Granges farm south of Gandelu, while the French had driven the Boches from Belleau Wood and were advancing on Ballean.

Further details have not yet been received.

FOOD SITUATION IN THE CENTRAL EMPIRE IS GETTING WORSE

Austria-Hungary is Threatened With a Revolution—Attempts Against Military Works.

Special to The Examiner:

BERNE, June 7.—Austria is about to undergo an experience similar to that of Russia, when the Czar was dethroned, according to a statement today by travellers returning from Vienna.

They declared it is significant that innumerable attempts have been made against military works and establishments.

In the Adriatic region, Slavs have destroyed mines in the ports and canals at Dalmatsa, and on the Croation coast. In Bosnia, Hungarian patrols have been massacred and railways seriously damaged.

FOOD SITUATION.

The food situation is very serious, and the government has posted decrees in the region from Gratz to the sea, declaring that revolt, desertion or complicity in military transgressions are punishable by hanging or shooting.

The Burgomasters of Munich, Crefeld and Dessau have been imprisoned for profiteering. At Munich, the Burgomaster escaped lynching. A mob, which charged he had filled his residence with government food, stormed the house, but he had fled. They seized the food and sold it at high profits.

The food situation in parts of Germany also is growing worse, it is reported. At Cologne a mob attacked an unguarded food train, completely emptying t.

House Destroyed By Fire On Park St. In Monaghan

A large brick house owned by J. T. O'Connell, and occupied by Wm. Lunn, on the west side of Park street, south of Braidwood avenue, was completely destroyed by fire this afternoon.

The property is outside the city limits, and south of the Exhibition grounds. It is immediately south of the old John Bell homestead.

A few minutes after one o'clock neighbours discovered the fire in the roof on the east side of the house. Mrs. Thomas Arnott was one of the first to see the fire, and sent in a call to the Peterborough Fire Department.

In a few minutes the flames had spread out over one corner of the roof and, fanned by a furious wind, were soon beyond control. Friends hurried to the assistance of Mr. and Mrs. Lunn, and helped carry out furniture. Most of their household effects were saved, especially on the ground floor. Upstairs, the loss was considerable. Drawers were carried out of bureaus, but the bulkier bureaus with beds and other articles, had to be abandoned. Some mattresses were saved, but a lot of clothing was burned.

A Driving Wind.

The wind blew across the country lots carrying the flames in long tongues that swept even the road with their heat. The fence caught fire in several places, and the tall maples were blackened and charred. Although the fire started on the east side of the dwelling, and the wind was in the west, the flames quickly eddied westward from room to room. A small contingent of firemen and police worked hard in an effort to save the kiechen, but to no avail. They organized a bucket brigade, but the flames mocked their toil.

Cause Unknown.

Mrs. Lunn stated that she had no idea how the fire originated. She was in the kitchen shortly after dinner when a man passing the house rushed in with the information that the roof was on fire. The flames were first seen near a chimney but there had not been a fire in it for more than a month. The cause may have been a spark from the kitchen chimney at the rear and on the west side of the dwelling.

The house was built by Robert Goodfellow, years ago, when he moved from Fraserville. Mr. John Lynch lived there for some time, but recently William Lunn, who moved in from Cavan, occupied it. It was easily worth $2,500. It was partly insured by Mr. O'Connell, and the contents were also insured, but not fully, by Mr. Lunn.

RESTAURANT KEEPERS RECEIVE NOTICE

Chief Thompson Sends Instructions to Observers—New Regulations Sunday Night

Chief Thompson this morning notified the restaurant keepers that the restaurant regulations of a five hour Sunday are now in force, and next Sunday must see them observed in the city. There has been some misunderstanding among some of the restaurant proprietors concerning the law, they believing that the regulations did not come into force until July 1.

Meeting To-day.

A meeting of the restaurant keepers was held at noon to-day, and the proprietors of the Dominion, Boston, City and Paris Cafes decided to close down all day Sunday as a result of the restriction on hours made by the Council. In view of the fact that the hours 7 to 10, 12 to 2 and 5 to 7 were such that sufficient business would not be done by the proprietors to pay expenses, they made the decision mentioned.

WILD DEMONSTRATION AT A MEETING OF FARMERS HELD TO-DAY IN MASSEY HALL

One Speaker Claims That Organized Labour Has Reached An Agreement With the Government and the Drive For More Men is Directed Against the Farmers

TWO THOUSAND FARMERS ATTEND

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, June 7.—Feeling that they are fighting with their backs against the wall, the United Farmers of Ontario to-day entered upon another stage of their pitched battle against the Government's policy in depleting the ranks of agricultural labour by the calling up of young men between twenty and twenty-two. Over two thousand strong from all corners of Ontario, they gathered in the Labour Temple, where the smoldering antagonism engendered by the flat refusal given to their representatives at Ottawa a few weeks ago broke into more open hostility.

HUNDREDS TURNED AWAY.

Hundreds were turned away from lack of accommodation and the Massey Hall had to be requisitioned to make room for the crowds of incoming delegates who arrived with the forenoon trains. Time and again the great audience shouted itself hoarse in approval of points that had been made by the speakers. "We are fighting against a military autocracy," shouted one delegate in the middle of the hall and the whole building shook with the applause that followed. Resolutions are being drawn up for the afternoon session for condemning the Government policy, urging more efficient organization ready to meet any exigency that may arise, and favouring the establishment of a newspaper entirely devoted to the interests of the farmer. H. H. Wood, President of the United Farmers of Alberta, and Roderick Mackenzie, Secretary of the Canadian Council of Agriculture from Winnipeg, came from the west to lend a helping hand. They will address the gathering later in the day. Hon. J. S. Henry, the new Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, is also expected this afternoon.

ORGANIZED LABOUR.

That organized labour had entered into an agreement with the manufacturers and the Government, in order that labour wouldn't be conscripted from the cities, was the charge made by C. W. Gurney, who made the report on the conference to Ottawa.

"We were told that labour would be taken from the cities and used on the farm, but apparently labour has reached an agreement with the Government and now the drive is directed solely against the farmers in Ontario and Quebec," he declared amid applause.

A wild demonstration occurred after the address made by the Quebec representative, Mr. Levesque.

"The agriculturists of Ontario and Quebec will never be separated again," declared President Halbert of the Ontario Association. "We have come to learn that the men of Quebec are of the same flesh and blood as ourselves, and we will never be separated again despite the steel barrier that the powers that be have endeavoured to place between us."

The National Anthem was sung at the end of the morning session. The Quebec delegate then led in giving three cheres for the King and cheers were given for Quebec and Ontario.

AN OPTICAL ENIGMA.

Why Is It the Human Eye Sees Things Right Side Up?

Just why we are able to see things right side up is a mystery which science has not yet been able to explain.

We know that the human eye involves the same optical principles as a camera. Owing to the fact that light always travels in a straight line and never in a curve, the rays which emanate from any object within our range of vision have to descend and ascend in order to travel into the narrow opening in the eye which corresponds to the camera's lens.

These rays finally reach a point where they intersect. Continuing on in straight lines, their relative position becomes just the reverse of what they were when they left the object seen.

Thus the image register on the retina of your eye is topsy turvy, just as it is on the photographic plate in a camera. If you are looking at a house, for instance, the image your eye gets will show the chimneys down below, the foundation walls up above, and so on.

But the impression your brain gets reveals the house right side up unless you happen to be afflicted with a rare disorder, which results in everything always appearing topsy turvy.

During the infinitesimally short period required to flash the image seen from the eye's retina to the brain all the light rays which created the image are reassembled and put back in their proper places, so that the brain sees the object as it really is and not in the topsy turvy form it was registered on the retina. Just how this miracle is performed is what science would like to find out.—New York American.

A Prehistoric Lake.

One of the most interesting remnants of a prehistoric lake in the United States is that now known as Estancia valley, which lies south of Santa Fe and east of Albuquerque, N. M. From examination of the deposits in this section geologists are of the opinion that his lake existed at the same time as Lake Bonneville, in Utah, and other ancient lakes of the arid west during the cold, humid glacial period. The theory of the existence of an ancient lake in the valley is based on the presence of shore features and lake sediments. Sea cliffs, terraces, beaches, beach ridges, spits and bars are found on all sides of the lake flat at altitudes between 6,100 and 6,200 feet above sea level.—Argonaut.

Modern Uhlans.

The uhlans are a distinctive corps. The name is by no means distinctly German. A body of uhlans was formed for the French army by Marshal Saxe. They were introduced into the Prussian service in 1740, and forty years later the Austrians also had a corps of uhlans—light cavalry armed with lance. The modern uhlan may be classed with the heavy cavalry.—London Opinion.

GRAVESTONE LUNCHEONS.

One of the Curious Sights of New York's Financial District.

In old Trinity churchyard, where Robert Fulton and Alexander Hamilton lie buried, dozens of girls can be seen through the pickets of the bronze fences every day enjoying their noon day lunches amid the tombs of the old time New Yorkers. All about are high skyscraping office buildings. The elevated trains clatter and bang overhead, and on Broadway the trolley's gongs add tumult to the roar of the city. Within the old churchyard all is peace and quiet. It is here that the girls from these big office buildings come of a noontime to eat their lunch, "far from the madding crowd," yet within a hand's reach of the bustle of Broadway.

It was only a few years ago that some girl, a typewriter in a nearby office building, chanced to let her eyes fall over the gravestones of old Trinity. They did not bring thoughts of ghosts to her mind—they only made her think that it would be lovely if she could eat her lunch among such peaceful scenes. The next day she and a girl friend brought their lunches. They entered the churchyard and, seeking a secluded spot behind the old church, sat down on an old tomb and began to eat their sandwiches. Nobody objected. The next day they came again. Other girls, emerging from stuffy restaurants, saw them and resolved to imitate them. The next day there were half a dozen there, and nowadays, when the noon hour is bright and sunny, the number has increased to sometimes seventy five.—New York Cor. Pittsburgh Dispatch.

FIRST CATCHER'S PAD.

It Was Worn by Charlie Bennett of the Old Detroit Team.

Charlie Bennett, the noted catcher of the famous Detroit team of 1886-7, often told with delight the story of how he and his wife made the first catcher's breast protector.

It was a constant source of worry to Mrs. Bennett to watch her husband being made a target for the speed merchants of thirty years ago. And she fully realized the pressing necessity of some kind of armor to prevent the hot shot sent through by these speedy sinabmen from caving in a rib or two which belonged to her better half.

After much deep thinking and considerable labor the Bennetts shaped out something that had a faint resemblance to the protector worn today.

In a private trial it worked fine, and in the tryout Charlie would let the ball slip through his hands and bang up against his chest without experiencing the slightest jar. After Bennett got used to it he wore it in a regular contest, and, with the eyes of thousands of spectators upon him, he would let a fast one hit him square on the chest. The ball would rebound back almost to the pitcher.—New York World.

A REIGN OF NO LAW

That In Reality Is What Is Meant by Martial Law.

SUSPENDS ALL OTHER LAWS.

Those In Command Have Supreme Authority, and There Is No Check Upon Their Arbitrary Power Over Persons and Property of All Kinds.

What is martial law? Some people have a vague idea that it is military law, but this is a mistake. Military law has nothing whatever to do with martial law. Military law is simply that branch of the laws applicable to military service and duties, consisting of the statutes, regulations and principles by which the army and its affairs are governed. The misunderstanding has arisen partly from the name given to it and partly from the fact that it is the military which frequently carry out the regulations, while often the military forms of courts are held.

The police, however, if duly authorized, may carry out martial law.

It is difficult to define the meaning of martial law in nontechnical words. The dictionary definition of martial law is that it is military authority exercised in accordance with the laws and usages of war when the civil authority is wholly or partly suspended, either by proclamation or by the actual presence of a hostile force. But the best definition given has been that of "no law."

It means that the supreme authority is empowered to do as it wills and that all ordinary laws, for the time being, have no operation whatever. There are no laws dealing with its application, those in command possessing entirely arbitrary power.

This means that there will be a complete revolution in the ways of the people wherever martial law is proclaimed. All ordinary life will be affected, and it will no longer be the case that "an Englishman's home is his castle."

As a rule, when a place is under martial law its inhabitants must clear out of the streets before a certain time every evening, say 8 o'clock. Then all places of amusement, public houses and so on are closed entirely.

Even during the daytime a limit is made as to the number of people who may assemble, so that a party of people—numbering above, say, half a dozen—would be liable to instant punishment. Also certain places and certain streets are forbidden to the people, who may be compelled to keep beyond a certain radius from the specified places.

Those in authority may take any object they like from anywhere, entering houses as well as shops to commandeer whatever they wish without any control. Any person may be compelled to give a complete account of his movements, past, present and projected, and may be searched or even arrested without a warrant.

Crimes are dealt with very severely. Thus suppose a man breaks a window. Instead of being hauled up before a magistrate and subjected to a small fine, the policeman would be perfectly justified in shooting him immediately.

So in the case of robbery. A man stealing a purse need not be arrested, but could be shot, this being a perfectly justifiable action on the part of those in authority.

Every person might be compelled to carry a passport, giving full evidence of his identification. Passports would be necessary in the case of those using horses or vehicles of any kind, including cycles.

All persons who were compelled to be out at night would be provided with special night passes signed by the one in authority. No person would be allowed to leave one town for another or travel beyond a certain distance without being the possessor of a properly signed passport given for this special purpose.

The object, of course, is to keep the people within certain districts and also to prevent foreign spies and the like from moving into the country and so gleaning information of value to our enemies.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Imperial Rome.

There are various estimates of the population of ancient Rome. The figure given by Gibbon is 1,200,000. Baker, in his notes to Montesquieu's "Grandeur and Decadence of the Romans," gives good reasons for thinking that Rome's population was 2,000,000. The city had within its walls in the time of Theodosius 48,332 habitations, built, as a rule, with several stories.—New York American.

The Word "Rajah."

Literally the word rajah means king, and maharajah the great king or ruler over several kings, but generally speaking the titles rajah, maharajah and nawab have no greater significance than the words feudal lords as used in mediaeval times in Europe. Many of them have been made by the will of the reigning chief, many bestowed for meritorious acts and deeds.—Exchange.

Foreign Decorations.

The various decorations that have been given to American officers and officials by foreign governments are deposited in the state department, where the recipients may see them and show them to their friends, but may not take them away or use them as having possession.

To the man of firm purpose all men and things are servile.—Goethe.

ERADICATE THE RAT!

A Disease Breeder and Carrier That Serves No Good Purpose.

Rats are dangerous. They have no legitimate business, nor can they serve any good purpose in any community. Sanitarians are well agreed that rats are a serious menace to health. They are so filthy in their habits as tenants of the sewers and as feeders on everything dirty and diseased that it is no wonder they are carriers of disease, parasites and plague infection.

That rats are afflicted with many diseases more than bubonic plague is confirmed by Dr. Rupert Blue, surgeon general of the United States public health service, who, speaking on this point, says: "Other infections of the rat are trematodes, or flukes; cestodes, or tapeworms; nematodes, or round worms; protozoa, insects and vegetable microbes." Of the rats examined in San Francisco 34 per cent were infested with tapeworms.

Plague is primarily a disease of the rat. It is communicated from the plague stricken rat to other rats and from rats to man by means of fleas, as the principal agent, yet it has been determined many times that handling a rat that has been dead of plague only a few hours gives the infection almost instantly. Two small boys while playing in an unused cellar found the body of a dead rat. The corpse was buried with unusual funeral honors. In forty-eight hours both were ill with bubonic plague. A laborer finding a sick rat on the wharf picked it up with the naked hand and threw it into the bay. He was seized three days later with plague. But the flea is the chief inoculator. Fleas abandon a rat dead of plague and go in search of living beings who still have warm blood circulating in their veins. Biting man they inoculate into him the living virus which starts the disease.

Since plague is a disease due to rats and rat fleas and not to filth or dirty habits, there's only one thing to do to avoid plague, eradicate the rats. This can be done by making war on them with traps, poison and starvation, and by "rat proofing" against them; that is by building them out. As a result of the Chinatown plague epidemic in 1907, so efficient was the ratproof constructions that followed, that rats and plague were entirely "built out" of that part of the city.

Politeness.

If those who are doubtful as to the correct course to pursue in any given situation will remember that even the wrong thing is overlooked if one is but absolutely polite in the doing of it their relief might be great.

A gentleness of demeanor and a courteous response or question can never be out of place. A man may wear a business suit of clothes to an evening wedding less noticeably than a truculent air of insolence. If he be perfectly well bred as far as behavior goes, it matters not so much what his outward garb, although by an unwritten law of social observance certain clothes are the correct thing for certain occasions.

Politeness is never wrong. Its practice goes nearly all the way toward the goal of the right thing in the right place. We hear of polite insolence, but insolence is never polite, and it is never, under any circumstances, polite to be insolent.

GOOD GAME FOR TO-MORROW

To-morrow's game at the Riversides Park promises to be a fast one. Both sides are supremely confident that they will win. It is very likely that the Riversides will turn out in their natty new gray uniforms.

Matthews-Blackwell are thinking of entering a team in the new league and Gordon Matthews has already taken steps in this direction. The interest of the fans is awakening and there promises to be a good brand of ball this season.

The Riversides and the Thistles clash to-morrow at Riverside Park in an exhibition fixture.

Public Library Notes

Steps are about to be taken to provide for the establishment of a Children's department in the Library. This system is in vogue in most of the libraries of the province and indeed, in Canada, and in striving to meet more fully the needs of the juvenile readers in the community, the Board are keeping in line with the general trend of library work in Canada and elsewhere. In order to make the scheme a success, the board are arranging for the services of a lady with many years' experience in teaching children. The department will not be opened till late in the fall, and it is hoped to be in full and successful running by the end of 1918.

A system of reserving books has also been authorized by the board. For this there will be no payment as in former years, but each applicant for a book will be placed on a waiting list and be notified concerning the volume in strict order of precedence. Books will not be retained for any applicant for more than twenty four hours after notification. In cases where there is sufficient demand for a book an extra copy will be obtained so as to satisfy such demand.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of my dear husband, Andrew W. Paterson, who died June 7th, 1916.

Tomatoes, Berries And Other Fresh Fruits Debarred From Canada By The New Embargo

Fruit Dealers Apparently Suffer Seriously by the New Regulations Must Wait Until Canadian Grown Produce Reaches the Market.

Fruit dealers, retail and wholesale, appear to have been hard hit by the Government's embargo on certain imports. All green fruits are debarred except oranges, bananas and lemons, and some interpretations of the official order are not so sure about lemons and oranges. Tomatoes are also shut out. The tomato crops of Mississippi, Tennessee, Arkansas and New Jersey, have yet to be marketed before the Canadian crop is available, but the embargo simply cuts off this usual spring supplies from Canadian consumers. In other words fresh vegetables and fruits which form the great bulk of the fruit dealers' spring and early summer business will not be allowed enter Canada. The people must wait until the home-grown crops reach the market.

Fruit Men to Ottawa.

The produce dealers of Ontario went to Ottawa on Wednesday night to obtain a clear understanding of the latest order. Mr. M. J. Oke was unable to accompany the deputation. To-day he stated that he had several cars of fruit on the road, one was a car of pineapples, but reports from the border indicate that the regulations are already going into effect. Consignments of fruits have been held at the Niagara border. The number of cars stopped is not known, but in the past between 30 and 40 cars crossed the line daily.

Prices Will Be High.

"I feel certain that high prices will follow these regulations," Mr. Oke said. "Many of the canners and jam manufacturers use large quantities of United States fruits, and if their importation is now forbidden, I'd wager that the canners are scouring the Niagara fruit district buying this summer's crops. This would mean higher prices and a greatly reduced marketing of fruits and vegetables through the regular channels of trade.

Fruit Trade Suffers Most.

The Canadian Grocer to-day says: 'According to the list the fruit trade seems to have suffered the most seriously. Unless some latitude is assured this order may indeed prove disastrous."

Prices of oranges have already advanced, but this item will be insignificant compared with the strange absence of the wealth of fruits that were imported every spring before the Canadian crops were ripe.

RECORD AND LABELS.

Keep a war record this year. Canada wants to know exactly how much she managed to produce through the medium of vacant lots and backyards. The Canada Food Board is asking the presidents of 11 Rotary Clubs and gardening organizations to keep a complete record of their returns. It is estimated that $30,000,000 worth of produce was added to the country's food supply last year through the war gardens. This year it is anticipated the yield will be doubled. Help the Food Board to make sure of this by keeping a record of what you grow.

Where labels are used in the war garden a good plan for saving the little wooden stakes is to soak them for a whole day in a solution of copperas (sulphite of iron.) Then let the wood dry out and finally place it in lime water for 24 hours. The outcome of this treatment is the formation in the wood of sulphite of lime (gymeum), a salt that is highly insoluble. This impregnates the wood to such an extent that the rapid destruction of the labels is impossible. Thin wood treated in this manner has been fully exposed to the weather for two years without showing the least change.

2,000 GATHER TO PROTEST TAKING YOUNG FARMERS FOR THE FRONT LINE

TORONTO, June 8.—There were nearly 2,000 farmers and their wives in Massey Hall yesterday afternoon when the meeting to protest against the drafting of men from the farms of Canada was called to order by Chairman R. H. Halbert.

The chairman was a little late in calling the meeting to order. "The difference between Borden's time and ours," he said, consulting his watch. The ladies were coaxed up to the platform amid much applause. The ground floor and the balcony were filled. One or two men indulged in a smoke.

Mr. J. J. Morison, Secretary of the United Farmers, said that as a thousand of the farmers were already crowded in the Labour Temple, it might be necessary to secure Massey Hall for the afternoon session.

"Get the Fair Grounds," shouted an elderly delegate with grey hair.

"That's right," shouted the crowd.

"What would we look like in Massey Hall?" asked a delegate.

"It doesn't matter what it looks like," replied another. "We don't care what the public think."

"It will cost you a lot of money if we take Massey Hall, about a quarter apiece," said Mr. Morison. (Laughter).

By a unanimous vote it was decided to secure Massey Hall for the afternoon session.

C. W. Gurney, of Paris, reporting on the result of the U.F.O. deputation at Ottawa, said they had received a flat turn down by Sir Robert Borden.

Newton Wesley Rowell.

"So far as General Mewburn is concerned," he said, "he would consider no exemptions under any circumstances, and he would have nothing to do with any changes proposed in the Act. That is the kind of treatment we got, and Mr. N. W. Rowell never even apologized to us for the cold turn down we received. It was not so much an insult to your committee as it is an insult to you farmers. (Hear, hear).

"I tell you," proceeded Mr. Gurney, "the ladies of Ontario are thoroughly aroused as they have never been before over the situation that has been created, and if we begin to lack warmth I am sure they will spur us on."

The committee and report state the delegation to Ottawa had had the result of increasing interest in organization of farmers.

"We succeeded in having a memorandum presented to the House and Senate, bringing out the fact that the people of Canada were fast losing their democracy, protesting against the Government by order-in-Council dealing with the most momentous questions that ever faced the Canadian people.

Are in Danger.

"This conference has been called because we find that the needs of agriculture are in danger of being lost sight of, that a short-sighted national policy has been pursued. The committee recommends that a committee be appointed at this conference to take such further action as may be deemed to further carry out your ideas."

The meeting was then thrown open for questions.

"Is there any way of getting the release from the army if the only son who is left on the farm is taken?" asked a delegate.

"This can only be done for what are called special cases," said Mr. Morison. "They are where the only remaining son has a brother at the front who has been disabled or killed. In cases where it is the only son of a widow or the only son of aged parents, his case may be considered by the commanding officer if a declaration is made out regarding the situation."

More Men.

"There should be more men in the military to look after the declarations," said another delegate.

"We thought down in Eastern Ontario that that was the way to proceed, but we have learned differently," said a French-Canadian from Ottawa. "Down at Ottawa last night we met a boy who is the only son working on a 250-acre farm and whose father and mother are cripples. The commanding officer would not listen to his declaration." (Loud applause).

"We have to fight a military autocracy here in Canada," said another delegate, while the farmers again broke into applause. Mr. Gurney quoted from a speech of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in which he denied that Premier Lloyd George had ever said that men were needed even if production would suffer.

"We were continually told that Lloyd George had cabled to send us men and more men, even at the loss of production, and we did not know that that statement was not true until we were leaving Ottawa," said Mr. Gurney.

A Percentage.

"If Canada sends 500,000 men she will send five per cent. of her population, while if the United States sends five per cent she will send 5,-5,000,000 men and up to the present United States only intends to send ,000,000 men and up to the present have only sent one million, or less than one per cent.

"I believe that there is a bargain between organized labour, the manufacturers and the Government. We were told that labour would be conescripted from the cities to be used on the farms, but we find that no labour has been taken. It seems that there is an agreement between labour and the Government and the drive is now against the farmers in Ontario and Quebec."

(Loud applause).

"Did the committee at Ottawa receive any secret information which ran lead us to think that we should give more men in proportion to the United States? Why should they drain the farmers from this country who produre more food than any others? Is it that there are not enough ships to take the United States soldiers overseas?"

Mr. Gurney—"We were told that there were lots of ships both in the United States and Canada."

Mr. H. B. Cowan, of Peterborough, said he would not like it to go forth that Canada was trying to hide behind another country. "We want to consolidate our forces, and it is not in the best interests of this country and the Allied countries that the farmers should be drained of help so long as there are enough men from other sources who can be called."

Mr. Morison, in reply to a question, stated that the U.F.O. was making preparations to have the farmers representation in Ottawa, reproduced from Hansard.

CATTLE MARKET

Receipts of cattle this week were the lightest this season, being only about half the number marketed, taking the weekly averages during the months of March, April and May. Receipts began to fall off sharply in the past two weeks, indicating that most of the stable-fed cattle in the country, have already been marketed. It is a little early yet for the grass cattle to be coming along, so far a few weeks to come receipts will probably continue to be light. In the meantime the demand for butcher cattle is a gain strong and active, the temporary set back in prices last week being promptly recovered early in this week, the closing market on Thursday indicating an even higher and stronger market than before the short decline. Choice heavy steers were scarce and high. One or two buyers from outside were looking for heavy cattle, but were forced to take the lighter weights. Several heavy steers sold around $16.50, and choice lots of medium weight butcher steers and heifers were strong around $15 to $15.50.

Fat choice cows and butcher bulls were in good demand all week at firm prices.

There was a good enquiry for stockers and feeders of choice quality, the market for this class of cattle still holding very strong.

A few milch cows of the choicest quality are wanted at good prices, but generally the market for springers and milkers is easier.

Choice veal calves are in good demand the market averaging high.

Sheep and lambs continue strong, with receipts light.

The hog market suffered the first really big cut for a long time. The general weakness of the hog markets of Buffalo and Chicago made lower prices here inevitable, as these are the markets against which the local packers must compete for the English trade. Hence the cut of a dollar and a half from the previous week's price was easily made and maintained, and will probably, according to the present outlook, be followed by still another cut for next week. Just how much will depend on the opening markets on the other side.

Cattle Receipts.

Union Stock Yards—Total receipts this week 336 cars, with 3,257 cattle, 1,482 calves, 5,044 hogs, 543 sheep and lambs, and 1,428 horses.

City Cattle Market—15 cars, with 159 cattle 56 sheep, 166 hogs, 106 calves, and 6 horses.

NOISES IN EARS, TWITCHING NERVES

Told of the Exhausted Condition of the Nerves—Indigestion and Weak Heart Action Were Other Symptoms.

KINGSTON, Ont., March 22.—There are few people in this city who are not acquainted with the exceptional restorative power of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Reports have come from almost every street of the Limestone City telling of cures effected by this treatment, and the druggists have been surprised at the enormous demand for this great nerve restorative.

This is not to be wondered at when cure is effected in such extreme and complicated cases as the one described in this letter.

Mrs. M. A. Couling, 61 Stanley street, Kingston, Ont., writes:

"For a number of years I suffered from a rundown condition of the system, due to overwork. I could not sleep and was restless and worried. I had pains through my back; buzzing in the ears and twitching of my nerves and muscles. I had indigestion and my appetite became poor. I would get drowsy after eating and frequently suffered from great weakness. My circulation was poor, my hands and feet always cold and my heart action weak. I consulted doctors, but they could do nothing for me. Whilst in this condition I decided upon a trial of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. After taking eight boxes of this medicine I am relieved of all the symptoms from which I suffered before, and in general I feel like a new woman. I used to be very constipated so I took Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in connection with the Nerve Food, and am completely cured of that trouble, too."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c. a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

AT NARRAGANSETT

CHAPTER LXXXVII.

We had the drawing room and Mrs. Collins was in the parlour car. George spent most of his time either with her, or talking with some gentlemen he knew. I curled up in the corner of the seat and gave way to gloomy thoughts for a time. Then George came in with an armful of magazines and a resolutely opened one and read.

After our luncheon, which Mrs. Collins shared, she brought her book and came in with me. I was terribly annoyed, but pretended to be indifferent.

"You'll excuse me, if I go right on reading?" I said coldly.

"Of course! I have an interesting story to read, also."

For over two hours we sat without speaking. Then George came in and, for the remainder of the journey, he and Mrs. Collins kept up a running fire of small talk.

We were to stay at the same hotel, so naturally George took charge of her luggage.

"It's easy for widows to travel, if they have some other woman's husband to look after them," I thought bitterly, as I stood waiting while he hunted up a piece of her baggage which she insisted must go to the hotel with her.

More Unpleasantness.

"Make yourself as attractive as you can," George said as he left me. "It won't take me long to dress. I'll be back in a minute."

He was gone some time. I was all dressed when he came in. The moment I saw his face, I knew he was displeased.

"Is that what you call making yourself attractive," he asked, paying no attention to the maid.

"Why—am I not all right?" I had selected a dress of soft, white material, a little low in the neck. It was a dress I could have worn for a home dinner.

"Have you so few clothes that you must select that quakerish thing to appear in?" My eyes filled at his tone, and I turned away that he might not see the tears.

"I'll change, if you will tell me what you would like me to wear."

"There's no time to change!" (he had been dressing as he talked) "Mrs. Collins will be waiting."

Mrs. Collins! Was she to eat with us, too?

I glanced into the mirror. Really, I looked very well. I choked back the tears, dabbed my face with powder again, and waited. But when I saw Mrs. Collins and the other women, I realized how like a schoolgirl I must look. Such elaborate costumes, I never had seen. They were like the wonderful dancing frocks in my trunks. Too elaborate for a dinner, I thought.

"You are not dancing to-night?" Mrs. Collins asked, in oily tones, as we joined her.

"Dance—is there a dance?"

"Of course! You never have been to the casino, George tells me; you will be charmed. I adore it!"

Why had George not told me? Indignation flushed my cheeks, as I followed meekly behind them into the dining room. Could he have purposely allowed me to remain in ignorance? He was so proud, so impatient with me if I were not suitably dressed for each and every occasion, that I could not understand his not telling me about the dancing.

Helen Blames Mrs. Collins.

In some way I was sure Mrs. Collins was to blame. In just what way, I couldn't figure out. But in my own mind I was satisfied that it was so. I would not allow her to "crow over me," to use an old expression of David's.

"I shall, too, I am sure. You see I have been at home, always. All these things that are so familiar to you older women, are new to me. I too adore dancing, and if, when you are having your dessert, George,"—I turned to him—"I may be excused, I will be ready by the time you have finished. I forgot that you said we were to dance to-night."

The expression on George's face was so comical, I almost laughed. He knew as well as I did, that he had said nothing about dancing—and that I had simply said what I had, for a reason. He returned gravely:

"Certainly, Helen. But don't keep us waiting."

"Why do you change, Mrs. Howard? You look very—like a debutante."

"But I am not a debutante. I am a married woman," I answered, smiling, but furious. She had called George by his first name; I, of course, was "Mrs. Howard."

I caught a look of anger, as it swept over her face, gone in a moment. I had baffled her plan to have me make my first appearance at the casino in improper costume. It gave me the added courage I needed. So that, when the waiter took our salad plates, I did not wait for George to order anything more, but rose and, again excusing myself, I left them.

Monday—Dressed For the Dance.

June Air in January

The Sunshine Furnace by warming fresh air and charging it with the necessary exact degree of moisture, not only warms but ventilates your home with pure, soft, healthful air every moment of the day.

Above the fuel door of the Sunshine Furnace is a water pan designed with scientific exactness to vaporize into the warm air the precise quantity of moisture necessary to the health and comfort of your family.

In the Sunshine heated home there are no dry, hacking throats, no burning or wrinkling skins, no dust or gas—only pure, humid, balmy, healthful warm air.

Engineering Service Free McClary's own heating engineers are at your service when you buy a Sunshine Furnace, to give you free expert advice on your home-heating requirements. SOME STRANGE ANIMALS.

Record of Hunt on Snow Mountain In Asia.

Here is a story of big and little game. Its scene is laid a long, long way from Manhattan, nd it is told in full (this of course, is but a snatch) in Harper's by Roy Chapman Andrews, who was in charge of the Asiatic Zoological Expedition of the American Museum of Natural History, New York. Mr. Andrews writes:

"On the Snow Mountain we found serow living at altitudes of from ten to thirteen thousand feet in dense spruce forests among the cliffs. The animals seemed to be fond of sleeping under overhanging rocks, and we were continually finding beds which gave evidence of very extensive use. Apparently serow seldom come out into the open, but feed upon leaves and grass while in the thickest cover, so that getting a shot at one as I did at Huiyai is merely a matter of extreme good fortune and might never be duplicated.

"Besides goral and serow, the Snow Mountain yielded us the blue, or crested, muntjac, the rarest specimen which we obtained upon the entire expedition. These beautiful little deer have a dark, slate-blue coat and a rather bushy tail, white beneath, which, when the animal is running, is displayed as prominently as the 'flag' of the Virginia deer.

"The red muntjac is one of the most common animals throughout Kan-nan and is much less shy than the Indian or the other Chinese species. These animals are often called barking deer because of their loud, harsh bark, which may be heard for a long distance if the night is still. At one of our camps they used to bark very frequently during the day, but it is not easy to kill one without the aid of dogs or beaters, for they live in such dense jungle that it is almost impossible to force one's way through the thickets without a good deal of noise. In the early morning or just at evening we sometimes found them feeding in clearings on the edge of the heavy cover, but they always kept a sharp watch and disappeared at the slightest sign of danger. The muntjac is especially interesting because its antlers grow from a greatly elongated pedicle which is covered with skin and hair instead of rising abruptly from the skull as in other members of the deer family.

"On the Snow Mountain porcupines were not uncommon, and when hunting big game we often were greatly annoyed to find that our dogs had followed the trail of one of these animals. We would arrive to see the hounds dancing about the burrow with excited yelps, instead of having a goral or serow with its back to a cliff, as we had expected. These porcupines are quite different in appearance from those with which we are familiar in America, for the quills are sometimes eighteen inches in length and project far beyond the back.

"Our month on the Snow Mountain yielded splendid results. Not only did we secure an unrivalled series of serows and gorals, but the small mammals proved to be abundant and of great variety. Meadow voles, Asiatic white-footed mice, spiny rats, chipmunks, squirrels, weasels, bats and ten different species of shrews kept us busy preparing skins. Of the larger animals we obtained foxes, civets, cats, pandas, palm civets, flying squirrels, polecats, genets, pangolins, and other animals peculiar to Asia, some of which undoubtedly represent species new to science."

Localisms Enrich English.

We are led to the conclusion that the dispersion of those who speak English is not now a danger or even a disadvantage. We can see that there may even be advantage for standard English in that it can adopt, whenever it sees fit, the new words first tried out in one or another of its separate territories. These new words are at first only localisms, British or American or Australian. They may not survive for long; they may remain localisms doomed to perish sooner or later; or they may be adopted at last by the main body of those who speak English and who write it. "Cad" and "fad" were at first only localisms, struggling for existence and getting slowly into use sporadically in England, until at last they achieved a peaceful penetration into the Anglo-Saxon language; then they ceased to be mere Britishisms; they won recognition as useful words worthy of admission into standard English. A like fate has befallen "boss" and "boom," the first a localism of New York (descended from the days when the Empire City was New Amsterdam), and the second a spontaneous creation of the lumber camps of Michigan. In time these two words were in common use all over the United States; they were then merely Americanisms; and after a while they made their way into the British Empire, until now they did air to be lifted into standard English.

It's Long Up There.

Sent up by Italian scientists, a balloon carrying recording instruments reached an altitude of twenty-three miles and found the lowest temperature 70 below zero, twelve miles from the earth's surface.

"Engaged Man's Panic."

"Engaged man's panic" is as familiar a phenomenon as the squawking of a captured chicken or the flopping of a hooked fish. And woman instinctively anticipates it, feels it before it actually begins, deals with it according to her abilities. No woman ever feels that this is a slur upon her. She knows that it does not involve her, but is only the nervousness of the free at the touch of the matrimonial bridle—and that bridle, as she knows and as he knows, is not in her hands, but in the hands of society. Even the man marrying for a home, even the man marrying for children or for money, even the man marrying because only by marriage can he hope to get some one to associate with him, bear with him, listen to him on terms of his own arranging—even these men feel the nervousness as the bridle drops over their heads and the bit presses their quivering lips.—From "Hegmarton's Wife," by David Graham Phillips.

"Knotty" History.

Tying knots in a handkerchief to jog one's memory had its origin in China thousands of years ago. Before writing was invented in that country, which did not happen until 3000 B. C., memorable and important events were recorded by long knotted cords. The most ancient history of China is still preserved as told by these knots. When Emperor Tschang Ki invented writing the entire system of "knotting" was abandoned. And today the memory knots made by us in handkerchiefs are the only surviving descendants of that ancient custom.

SLUGGISH LIVER CAUSES LOTS OF TROUBLE

When the liver becomes sluggish it is an indication that the bowels are not working properly, and if they do not move regularly many complications are liable to set in.

Constipation, sick headache, bilious headache, jaundice, heartburn, water brash, catarrh of the stomach, etc., all come from a disordered liver.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are a specific for all disease or disorders arising from a slow, sluggish, lazy or torpid liver, and they have been universally used throughout Canada for over 20 years with the greatest success.

Mrs. W. A. Harrison, 7 Poplar Grove, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I take pleasure in writing you concerning the great good I have received by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for a sluggish liver. When my liver got bad I would have severe headaches, but after using a couple of vials of your pills, I have not been bothered any more."

Every Corn With Blue-jay Users Now Has a Two-Day Limit

In the Days of Lifetime Corns

Wrong Ways Which Millions Have Now Abandoned

THIS is why people kept corns in the old days, and why nearly everybody had them.

Most folks soaked and pared their corns—usually once a week. They never tried to end them. Many people then had corns half as old as they were.

To protect the corn—to stop the pain—they simply used a corn pad. Thus feet were always kept unsightly. And the corn stayed on.

Then someone found that a certain acid often loosened up a corn. A flood of "corn cures"—liquids and plasters—came out with that discovery. And hundreds yet remain.

They were both harsh and uncertain. And were rarely confined to the corn. They were spread on the healthy skin as well, and that often led to soreness.

People tried one, then another, but all were alike. So they finally became discouraged. Then they went back to paring and to pads.

In those days one or more corns deformed nearly every foot. A corn ache blighted nearly every occasion. Nearly every pretty foot had a pad on it. And paring was as common as the bath.

That is true of millions still. But other millions never suffer corns, and never will. Now let us tell you why.

The Right Way Which Half the World Now Uses

A FAMOUS chemist, after years of studying corns, evolved the Blue-jay method.

Bauer & Black, well-known makers of surgical dressings, make and market Blue-jay.

Now anyone can stop a corn ache in a jiffy, and end the corn completely in two days.

The method is scientific. It is gentle and yet certain. It centers itself on the corn.

Apply the Blue-jay and forget the corn. Leave it on two days. Then remove it and the corn will disappear.

Nine corns in ten will do that. One corn in ten needs another application.

Blue-jay has ended in this gentle way, some eighty million corns. It is now removing tens of thousands daily. Perhaps half the corns which develop are now being ended in this way.

Millions of people—users of blue-jay—keep entirely free from corns. Ask the folks about you. You will be amazed to know how few people now adays suffer corns.

Try Blue-jay on one corn tonight. Note the results. When it does to that corn it will do to all corns. Every new corn after that will have a two-day limit.

How to Become Rich.

"My early difficulties taught me some thrift," said Mark Twain once, "but I never knew whether it was wiser to spend my last cent for a cigar to smoke or for an apple to devour."

"I am astounded," observed a friend, "that a person with so little decision should have met with so much worldly success."

Mark Twain bent his head gravely.

"Indecision about spending money," he said, "is worthy of cultivation. When I couldn't decide what to buy with my last cent I kept it and so became rich."

Sometimes in the cheaper kinds of coffee these little dried balls are found with the two coffee grains snugly held inside.

THE MOTHER'S CHOICE.

One Five Minutes in the Life of Her Dead Soldier Son.

A mother lost her soldier son. The news came to her in dispatches from the war. He had fallen fighting nobly at the head of his regiment.

She was inconsolable. "Oh, that I might see him again!" she prayed. "If only for five minutes—but to see him!"

An angel answered her prayer. "For five minutes," the angel said.

"Quick, quick!" said the mother, her tears turned to momentary joy.

"Yes," said the angel, "but think a little. He was a grown man. There are thirty years to choose from. How would you see him?"

The mother paused and wondered.

"Would you see him," said the angel, "as a soldier dying heroically at his post? Would you see him as he left you to join the transport? Would you see him as you first saw him in his uniform? Would you see him again as on that day at school when he stepped to the platform to receive the highest honors a boy could have?"

"How did you know?" the mother asked, her eyes lighting.

The angel smiled. "Would you see him as a baby at your breast? Would you"—

"No," said the mother, "I would have him for five minutes as he was one day when he ran in from the garden to ask my forgiveness for being naughty. He was so small and so unhappy, and he was very hot, and the tears were making streaks down his face through the garden dirt. And he flew into my arms with such force that he hurt me."—G. V. Lucas in "Lucas' Annual."

WAR HORSES IN BATTLE.

Cavalry Mounts Revel in the Dash and Fury of the Charge.

It will probably surprise you, said a retired colonel of hussars, to learn that a cavalry horse usually enjoys a battle at least as much as his rider and displays as much courage in it. He will chafe and stamp with impatience while waiting for the order to charge and at the signal will dash forward like a greyhound released from the leash, full of fire and fury and often neighing wildly. At the moment of contact with the enemy he will rear, striking and biting savagely at the opposing horses and trampling down the infantry.

When his rider falls he will dash along with his fellows and crash as gallantly into the foe. In the famous charge of the Light brigade scores of riderless horses swept down the "valley of death," thundering through the smoke on to the Russian guns, and galloped back in safety with the shattered remnant of the brigade. Five horses raced neck and neck with Lord Alfred Paget, who rode in advance of the line, so eager were they to get at the enemy.

And not only is the well trained charger as brave as his rider. He is often as intelligent. He knows the bugle calls just as well and answers them as promptly. In fact, I have known many a case in which a horse has put his rider right when he has mistaken an order and has gone faultlessly through a maneuver in spite of the efforts of his mistaken master to make him do the wrong thing.—London Tit-Bits.

The Quality Goes Clear Through

Built for All Roads

Gray-Dort engineers think in terms of bad roads as well as good ones.

Stone, brick, dirt or concrete — smooth city street or rough rutty road — good going or bad going — they figure on them all.

For instance, take the matter of springs. The rear springs in the Gray-Dort are 50 inch full cantilever.

Or the starting and lighting —Westinghouse.

The motor designed by Etienne Planche, who built the Pugeot motor. Built by a corps of motor engineers who did one thing well—build Gray-Dort motors.

In every detail you will find care—the careful work of a man who joys in his task, hidden though it be. The men who make Gray-Dort drop forgings which you never see, take as much pride in the finished car as does the president of the company.

It is this spirit of manufacture that has made the Gray-Dort an honorable, a reliable car. It is the minute attention to detail, the stern demand for unequivocal quality that is winning Canadian motorists to it.

The new Gray-Dort embodies all the good features that won instant success for former models. The 4-cylinder motor is a triumph of smooth, economical speed and power. The chassis is sturdy and quiet. The springs are long. The upholstery is deep. The equipment is absolutely complete from electric starting and lighting to the tools. New lines of beauty have been given this model.

The five-passenger touring car is $1,195; the three-passenger fleur-de-lys roadster is $1,050; the Gray-Dort special, beautifully finished, and with extra details of equipment, is $125 above the list. All prices are f.o.b. Chatham.

FREMONT AND KIT CARSON.

Pen Pictures of the Pathfinder and the Famous Scout.

In "Kit Carson Days," by Edward L. Sabin, we get this glimpse of the personal appearance of Carson and Fremont when the two daring spirits first met:

"In June, 1842, came the fateful meeting of the trapper scout, already known throughout the west, and the Pathfinder whose great fame was still to come.

"The two men were opposites. Carson was Scotch-Irish, gray blue eyed, sandy complexioned (under his tan, light haired, rather flat featured, gritty, but so quiet and ordinary both in appearance and manner that few not knowing his name would bestow upon him more than a passing glance. Fremont was French, flashing blue eyes, olive white complexion, thick brown hair, features regular and oval, disposition sensitive, quick, eager and indomitable. Few would forget him.

"Fremont was a scholar of both American and continental accomplishments. At this time Carson could not read nor write even his own name, and his speech even in 1860 was of patois wherein mingled Mexican, Indian and many a frontier English 'thar,' 'fout,' 'massacreed,' 'pore,' etc. But he spoke in more languages than did Fremont himself, not only being fluent in English, French, Spanish and several Indian tongues, all acquired orally, but also being well conversant with the sign language of red man and of trail."

Of this meeting on the Missouri, out from St. Louis, came comradeship first and a friendship that never ceased. In California and in the Mexican struggle the staunchness of both men and their loyalty to the flag were well tested.

Tailor Made.

"My papa has a tailor made watch," said little Winifred proudly.

"Indeed!" exclaimed the visitor. "I never heard of a tailor made watch before."

"Well," explained the little miss, "he got it with a ten dollar suit of clothes, anyway."—Chicago News.

Agent—Well, I've seen a blast from a quarry throw stones twice that distance many a time.—Boston Transcript.

FEMININE BEAUTY.

Maturity Has a Charm Greater Than That of "Sweet Sixteen."

There is a beauty quite apart from youth—the beauty of the mature woman. Some there are who maintain that beauty does not reach the zenith under the age of thirty-five or forty. In a measure this is borne out by the events of the antique past, which may likewise be parallel with instances of our own day.

Helen of Troy appeared on the scene at the age of forty. Cleopatra was past thirty when she met Antony. Aspasia, married to Pericles when she was thirty-six, was a figure brilliant in her world for thirty years after. When Diane de Poitiers was past thirty-six she won the heart of Henry II., and he was but half her age.

Anne of Austria was thirty-eight when described as the most beautiful woman of Europe. Mlle. Mar was heralded as the greatest of beauties at forty-five, and Mme. Recamier was at her best between the ages of thirty-five and fifty. Mme. de Maintenon was forty-three when united to Louis, and Catherine of Russia was thirty-three when she took her seat on the throne which she occupied for thirty-five years.

All these women were world famed for their beauty and gave the lie direct to that toothless old saw that buzzes the power of "sweet sixteen." The dew of youth and complexion of roses, it must be admitted, sometimes combine in a face that is unmoving, irresponsive, utterly lacking in the expression which goes to the making of a perfectly modled visage.—Bohemian.

MAKING "HELLSTUFF."

Nitric Acid Is Very Important In Present War.

To feed the guns—that is a problem of greater and more emergent importance in these days than the feeding of people. No military Hoover ventures to suggest economy in this line.

The manufacture of gun food depends chiefly upon nitric acid, without plentiful supplies of which no nation nowadays could make war. It must be had to make explosives, for loading shells and for other purposes of destruction.

Common, innocent cotton treated with nitric acid becomes guncotton. Similarly dealt with, it furnishes the raw material for making smokeless powder. Harmless gelatin (derived from fat or sugar) when mixed with nitric acid is converted into that frightful explosive nitrogelatin. Toluene (from coal tar) is transformed by nitric acid into "T.N.T."

No wonder, then, that the nations now at war should be trying their utmost to find new ways for making nitric acid. It is simple stuff—a mere combination of nitrogen with oxygen. The air we breathe is four-fifths nitrogen and one-fifth oxygen, but to combine the two—there is the puzzle.

The flaming electric arc will do it. The Germans are getting the bulk of their nitric acid for war purposes by that means, using water power from the Bavarian Alps. The British are doing likewise in Norway. Both are using steam also. But the power required is enormous, and correspondingly expensive.

Almost anything when combined with nitric acid seems ready, so to speak, to get up on its hind legs and prepare to explode with violence. Ammonia acts just that way. When mixed with nitric acid it becomes a very powerful explosive, and sometimes this mixture is further mixed with "T.N.T.," to be melted and poured into shells.

Ammonia, in fact, is one of the principal materials required for the manufacture of high explosives. Which is why, just at present, the Bureau of Mines is trying its best to find new ways of making it. Producer gas will yield plenty of hydrogen, which is procurable also by other means familiar enough; and as for the nitrogen, it may be got in considerable quantities by passing air through burning coke in a coke oven.

Given enough nitrogen and enough hydrogen there will be plenty of ammonia out of which to make unlimited quantities of hellstuff for guns.

Life In the Open.

Men who ride to hounds learn much more than the technique of a sport. Observation, a quick eye, judgment and a number of other qualities are developed. From the bridge of a battleship I have seen a hunting landsman pick up torpedo boats at night before the lookout man saw them. If you can brown your skin nerves vanish. Sunbeams are good for old bones and young. Hot baths and constant shade multiply emotion and increase fads and flaccidity. Yet life in the open tends to become for town dwellers an expensive luxury for the few.—A. White's Essays.

Japan's Railroads.

Minister Baron Goto's project for the construction of 580 miles of connecting railways, chiefly on the main island of the empire, has been adopted by the Railway Council of Japan. A special appropriation of $46,000,000 was added to $67,500,000 previously appropriated. This will release, during the next ten years, $108,500,000 for building new lines. In addition to the $121,000,000, which the present roads have to their credit for improvements, the Council voted another special appropriation of $9,000,000 for widening tunnels in anticipation of the broader gauge. Premier Terauchi was present at the meeting of the Railway Council and made a brief address, dwelling upon the importance of better transportation facilities.—East and West.

GROWTH OF A HORROR

MANY INVENTIONS MADE TO IMPROVE WARFARE.

The Ancients Found Different Ways In Which to Injure Enemies, But the Most Terrible Methods of Causing Death and Suffering Have Been Invented by the Christian Nations.

THE first standing army was formed by Saul, 1093 B.C. The catapult was invented by Dionysius, 399 B.C.

The sword came from ancient Egypt and was used throughout Palestine, Syria and Asia Minor, India and throughout the western world. It was in Egypt that the three shapes of the sword blade originated, these being the straight, the curved and the half curved. As the shape became more settled, great attention was given to the adornment of the sword, especially the hilt, which was made of gold. A sword of the Pharaohs had a pommel surmounted by a hawk's head, symbolical of the sun, while studs of gold ornamented the handle. The Roman sword was larger than that of the Greeks, and in the days of the empire many of the sheaths were so covered with repausse work and incrusted with precious stones as to be veritable art treasures. Among the Moslems the highest title given to a warrior of renown is "the sword of Allah." The Chinese made swords of iron as early as 1879 B.C.

Bullets of stone were used in 1514, while bombs came into general us in 1634. Bomb vessels had their origin in France in 1681. Fireships first appeared in the early part of the sixteenth century.

The use of cannon dates back to the year 1338. Artillery constructed of brass first appeared in 1635. Among the curiosities of artillery old inventions have a great place. Cannon have been made of the most unlikely materials. Leather was used as early as Henry VIII.'s day, at the siege of Boulogne. These articles were stored in London Tower. Evelyn saw them there inscribed "Non Martie opus est cui non deficit Mecurius."

The Scotch used leather guns in 1640 to batter Lord Conway's fortification at Newbourne. In a tomb on the Island of Chinal, near Usumacinta, Mexico, was found a cannon four feet eleven inches long, with terra cotta bullets. It is suggested that when Cortez retired after his great fight at Ceuta, Tabasco, the natives copied the Spanish guns in clay, hoping to produce the same results. Artillery was first used in war by the Moors at Algeciras, Spain, in 1241. Cannon were first used by the English by direction of the Governor of Calais in 1383.

Iron bullets were first mentioned in the Foedera in 1550.

Letters of marque and reprisal were first granted in 1295. Muskets were first used in 1414, during the siege of Arras, while chain shot was a device of a Dutch admiral, De Witt, in 1666.

The bayonet was invented in Bayonne, France, about 1670.

Pistols were first employed by the British cavalry in 1544. The revolving-chambered breech of the pistol was patented by Colt in 1835.

Muskets supplanted the bow and arrow among the British soldiery in 1521. Spain was the first nation to equip foot soldiers with muskets.

Leaden bullets came into use shortly before the end of the sixteenth century.

The Minie rifle was invented about 1833 by M. Minie, of Vincennes.

The battering ram had its beginning with Artemones, 441 B.C., while the first army arranged in a regular line of battle was that of Palamedes of Argas.

Palamedes is credited with devising the idea of placing sentinels and pickets around a camp. The watchword as used by sentinels is supposed to have been his conception also.

The most famous cavalrymen of antiquity were the Parthians. Their invasion of Judea, 40 B.C., resulted in such terrible devastation of the country that 100 years later the terrors of the Parthian invasion gave the Apostle John the idea for one of his most vivid pictures.

The earliest sea fight took place between the Corinthians and the Corcyreans, in which the former conquered, 664 B.C.

The Venetians made the earliest use of artillery in sea fighting against the Genoese in 1377.

The first use made of fireships by the English was during the engagement with the Spanish Armada, in July, 1588.

Wildfire, sometimes called Greek fire, was an invention ascribed to Callinicus of Heliopolis. Gunpowder was known in China at a very early period. This mixture of saltpeter, charcoal and sulphur is well known all over the world. It was used in the twelfth century both by Christians and Moors in Spain. Roger Bacon first introduced it into England early in the thirteenth century, but its preparation was so imperfect that it was of very little use until a German monk, Berthold Schwartz, introduced a new method of manufacture in 1320. With the progress of science demands for new varieties in gunpowder have resulted in smokeless powder. It is a compound of guncotton and cellulose nitrate, the latter consisting of sawdust which has been soaked in sulphuric acid and nitric acids. Guncotton is attributed to the devisement of Prof. Schoenbein, of Basil, who made it known in 1846.

Dynamite, which takes its name from a Greek word meaning strength, is produced by mixing nitroglycerin with a kind of earth known under its foreign name of keiselguhr. It was first discovered by Ascagne Sobrero, in 1846. Twenty-one years later it was patented by Alfred Nobel.

The French navy, consisting of galleys is first mentioned in history, 723 A.D.

The man-of-war of the ancient Romans had a crew of 235 men, of which 174 were oarsmen, working on three decks. The speed of this was about six knots an hour in fair weather.

The original regiment of dragoons was organized in England in 1681. British historians assert that guns were used by their soldiers at Cressy in 1346.

Military uniforms were originally worn in France by order of Louis XIV., 1668. The French claimed that scarlet color was best fitted for uniforms, in that it is the most difficult color to hit.

Explosive bullets were first used in India for hunting tigers and lions. They were brought into Russia in 1863. In 1868 an international convention declared their employment in war to be inhuman and unnecessary.

The first breech-loading firearm used in this country was the Sharpe rifle.

The study of submarine boats, which has been carried on with great secrecy by the different nations, at present is attracting the attention of the world.

The first war, according to scriptural authority, was begun by a son of Cain, 3875 B.C.

Insects Destroy Timber.

Investigations made by the Bureau of Entomology have proved that insects cause the destruction of more timber of a size used commercially than do forest fires.

Mighty Good.

Some negroes are insatiable "joiners" and their favorite organizations are those which assure an ostentatious funeral.

A mistress was remonstrating with her servant about belonging to one of them.

"Bonnibel, don't you think it is mighty foolish to pay the 'Friends and True Mourners' society' 25 cents every month?"

"Now'm, Miss Ma'y, I don't. You see, dee ain't like some of de 'sjeties; dee acts liberal, and don't skimp an fixthin'. Dee gives you de finest kind of coffin, en makes a way for ev'body to git to your burial. En den, 'sides dat, dee gives you $30 at the grave, en you know $30 comes in mighty handy."—New York Post.

The Great Experiences.

It is impossible to overstate the singularity, the overwhelming sublimity of the great experiences of life. Death, love, birth, work, creative effort, pain—above all, pain—each adds something definite, precious, enduring, to one soul's stock of treasure. These are the things that shall not be taken away. They are the bricks we build into the house of life. They are the foundation stones of our eternal city.—Cornelia A. P. Comer in Atlantic Monthly.

The Ball, the Dance.

The word "ball" as applied to a dancing party, came to be used in the first instance from an ancient "ball play" given in church by the deon and choir boys of Naples during the Feast of Pasch at Easter. At subsequent dancing parties in Naples the dancers threw a ball at one another to the sound of their own singing. They whirled about in measured time, and the sport consisted in loosening hands in time to catch the ball.

TIME wasted on street cars and other ways by some men during the year would buy a Ford Car for them, figuring their time at its money value.

If a man earning $2400.00 loses one hour each day, his lost time for the year would be worth $300.00, or half enough to buy a Ford Car.

Whatever your time may be worth, a Ford will make it more valuable.

Perhaps you are a salesman or traveller. The horse is too slow—the street car doesn't always travel just where you want to go, and waiting for trains means hours at a time wasted.

With a car, you are hampered by nothing. You go and come just when you are ready, and travel just where you please. Every city street, every country road is a road for the Ford.

Sit down and figure up what a Ford would save you in time and money, and even without considering the added comfort and convenience in your daily life, we believe you will be convinced that you should get your Ford without further delay.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

"Finding Himself"

By WARREN DALE

"Whatever has come over you, Lillian?"

Lillian Warde, lost in meditation, looked up with a slight start and a conscious flush on her charming face.

"You will have to explain, Netta dear," she said smilingly.

"Why are you so different this visit from last year? Then you were all animation and sunshine. Now, except when some girl tries to outdo you and you are your old daring, reckless self, you are either off alone sketching, or mooning."

"The exaggeration is far-fetched," declared Lillian. "However, I am going to make a confession. It is camouflage."

"Camou—?"

"Camou-flage. I am hiding behind a mask and repenting of my sins. Truth is, Netta, I fear I thought more of a certain individual back home than I fancied. This is for you only. Mr. Roland Barnes, young, inexperienced shy, but oh, such a perfect gentleman! I encouraged him and his state of perfect bliss was a study. Then one day in the garden, my cousin Roy coming home greeted me with the usual kiss of relationship. I saw Mr. Barnes in the distance. Wicked me! Some spirit of cruel mischief influenced me to gush over Roy. Mr. Barnes did not know that he was a relative. He at once jumped to the conclusion that Roy was a lover and—disappeared."

"Disappeared?"

"Actually and absolutely."

"And now?"

"I am sorry I did it," said Lillian in a subdued tone.

For several years Lillian and other girl friends of Netta Lee had come to Silver Lake to enjoy a month's vacation.

"Wake up, Lillian!" rallied May Wolfe the day ensuing. "There's a mystery afloat; at least a rare novelty. They say a genuine, dyed-in-the-wool old hermit, long, white hair, Robinson Crusoe cap, tottering staff and all that, has taken possession of the old deserted hut on Bear Island."

"How picturesque!" commented Lillian. "I would like to sketch this new character on the scene."

"You won't dare to," defied May. "They say he is furtive, quite wild, maybe a woman hater."

"You dare me, do you?" said Lillian, some of the old fire of adventure and daring in her eye.

"Call it a dare," retorted May. "What then?"

"Why," replied Lillian, "I will not only hunt down this romantic nomad of the lake, but I will bring back a faithful sketch of him."

"Suppose he should meditate carrying one of us off like a knight of old to his baronial hall!" suggested May.

"Baronial nonsense!" cried Lillian.

"Where's Lillian?" inquired Netta the next morning.

"I saw her put off down the lake in the canoe with her sketching outfit," said May.

Lillian had, indeed, taken the "dare." She reached Bear Island, and resolutely and unafraid made her way through the brambly bushes towards the old dismantled hut that had been a familiar landmark for years. Its door stood open, Lillian peered in. There were signs of recent occupancy, but no one was just now in sight. Lillian looked around curiously. She was surprised to observe a white wig and a great pair of whiskers, a long coat and the conventional hermit hat on a table.

"Our hermit is a sham," decided Lillian. "Oh, my!"

She might well start and thrill. Set over the rude fireplace was a card photograph of herself. Lillian retreated, fluttering over a tangible mystery. She passed through the doorway to come face to face with—the hermit!

He was bringing in some wood. At the sight of Lillian down went the armful in a blundering way, and there stared up at the unexpected Lillian—Roland Barnes! It was almost comical, only Roland looked so distressed. Lillian figured out the complication readily. She adopted her most soothing and charming smile.

"So you are the mysterious hermit?" she said.

"I—I—yes, that is—"

"And why did you leave us all so strangely that day at Brighton when my cousin came?"

"Your cousin?" wildly shouted Roland—with hope.

"And why did you come here?" asked Lillian.

"To feast my eyes on a sight of—why, you, of course—before I went away."

"Are you going away now?"

"Not—not if you say not. You don't say not, though, do you?" concluded Roland dismally.

"I do, and I hope you will abandon your foolish role and help my friends enjoy themselves for a week or two."

"A week or two!" gasped Roland in quivering delight.

"Yes," nodded Lillian, at the end of that delightful, never-to-be-forgotten vacation, "I will marry you next June—provided."

"Yes, yes!" murmured Roland rapturously.

"Provided we make a honeymoon visit to the hermit island, where you found yourself."

Gestures Part of Talk.

There is a man who from a very early age has lived in countries where Spanish is the almost universal tongue. From force of this training he speaks Spanish perfectly. He has not the slightest trace of an English accent, and persons who do not know that he is of American parentage are willing to believe he is a Spaniard merely from hearing him talk. He is so perfectly bilingual that it shows even in his gestures. When talking with English speaking persons he sits quietly and does his conversing with his mouth alone. Only in case of making a point most emphatically does he use a gesture. But the moment he drops into Spanish his every word is accompanied by a movement of the hands or arms. It is interesting to watch the change from the English to the Spanish side of him, because it comes so suddenly. He really can't speak Spanish without gesturing.—New York Sun.

A Means of Approach.

Though I am not a smoker I like to carry matches in my pocket. One is always liable to be accosted on the street by some one in need of a light. To be able to give a match is a great luxury. It forms the basis for a momentary friendship.—Atlantic.

That Feminine Minute.

"Sit down and let's have a good talk. I have a free hour."

"Aren't you going out with your wife?"

"Yes, but she just called down she'd be ready in a minute."—Baltimore American.

QUEER JOURNALISTIC FEAT.

It Hit the London Times and Boomed the Manchester Guardian.

Once there was an obscure subeditor of the Manchester Guardian in England. It was a long time ago, and the Guardian was scarcely known outside of its own city.

The subeditor had a habit of drinking ale until he was so drowsy that he could not lift his head from his desk. On one occasion the composing room was yelling for "copy," as the editorial page was absolutely vacant.

The subeditor had been asleep on his desk for hours and his pen had been idle. The foreman of the composing room finally succeeded in arousing the man and yelled in his ear that something must be done for copy.

Whereupon the sleepy one grabbed a pair of shears and clipped one whole column from the editorial page of the London Times. At the top he wrote in a crabbed hand:

"What does the London Times mean by the following?"

It was printed, column and all. That single quizzical introduction made the Manchester Guardian famous. People began to ask what the Times did mean by the editorial, which was on a rather revolutionary subject. The subeditor slept for several hours, but John E. Wilkie says his paper's greatness began from that moment.—Washington Star.

Deaf Mute Church Work.

Religious work among deaf mutes was established in 18[illegible] Dr. Gallaudet, who started a small [illegible] class for them in a room in the University of New York. The Churchman, an Episcopal weekly, says that at the present time there are thirteen ordained clergymen, twelve of whom are themselves deaf, ministering to the spiritual needs of 35,000 deaf mutes in the United States of whom there are only 20,000 in the southern section. The salaries of the missionaries to the deaf range from $1,000 to $1,800 annually, and a very few of them have their expenses, in addition, provided.

FREE TO BOYS AND GIRLS

Can You Solve This Great War Puzzle?

This Lovely Pony or $100.00 Cash

Four Things That Will Win The War

WHAT ARE THEY?

THE 16 Circles above can be made to spell out the names of the four chief things that are going to win the war. Our bright loyal Canadian boys and girls can help provide at least one of these things. Every boy and girl should know all of them. Can you tell what words the four magic circles represent?

How to solve it.—Each circle represents a letter of the word called for. The number of dots in the circle represents the position of that letter in the alphabet. For instance: "A" would be represented by a circle with one dot because it is the first letter of the alphabet. "B" would be represented by a circle with two dots because it is the second letter. "C" would be represented by three dots, "D" by four dots and so on. You must correctly count the dots in each circle, figure out the letter represented by its position in the alphabet and when you have them all figured out put them into proper rotation to spell the name wanted. It's not an easy puzzle but if you can solve it correctly you may win this lovely shetland pony or one of the grand Cash prizes above.

The Fertilizing Rain.

Probably few students of agriculture realize the fertilizing qualities of tropical rains. In the Annales de Geographie M. Guillaume Capus, who has chemically studied the effects of rainy weather in French Indo-China, says that lightning produces large amounts of nitric acid. In the thirteen districts of the Tonkin delta of Indo-China, where thunderstorms are frequent, M. Capus asserts that the lightning annually produces an amount of atmospheric nitrogen equivalent to 181,300 tons of nitrate of soda or 131,510 tons of sulphate of ammonia, the value of which is nearly enough to "Good-Bye" in German.

Placards are now said to be hung in all German railway stations admonishing passengers to say "good-bye" in German, and not in any enemy language. "Adieu," being French, is strictly taboo, and, of course, the English, "Bye, old chap," and the American "See you later" are equally objectionable to Teutonic ears. So in making their farewells in railway stations the Germans are advised by placard to take their choice of these forms:

Gott beschutze Dich,
Gott segne Dich,
Auf wiedersehen,
Auf baldigeswiedersehen,
Auf sehrbaldigeswiedersehen,
Auf ein Rechtherzigesfroneshuldigeswiedersehen.

And as Germans are fond of the more ponderous verbal forms, nine out of every ten undoubtedly follow the last prescription. So now we can understand a little better why all the trains in Germany are running behind time these days. — Pittsburgh Journal.

China's Condition.

A writer in the Asia Jiron (Asiatic Review), handles the Chinese question — almost the sole topic of discussion throughout Nippon—in a radically resolute manner. He says, "There is no hope for poor old China unless a rescuer is born." The article is quite long, but the writer is evidently an extensive traveler in China, for he says the Japanese have no conception at present of the sense of vastness that will overcome them when (as he appears to assume they will) the Japanese attempt the pacification of that country. Especially does he speak of the mighty Yangtze, "so broad that one wonders if it belongs to the family of rivers." "Everything in China will inspire equal wonder and amazement," he says. He adds that the failure of Mr. Li as President was no surprise. "We cannot understand Mr. Li; nor can Mr. Li understand himself. His is quite the Chinese character."

China, like Gaul, is divided in three parts—South, North and Mongolia. They have different languages and manners, but the same feeling of vastness pervades all China. The writer describes official life in a manner very suggestive of Francisque Sarcy's famous satire. In all the four hundred millions of Chinese very few are patriotic. Occasionally one patriot appears, but the great majority of officials are calculating persons who never forget their own interests. In short, the Chinese don't care what becomes of the world as long as they remain unharmed. There are a few insatiable cravers after high government positions. When in power they enrich themselves, and when sufficiently stuffed they are on watch for opportunity to "retire." They say: "Give to me the moon to gaze upon, flowers to admire, rather than pump of power or worldly praise." And the self-styled Genro betakes himself to a picturesque country place with a galaxy of beautiful women and leaves the world to go to the dogs. If he ever "comes back," the patriotic action is called "emergence from the hearth"—most accurate description, "for his act is that of a fire thief."

An account of Chinese battles is sarcastically humorous. Both sides claim victory for "the heavenly army." The press bureau is conducted on most approved modern methods. In conclusion, Ranryo-o Soun sees no hope for peace in China until a strong man appears, who, as monarch or president, can unite north and south and stop dishonesty in administration.—East and West News.

Wonderful Open Air Theater In the Heart of the Alps.

What is probably the most perfect pastoral theater in Europe is situated in the heart of the Alps—at Interlaken, in Switzerland. This unique "playhouse" is open to all the winds that blow, and its roof is formed—in the most favorable circumstances—by the blue canopy of the sky. It is not always thus, however, and it has not infrequently happened that the hue of the canopy has been less inviting and that players and spectators alike have experienced the interlude of a heavy downpour which was not in the program.

The open air theater at Interlaken is used for performances of Schiller's great drama, "William Tell," for which it is by nature admirably adapted. The stage is a rising meadow framed on three sides by dense woods of beech and pine, with a "backcloth" of grim, gray rock towering toward the sky beyond. Away to the right stretches a huge semicircle of mountain peaks, 9,000 and 10,000 feet high, and behind the spectator tower the great peaks of the Bernese Oberland—the Jungfrau, Monch and Eiger, with their burden of eternal snows.

Nature in accommodating mood has provided the entrances and exits of this unique theater—passages in the woods through which gallop with thundering of hoofs on hard ground the mail clad troopers of the tyrannical governor. The cattle, goats and sheep which appear in the first scene—the return of the flocks and herds from the Alpine pastures—approach down the steep path in the woods on the right and are heard long before they are visible, the tinkling and clanging of their bells mingling harmoniously with the long drawn notes of the huge wooden Alpine horn, seven feet in length, and forming an appropriate overture.—Wide World Magazine.

TWO POINTS OF VIEW.

Who Had the Happier Lot, the Lady or the Laborer?

A Fashionable Woman, coming from the Opera in the rosy nest of a Limousine, passed a group of Laborers at midnight. Machines, like terrible Animals, were burrowing into the Earth. Steam was hissing as if from the mouths of a million Serpents. Rocks flew in every direction. Torchlights flamed. There was the thunder of Labor. The Night Shift was in full swing.

And the Woman, glancing from the window at a certain Workman, for an instant thought:

"How I wish I had that brawny Laborer's strength and Joy of Life! How I envy him his Power, his physical perfection, the wonder of his Manhood, his freedom from the Shackles that bind me. He is his own master, while I am a slave—the slave of a Man I despise!"

At that moment the Laborer passed long enough by the deep Chasm where his Engine rocked to glance into the Motor as it sped by him. And he thought:

"Oh, to be like her! To know Leisure and Wealth and Rest! To be free from Drudgery and Toil, to come and go as I pleased! To throw off the chains of Debt and Worry and have the days and nights stretch ahead of me like a Field of Flowers!"

But in another instant the Motor was gone. The Torchlights flared brighter than ever. And each had forgotten the other. — Charles Hanson Towne, in Judge.

Old Folks' Coughs Permanently Cured

The Public is Loud in Its Praise of the Modern Direct Breathing Cure.

Elderly people take cold easily. Unlike young folks they recover slowly, if ever. That is why so many people past middle life die of pneumonia. Even though penumonia does not develop and kill, coughs certainly weaken all elderly people.

Cough Syrups seldom do much good because they upset digestion. Any druggist or doctor knows that a much more effective treatment is "CATARRHOZONE," which heals and soothes the irritated surfaces of the throat.

In using Catarrhozone you do not take medicine into the stomach—you simply breathe into the throat, nose and lungs rich piney balsamic vapor, so full of healing power that colds, catarrh and bronchitis disappear almost instantly.

"At sixty-eight years of age I can testify that I am never troubled with coughs or colds," writes J. E. Pilgrim, of Kingston. "They used to be the bain of my life, and that was before I used Catarrhozone, which was recommended to me by C. L. Prouse, druggist. To use Catarrhozone is just like being in an immense pine woods. The balsamic vapor of Catarrhozone is like a tonic, it is so stimulating to the breathing organs, so soothing to sore spots, so full of power to drive out colds and congestion. I will always use and recommend Catarrhozone as a preventive and cure for coughs, colds, bronchitis, throat irritation and catarrh.

Home in Halifax roofed with Brantford Asphalt Slates

A handsome roof that defies the weather

An added touch of beauty to any house is a roof of Brantford Asphalt Slates, which are in soft, harmonious shades of reddish brown and dark green. The colors are permanent and unfadeable, being the natural shades of the slate just as it is taken out of the quarries.

It will also prove a very economical roof, because Brantford Asphalt Slates do not split, get loose, absorb water or rot. They are strongly fire-resistant and are classified as non-combustible by the fire insurance companies, and allowed to be used in cities where the most rigid fire-prevention By-laws are in force.

Brantford Asphalt Slates are very moderate in cost. The regular size of the slates and their pliability make them easily and quickly laid, thus saving time and cost of labor. Being made of high grade felt saturated and coated with asphalt, and with a surface of crushed slate, they make a roof that defies the elements and is a permanent part of the building, just like the walls and the foundation.

Brantford Asphalt Slates

are being used more extensively every year for city, country and summer homes, churches, golf clubs, stores, garages, and wherever an artistic effect is desired on a pitch roof.

If you are going to do any building this year or have an old roof that needs replacing, it will be to your advantage to investigate Brantford Asphalt Slates.

China Is Threatened.

"The looming shadow of the German menace over the East through Siberia makes the Chinese situation more ominous to the interest of this country. Against the march of the German influence the first line of protection must be built along northern China." This is the way the editor of the Tokio Nichi-Nichi sees the situation of the German menace through Siberia: "The first thing to be done for the protection of the peace of the Orient is a speedy conciliation between the northern and the southern factions of China. This is not impossible if we can only let the Chinese people see their own impending danger from the German menace. Probably the present situation will serve as a valuable occasion for the unification of China. Her statesmen are beginning to wake up to the imminent situation confronting them. The second important thing is co-operation between China and Japan. However sentimentally opposed some Chinese are to this country, they must see that after all Japan is their best friend and helper.

"According to the recent reports from Pekin," continues the editor, "there seems to be a growing spirit of co-operation and sincere understanding between President Feng Kuo-chang and Tuan Chi-jui. We hope this is true, but whether true or not, it is up to Japan to let them see that they can't go on quarreling and fighting against each other in the face of the impending national calamity that Germany is sure to inflict upon China if she remains in the present chaotic state."

German Public Opinion.

Every appeal to the German people over the heads of its leaders, every attempt to impress it with the good faith and disinterestedness of its opponent in this war, every assurance that we are fighting, not for the extermination of the German people, but for their right to develop their great virtues and manifest genius in the humane forms insured alone under the influence of free institutions, pre-supposes in Germany the existence of at least a kernel of the sort of thought which we describe by the phrase "public opinion." But no one who has been long and intimately familiar with the inside of German institutions, with the ways of thinking in typical German circles, whether Liberal or Conservative so-called, with the whole political atmosphere breathed by radical or reactionary within the borders of the German empire, can hesitate to say that there never has been in Germany any such things as public opinion.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat less meat also take glass of Salts before eating breakfast

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad. Eat less meat, drink lots of water also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithea-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

AMERICAN HEROISM

Uncle Sam's Men Played a Spectacular Role in the Fighting of the Past Few Days

REPORTS OF FIGHTING

(United Press Service.)
(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES ON THE MARNE, June 8.— The Allied attack in the region of Neuilly La Potorie, in which American marines played so spectacular a role, was for the purpose of reducing a sharp salient the Germans had driven into our line south of the Clignon River.

The combined French and American line has been advanced until it now includes Vinly, north of the Clignon River, Neuilly La Potorie, the heights south-east of Hautevesnes (two miles north-east of Vinly), Torcy and Belleau.

American Heroism.

Reports of the fighting received at French Headquarters in this region are replete with feats of American heroism. One American lieutenant, after leaping from his lines, killed an entire German machine gun crew and brought back the gun. An American ambulance driver, after attending wounded in the open until heavy fire forced him to seek shelter, brought back four wounded men with him.

HALIFAX PLAY GROUNDS.

The Halifax Chronicle, in a report of a meeting of the Playground Commission, says it has decided to equip as far as possible four playgrounds, and is negotiating for a first-class supervisor. The report adds:

"The commission feel in common with Playground Associations of the United States, Canada and England, that the universal medical examination of the young men of the Allies, has demonstrated the necessity for a greater physical development of both sexes of the youth, which, accomplished as a pleasure and a pastime, will produce a more virile manhood and womanhood for the future, affording the children of this city advantages now obtained only for college students. Proper supervision, also develops the Anglo Saxon ideals of fair play and democracy, as well as protects the average from the detestable bully and sneak."

THE SITUATION WAS CRITICAL WHEN AMERICANS ARRIVED AND BLOCKED THE ROAD TO PARIS

The French Reported A Gap of Two and a Half Miles In One Part of the Line—A Midnight March.

SAVED THE DAY

(United Press Service.)
(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICANS ON THE MARNE, June 8. — American troops, co-operated with the French yesterday morning holding all gains of the previous day's fighting on a ten-mile front northwest of Chateau Thierry.

There is a temporary lull as this is cabled, but the battle threatens to break out anew at any moment.

The Americans and French now hold a line extending from northwest of Vinly, through Bussiares and Bellau to southeast of Bouresches. This represents an advance ranging from less than a mile at some points to nearly three miles at other points.

Another Chapter.

The American's advance adds another chapter to the accomplishment of our troops, which are playing the role of General Gallieni's famous "taxicab army" in this second battle of the Marne.

The official report of the commanding general reveals the fact that the feat is fully as impressive as first reported.

Receiving orders to move from the region of Gisors at five p.m. on May 30, they departed by rail and motor trucks. At 5:30 a.m. the next day the first of them had arrived in the rear lines.

Gisors is an important railway junction 35 miles north of Paris and 75 miles west of Chateau Thierry, in an air line. The journey by rail and highway probably was more than a hundred miles.

A Critical Situation.

Late that afternoon the situation was critical. The French urged that the Americans be sent into the line immediately, as the enemy was marching along the road to Paris. Our men went into the line at midnight, taking up positions at Chateau Thierry. At 9 a.m. on June 1, a thousand Americans were barring the road. Every man carried two-days' rations and ammunition.

On the night of June 1, the French reported a gap of four kilometres (two and a half miles), in the line near Gandela (ten miles west and north of Chateau Thierry, and a mile northwest of Neuilly La Potorie).

An attack was expected any moment.

A regiment of American machine gunners and engineers were aroused from their sleep and filled the gap.

Then came an urgent call for artillery ammunition. A truck train made a 45-mile trip and return with ammunition in 13 hours, bringing in 32 truck loads.

On June 4 and 5 came the German attacks, previously reported. On the fifth, all artillery was in position and firing on the enemy.

Inflicted Heavy Losses.

Following the repulse of attacks, the Americans delivered their own offensives on the sixth and seventh, taking numerous prisoners and considerable territory, and inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

The General's report concluded with the statement that, considering the movement involved, the repulse of three attacks and the successful conclusion of two counter attacks, all within six days, "the men conformed to the best traditions of the army and are meeting all demands made."

Six Horses Are Carded For To-day

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, June 8.—While only six horses are carded for the running in the Classic suburban handicap one mile and a quarter, over Belmont Park race track to-day, the contest promises to be as interesting as any previous struggle for the honours in this big event which was first run in 1884 on the old Sheep-shed Bay race course. Chief interest centres in the meeting of Commander J. K. L. Ross' Canadian horse, "Cudgel," and James Buttler's "Spur." Two weeks ago "Spur" carrying 122 pounds beat "Canadian Colt" which had 138 pounds up, at Jamaica track. "Cudgel" is the fastest as she cleverly won the Kentucky Handicap at this distance at Louisville last Saturday. The other four, "Hollister," "Johren," "Hendrie," and "Battle," are favoured in the order named as the betting choices.

Good Metal In British Hearts

'British Have Made Unsurpassed Sacrifices" Said Premier Lloyd George Last Evening

"HAMMER BLOWS"

Canadian Press:

LONDON, June 8.—Premier David Lloyd George, in replying to a toast to the success of the Entente Allied arms at the dinner of the Printers' Society of London last night, said that Britishers have made unsurpassed sacrifices for a great purpose and a high ideal. One of the most encouraging things, the Premier continued, was the "superb valor and trained skill with which the Americans have taken their part in the struggle and defeated the foe." In conclusion, Premier Lloyd George said: "We have faced a great crisis. We have heard Von Ludendorff's threat of hammer bows. Hammer blows would crush poor metal, but they harden and consolidate good metal. There is good metal in British hearts, and it has stood the test of centuries. It will stand this. So will that gallant people across the Channel, who are fighting for the honour of their native France."

GANANOQUE, Ont., June 8.—E. J. Ryan, Chief of Police of this town for over thirty years, was found dead in bed this morning at his home. His widow, two sons, Harold in Toronto, Russel at the front, and one daughter, Myrtle, married, and residing in England since the outbreak of the war, survive.

It is anticipated that every member of the City Council will enroll.

The citizens will be supplied with revolvers, and will be secretly instructed as to what they are to do in the event of an attack from the enemy.

WILL SIGN A PLEDGE

Important Meeting Will Be Held in Ireland To-morrow ---Conscription Will Be Opposed

FESTIVAL DAY

DUBLIN, June 8.—(United Press Service) — Women throughout Ireland will sign a solemn pledge against conscription tomorrow, the Festival day of Saint Columbeille. Many churches will be utilized as gathering places. Afterward there will be floral processions. Irish leaders have appealed to the people to observe this as a national prayer day, "for deliverance of Ireland from her perils."

THE PLEDGE

The pledge to be signed by the women, reads: — "Because enforcement of conscription without consent is tyranny; Resolved that we will resist; that we will not fill the place of men deprived of work through refusing enforced military service and that we will do all in our power to the families of men suffering through resistence".

The demonstration will be peculiarly significant because war prophsies, including conscription are attributed to Saint Columbeille.

"Will Carry The Fight Into Africa"

This Is the Spirit of the Farmers —Dismiss the Government

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, June 8.—Among some other unique proposals of the United Farmers of Ontario yesterday for dealing drastically with the "duly constituted authority" at Ottawa in order to bring the Government of the day into line with the farmers, was a suggestion by Joseph Nago, of Perth, to call upon the Governor-General to exercise his prerogative and act upon the precedent set in 1874, when the Government of the day was dismissed. "We don't want to have anything more to do with this Government, which does not represent the people of this country," he said. In the words of the M.P. for Durham, J. C. Thornton, the spirit of the meeting was, "Accept the gauntlet and carry the fight into Africa."

Band Makes Fine Showing

Although the weather conditions were far from favourable, the opening band concert of the season by the 57th Band, under the direction of Lieut. R. Gliddon in Victoria Park last night, was a very successful event. The chilly half gale that swept through the park was uncomfortable, both for audience and musicians, but in spite of the handicap the band gave a fine account of itself in its first appearance in park concerts since the season before last. The result of steady practice during the past few weeks was demonstrated by the manner in which Lieut. Gliddon's organization handled a varied and exacting programme. Their offering included several snappy marches, an overture that was most effectively played; the popular selections "By Heck" and "The Mason-Dixon Line," and gems from "The Bohemian Girl" and "The Viceroy." The band made a most excellent showing, and the manner in which the programme was presented augurs well for a most enjoyable series of concerts during the next three months. The band is well balanced and apparently strong in all sections. Mr. Douglas Carlisle added greatly to the pleasure of the evening by his spirited singing of the stirring march song, "Sussex by the Sea," with band accompaniment.

EIGHT RESOLUTIONS WERE PASSED AT MEETING OF UNITED FARMERS HELD YESTERDAY IN TORONTO

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, June 8.—Scorching denunciation of the action of the Union Government in the enforcement of the Military Service Act to the extent of drafting young men from the farms, the condemnation of Toronto papers on the one hand, and on the other the declaration of absolute necessity for proper organization of the farmers of Ontario, and the establishments of a farmers daily or weekly newspaper, were a few of the outstanding features discussed at a mass meeting yesterday in Massey Hall of 2,500 farmers, including members of the United Farmers' Association of Ontario, under whose auspices the meeting was conducted. Eight resolutions were passed, chief of which was one calling upon the Government to amend the Military Service Act, and asking that all owners or practical managers of farms be exempted to carry on their work, and that in cases where they have already been drafted they be granted extended leave of absence for this purpose that skilled agricultural labour be exempted to supply one skilled man for each one hundred acres or major part thereof in general farming districts and a similar requisite number in districts devoted to special production. That the Governor-General should be called upon to dissolve the present Parliament was demanded by several speakers.

GERMANS THIRD OFFENSIVE IS AGAIN AT A STANDSTILL

When and Where He Will Begin His Fourth Is the Next Question —Heavy Fighting Ahead.

OFFICIAL REPORT

(By William Philip Simms—United Press).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, June 8.—Hindenburg's third offensive is at a standstill. When and where he will begin his fourth is the question occupying the Allied commanders.

German prisoners all reflect the general opinion on the enemy side of the line that for Germany it is a question of "do or die." Nobody can listen to their talk without realizing the utter folly of considering that the great offensive has spent itself.

Despite the colossal number of troops so far flung against the Allies, the most desperate blows are ahead.

Men Engaged.

In 1917, the Kaiser had on the Western front 128 German divisions (1,538,000 men), and in Russia, the Balkans, and Roumania 77 divisions (824,000 men). Since March 21 Hindenburg has actually used against the Allies between 160 and 170 divisions (1,920,000 to 2,040,000 men), or over 35 more than he had holding the entire front at this time in 1917.

There are now between the North Sea and Switzerland more than 200 divisions (2,400,000 men), and it is estimated that there are slightly under 35 divisions (420,000 men) still on the Eastern front.

This shows that Hindenburg somehow has increased the number of his divisions by nearly 40 (480,000 men). He did this in two ways. First, by recruiting new classes of younger men and by a general combing out of other classes; and, second, by reducing somewhat the size of his divisions and bringing half way good divisions from the Eastern front.

There are now about eighty divisions (960,000 men) more on the Western front than a year ago. Perhaps nearly a score of the divisions facing the Allies may be rated as poor fighters, but they are capable of holding quiet sectors, while the better troops continue the offensive.

Large Reserve Force.

Although Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey may not send troops to this front, there is no doubt that certain of these countries are lending men to Germany for maintaining lines of communication in the interior, thus freeing German troops for service in France.

Hindenburg still has a colossal reserve force, but only a few absolutely fresh divisions are now in reserves, and have not participated in the three offensives. It is calculated that nearly twenty divisions (240,000 men) must all the whole have been in quiet sectors. More than twenty divisions have not been in the fight for some weeks, and doubtless are undergoing refitting and special training, making a total of perhaps fifty fairly fresh divisions (600,000 men) available, in addition to those already on the battlefields.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, June 8. — British troops took prisoners and inflicted casualties in raiding and patrol actions along the northern part of the front last night, the War Office announces to-day. The statement reads:

"We captured prisoners last night in a successful raid in the neighbourhood of Hulluch. Our patrols inflicted casualties on the enemy in the Stazeele sector and captured a machine gun. The hostile artillery has been active north of Albert and south of Arras.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, June 8.—New progress was made by the French last night in the region between the Marne and the Ourcq, north-west of Chateau Thierry, the War Office announced to-day. In this sector French troops have pushed their way through Chezt to its eastern outskirts, and have reached the western edge of Dammard village.

ANXIOUS TO SEE THE GEORGIAN BAY END COMPLETED.

Mayor Duncan has received the following letter from the Minister of Railways and Canals:

Office of the Minister of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, June 7th, 1918.

Dear Mr. Duncan,—I returned home to-day after my trip through the Trent Valley Canal.

I can assure you the further west I went I found the same results as obtained between Trenton and Peterborough, splendid water powers and waterway. You are all to be congratulated now that the waterway is in working order from Lake Ontario west. I shall always feel that the work has not been completed until it is through to the Georgian Bay.

I wish to thank you, the Council and the good citizens of Peterborough for the kindness shown me, and those accompanying me, on my visit to Peterborough, while on my way through the Trent Canal. With kindest regards,

Yours very truly,
(Sgd.) J. D. REID.

A Chance For An Explanation

Allies Have An Opportunity to Inaugurate a Diplomatic Offensive

CONCRETE TERMS

Canadian Press:

LONDON June 8. — The Entente Allies have given an opportunity for a combined diplomatic offensive with a view to explaining to Russia and the Austrian Slavs what Allied victory will mean for them, is the opinion of the Daily Express. The newspaper calls upon the Allies to translate vague references to self determination, into concrete terms and to let their pronouncement appear above the signatures of the United States as well as European Allies.

BOMBARD THE CAPITAL

Another Drive Might Bring the Germans Within Artillery Range of Paris

MUST REMAIN FIRM

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, June 8.—In an article in the Matin dealing with the recent appointment to the Paris Committe of Defense of Fred Burnetee, a Socialists, says by another drive made without regard to sacrifices, the Germans if they did not enter Paris, perhaps could approach near enough to hold the capital under fire of long range guns, not as now as a intermittent bombardment, but for methodical permanent fire. Such conditions, would render industrial life impossible and government's will to resist, must not be influenced by the fear of sacrifices of no-combatants or by fear of the consequences which the cessation of the output of munitions factories surrounding the capital would entail.

First Recital Was A Success

Capacity House in Trinity Sunday School Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. King organist and soloist of Trinity church, had a capacity house at the first recital given by their pupils in Trinity Sunday school hall last evening.

A choice and varied programme, consisting of piano solos, piano duets, vocal solos and duets was presented to an intelligent, interested and enthusiastic audience. Space will not permit a detailed account of each number. Suffice to say that each embryo artist showed latent talent and a marked technique under the skilful tuition of Mr. and Mrs. King.

Mr. and Mrs. King have been in Peterborough less than a year, but in that short time have become very popular in the city and have gathered around them a large class of pupils. The music-loving people of Peterborough and the vicinity recognize in both Mr. and Mrs. King artists of exceptional merit.

Church Service

The members of Court Chemong, 530, I.O.F., and Sherwood Forest Camp, 50, W.O.W., also any visiting members, are invited to attend the united service to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday evening, June 9th.

Members are requested to meet in the W.O.W. Hall, George Street, at 6 p.m.

The S.A. Temple Band will be in attendance.

F. Sutcliffe,
Sec.-Treas. W.O.W.
J. W. Buyers,
Rec. Secy., I.O.F.

HONOUR ROLL WILL BE UNVEILED AT GILMOUR MEMORIAL.

At the Gilmour Memorial Church to-morrow the honour roll to the boys from the congregation who have joined the colours will be unveiled. The tablet, which is an artistically carved oak shield, bears the names of Norman Young, Fred. Holden, Leonard Palmer, Harry Young, John Young, Charles Avery, Roy McEwen, Albert Oliver, Sherman Blewett, Burritt Bell, Alec Edmison, Harold Telford and William Galt.

THE WEATHER

"June frosts" were looked for and dreaded in the pioneer days of this part of Ontario. These usually occurred during the first ten days of June, and frequently did much damage. As the country became cleared the frosts became less frequent until they have almost if not completely disappeared. Last night the temperature went down to 38 degrees, which was the lowest for some weeks but still safely above the frost mark.—W.P.

NATIONAL REGISTRATION.

The date of the National Registration is rapidly drawing near and by this time the Canadian people should be cognizant of the necessity of complying with the law in this respect, and of the penalties that will accompany a failure to obey the regulations. All residents of Canada, male or female, who are sixteen years of age, or over, must register—that should be thoroughly understood. However, there may be specific points in regard to the regulations on which readers of The Examiner are in doubt, and in this connection this paper will be glad to supply the necessary information if possible. If you are not sure of any point in regard to National Registration, address an enquiry to the editor of The Examiner, and the reply will be given in the next issue after the receipt of your letter. This service has been underaken at the request of the chairman of the Canada Registration Board, and it is hoped will be taken advantage of by citizens who are uncertain as to details in connection with the registration proceedings.

THE SAMMIES' SUCCESS.

The success of the American marines on the Marne front will be gratifying, not only to the people of the United States, but to Canadians, as well, who will rejoice that their brothers from the North American continent have had and have taken full advantage of the opportunity given them to show their mettle. In their fighting around Chateau Thierry, the United States sailor-soldiers have shown a dashing bravery that augurs ill for the Germans when the full strength of America's fighting forces is thrown into the maelstrom on the western front. Not only did the American marines drive the Huns across the Marne, but they have attacked most successfully on the north side of the river, capturing and holding several villages and inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. Although only a few American units have been engaged in the recent fighting, notably machine gun companies, they have greatly distinguished themselves, and a French official statement pays them the credit of saying, "that their help was just what was expected from gallant soldiers full of enthusiasm and ardent fighters. We may hope for everything from them."

CROSS-ROADS LEGISLATION.

The letter from the proprietor of the Boston Cafe, which appeared in the local press the other day, has been endorsed by many citizens, who recognize the truth of the objections to the restaurant regulations pointed out by Mr. Douros. The city council would be well adviped to reconsider this matter, especially as the decision of the restaurant-keepers not to open at all on Sunday has complicated the situation, and will be a hardship to hundreds of citizens. The object of the restricted hours was ostensibly to prevent the sale of ice cream on Sunday. Surely it would be possible to achieve this result without forcing the legitimate eating houses to close their doors on the Sabbath day. It is ridiculous that in a progressive city of over twenty thousand people it will be impossible to get anything to eat from 12 o'clock on Saturday night until Monday morning, unless one is able to visit a hotel at meal hours. The Boston Cafe proprietor is quite right in saying that such legislation as passed by the council reduces Peterboro to the status of "a cross roads village," and the action of the council in this matter is difficult to understand. There are other measures in which the citizens would prefer to see them show the firmness of determination and the unanimity of opinion that they have displayed in dealing with the restaurants. The cutting off of restaurant accommodation is not a popular measure.

SAFETY FIRST METHODS.

There is much helpful advice in the warning to parents and children to avoid accidents caused by carelessness, issued by the Ontario Safety League. Literature will be distributed through the city schools calling attention to many causes of accidents and advising safety-first methods. That many mishaps are due to thoughtlessness cannot be denied and therefore the League's propaganda, if carefully studied, should be productive of results.

"The war and our great losses are added arguments in favour of preventing accidents," says the bulletin. "Canada has need of every citizen. The land is of no value without people, and we who are here should bend every effort towards making our country greater and more fitted to deal with after-the-war problems. A child who loses a foot or a hand in an accident has a severe handicap in the battle of life. Give the kiddies every chance — teach them to be careful; teach them that they must be careful.

"And then for yourself too, be careful. The children need you—the country needs you. Children deprived of parental care early in life by the loss of mother or father cannot grow up as well equipped for the future as those who have their parents to provide for them and protect them."

The following points are emphasized:

1.—The roads are not safe playgrounds because vehicles must use them.

2.—The safest place to cross a street is at the corner.

3.—It is a good plan to stop, look and listen before crossing a road.

4.—It is safer to walk across a road than to run.

5.—Fire and matches have brought sorrow and ruin to many families.

6.—Boards with rusty nails in them may cause a nasty accident.

7.—It is not brave nor clever to throw stones or sticks at passing wagons or automobiles.

Parents are admonished to consider carefully whether their children can get matches easily. Do the children ever play with fire?

Is there any chance of the children pulling boiling water over themselves?

Is boiling water ever left where children might fall into it?

Are the stairs safe and kept clear of things that might trip some one? Do you leave edged tools where the children might get them?

No mention is made of the menace of dogs, but if the owners feed them and keep them muzzled and tied up the danger to the lives of neighbour's children and their own will be lessened.

TAX FREE LOANS.

The Australian Government, after issuing several war loans exempt from taxation, have recently announced a new five per cent. loan of about $400,000,000, which it is proposed to issue without any exemption from taxation. The incident is worthy of the attention of our Finance Department at Ottawa. In the science of Government there is a very strong tendency to follow the line of least resistance. A Minister of Finance finds frequent reason to do so. The necessity of raising large war loans in the home money market —a market in which large loans had not previously been attempted— naturally gave the Department some anxiety, and there was a disposition to make the loans as attractive as possible to the investor. Hence large issues of bonds were made which gave the investor the benefit of a generous rate of interest, coupled with an assurance that these securities would be free from all forms of Dominion taxation. As the Dominion income tax had not been adopted when these early issues were made, the assurance of exemption from taxation did not seem as important as it has since become, although it doubtless operated as an attraction to the buyer at the time. Now that we have an income tax which of considerable weight, and the prospect of an increase of it rather than any reduction, the question of tax exempt bonds becomes important. Such bonds are enhanced in value and will be bought by investors who desire to avoid as far as they can the burdens of taxation. It may be said that if the Dominion seeks to be losing the tax on such securities the loss is more apparent than real since the country presumably received the value of the exemption privilege in the price of the bonds at the time of issue. This is, in a sense, true. Nevertheless if well-to-do people who were shrewd enough to put their wealth into Dominion bonds are found paying little or no income tax at a time when their poorer neighbours are heavily taxed, there is certain to arise a feeling of discontent, a sense of injustice.

"At no distant day the necessity will arise for the issue of another Victory Loan, and the Government will desire to make it as attractive as possible. The temptation will come again to attach an exemption privilege. That might be deemed a part of the easiest way. But a better policy will, we believe, be to resist the temptation, and make the terms—either by the rate of interest or the price of issue—such as will command support without exemption privileges.— Journal of Commerce.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The announcement that Sir Robert Borden and party have arrived in England will probably not attract as much attention among the people of the British Isles as the report of the safe arrival of 457,000 tons of bacon and ham from America.

The instructions to the people of New York as to how to conduct themselves in the event of a hostile air raid, bring the war closer home to this continent.

Because the Galt firemen had gone on strike, leaving the hall, the mayor and chairman of the Fire Committee slept at the Fire Station. Why not use the police force? They could sleep anywhere.

The Norfolk County Council has sent a letter of congratulation to Sir James S. Brown, a native son who has just been Knighted. Must be some people left in Canada who believe in titles.

Just after Sir George Foster had pleaded to the Canadian people to wear their old clothes as long as possible, came the news of the awarding of another title for the Minister. He should have been able to make the old one do for the balance of the war, to be consistent.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

Won't Grow Together.

(Louisville Courier-Journal.)

Anarchy is growing rapidly in the Ukraine. Arnarchy and what are not likely to grow side by side in the Kaiser's recently acquired Russian granary.

The World's Best.

(Chicago Tribune.)

There is no better fighting man in the world than the British soldier. He has written that fact all over the pages of modern history and he has shed his blood gloriously in this great war. Certainly it is not for any American to grudge him praise and gratitude.

Why We'll Win the War.

(New York Sun)

We can win the war, we are going to win it; not because we can throw into it indefinitely fifty billions of forty billions, or as much as thirty billions a year; for we cannot. We can win the war, we are going to win it, because to back up our men and the men of our allies we can throw in enough resources to surpass, many times over, the resources of the German empire—to surpass the resources of all the Teutonic alliance put together, and to keep it up forever.

A Scientific War.

(Popular Science Monthly)

This is the most scientific war ever fought. There is less dependence on man-power and more on machinery than at any time in the history of the world. We pin our faith to high explosives, poison gases, tear shells, gas masks, liquid fire, etc., all of which are applied chemistry, auto- the scientific and mechanical world so forth, which are very much refined mechanics. The greatest minds in the scientific and mechanical world have pooled their brains and obtained wonderful results.

Sparing Nothing.

(Montreal Gazette).

The supply of younger men in Great Britain qualified for military service having been pretty well exhausted, the government has warned the men of 47 and 48 years to be ready to report for medical examination. The fact is an indication of the extente to which the nation is pledged to continue the war to a satisfactory conclusion. The fine comb is being resorted to.

Six Safe Sons.

(Buffalo Commercial).

The Germans are reported to be bringing up men who have had no part in the struggle in France. That must include the Kaiser's sxi sons.

Doing it Economically.

(Louisville Currier-Journal)

To kill Germans as rapidly, and as economically as possible, is the task of the civilized countries. When a dog with the rabies runs amuck the duty of those among whom he has run amuck is to kill him as quickly as possible and at the smallest cost to injury.

(Hamilton Herald.)

So well do they like daylight-saving in Britain that they are now considering the advisability of putting the clocks on another hour. It would be cruel to make any such proposal here. Many of our farmers would simply die of heart failure.

British Officer Leads.

(Buffalo Commercial)

In reviewing the casualty lists of the British army after a "big show" one cannot but marvel at the manner in which the British replace their losses in commissioned ranks. If the German army lost officers proportionately at the rate the British army has, it would not today be much of a fighting organization. The reason for the great proportion of officers lost is that they always lead their troops into action.

Winter's Discipline.

He who marvels at the beauty of the world in summer will find equal cause for wonder and admiration in winter. It is true the pomp and pageantry are swept away, but the essential elements remain—the day and the night, the mountain and the valley, the elemental play and succession, and the perpetual presence of the infinite sky. In winter the stars seem to have rekindled their fires, the moon achieves a fuller triumph, and the heavens wear a look of more exalted simplicity. Summer is more wooing . . . more versatile and human, appeals to the affections and the sentiments and fosters enquiry and the art impulse. Winter is of a more heroic cast, and addresses the intellect. The severe studies and disciplines come easier in winter. One imposes larger tasks upon himself.

Ebony.

The best kind of ebony is yielded by the diospyros ebenum. This tree grows in Ceylon and Southern India. There is no doubt that this wood was imported from these places by Phoenician traders.

Change of Scene.

"Do you think Josh will be glad to get back to the old place?" asked Mrs. Corntossel.

"I'm sure he will," replied her husband. "What I've read about 'no man's land makes me think a sight of plain, peaceable, ploughed ground ought to be right satisfactory and soothin'."

CANADA

Woman's Outlook on Canada's Future

THE splendid spirit and patriotic endeavour of Canadian women has been one of the outstanding features in Canada's war effort. They have unsparingly given of their time and energy in the interest of the Red Cross and innumerable other activities which have come as a result of the war.

Thousands of Canadian women have been anxious to devote part, if not all of their time, in directions where their work would prove of advantage.

Registration will be the means of bringing to these women the opportunity they have desired.

The purpose of registration is to learn the exact capabilities of Canadian men and women, and the information gained through registration will make it possible for Canada to direct effort from less essential to more essential occupations and to widen the scope of woman's usefulness.

Every Woman

On June 22nd, every woman of sixteen years and over must attend at one of the places provided for registration between the hours of 7 a.m. and 10 p.m. and there truthfully answer all questions set forth upon the registration card. Failure to register means heavy penalties—as Registration is law.

Volunteer Workers Needed

The registering of 5,000,000 people in one day is a stupendous task, and voluntary helpers are urgently needed. Individuals, women's societies, clubs, fraternal societies, church organizations and municipal organizations are asked to help. The Board appeals with confidence to the patriotism of every Canadian woman and to the pride which every locality must take in doing its own work well, to furnish the necessary number of volunteer deputies and assistants.

Those willing to offer their services should apply to the Registrar in their district.

U. S. DOES NOT KNOW WHAT TO DO WITH THIS WAR VICTIM'S ESTATE

NEW YORK, June 8.—Dork Peter Stinnis, chief engineer killed when the American steamer A. A. Raven was torpedoed on March 14 in the English Channel, had $5,200 coming to him in wages and war risk insurance, and owned an interest in a Canadian ranch. Officials of the United States shipping board do not know what to do with the money.

Stinnis was born in Belgium, was 50 years old, and said he had no relatives when he signed the ship's articles. He was a naturalized American citizen. His body was recovered April 9 and buried in Cornwall, England.

ALADDIN'S MAGIC HAS NOTHING ON THIS OHIO WIZARD

Discovers drug which loosens sore, touchy corns so they lift out

You reckless men and women who are pestered with corns and who have at least once a week invited an awful death from lockjaw or blood poison, are now told to use a drug called freezone, which the moment a few drops are applied to any corn, the soreness is relieved and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out with the fingers.

This new ether drug is the recent discovery of a noted Cincinnati chemist. It is a sticky substance which dries the moment that it is applied, and is said to simply shrivel the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any of the drug stores but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You are further warned that cutting at a corn is a suicidal habit.

First Lieutenant L. H. McIntyre, Son of Ald. Malcolm McIntyre of This City Has Some Thrilling Experiences Over the German Battle Lines--Fighting in the Clouds With a Dangerous Adversary.

TWO INTERESTING LETTERS RECEIVED

The following interesting letter has been received by Alderman Malcolm McIntyre from his son, First Lieut. L. H. McIntyre, of the Royal Air Forces:

No. 2 Squadron,
April 9, 1918.

Dear Dad,—I was awfully glad to receive your fifth letter yesterday along with one from Elva, which I will answer soon.

I'm afraid you are worrying your head too much about me though. I only wish you could see things as I do. I missed the chance of my life the other day, and I've been kicking myself ever since. It would have made rather a hit to get a Hun on my second trip over. Our flight of six machines were just crossing the lines when we saw five Camels (turned out to be B flight) putting up a great scrap with twelve Albatri. We put on steam for the scrap, and as the Huns were so busy fighting, that they did not see us coming, we circled around above for a few seconds, picked out a Hun each and dove. Mine was crossing my front at right angles, two hundred feet below. I did a turning dive with his top plane between himself and me, so that he could not see me, and came out directly behind him. Getting him right in the middle of my sight I pressed the trigger control, but nothing happened. He was so close that I nearly ran into him. Of course the only thing for me to do was to hook it, which I did. As soon as I was to one side I half-loaded my guns, and they worked beautifully. I had sailed into the scrap with my guns only half-loaded, and thus a perfectly good fat Hun floated away from me without even knowing I was there. By the time I got back there wasn't a Hun in sight. They can't stand a fight against even numbers. The other boys got three of them before they got away, and my flight commander lost one the same way I did. The Huns have a great advantage since they never come over our lines. If a scrap gets too hot they spin down, and we can't follow because we are over Hunland, and would be shot at from the ground. Besides, we would be prey for any enemy machines above us. It is surprising how hard it is to see another machine any distance away. I had the wind put up me properly that afternoon. I hope you won't get the same way if I tell you about it, because it was entirely my own fault, and you bet it won't occur again. They thought there was something going on that day behind the Hun lines, so they sent us out on low bombing. The clouds were very low, and we dropped our eggs from about 1,000 feet. It didn't give much margin of safety between us and possible Huns in the clouds. When we got there we found eighteen machines of all types buzzing up and down the lines. We would make a dash across, drop a bomb and hook it back as quick as possible. I didnt know the line very well, so, picking out a trench, I went down to make sure who was in it. I went to about fifty feet and discovered that they were our men, so I climbed back to two thousand, but couldn't find my formation. I lagged onto an S.E. 5 formation, and soon discovered a long line of transports on a road about five miles back. As the S.E. 5 were not going over quite that far, and seeing no Huns, I started off myself. I saw a formation quite a way over, just under the clouds, and thought I would be safe as long as they were there. But as I drew nearer I suddenly noticed that the bottom wings were much shorter than the top ones. That didn't look much like our machines, so I thought I had better clear out. I make a sharp turn about, and as I did so I saw three triplanes coming at me from above. A triplane is a machine with three wings, one under the other, and the Huns alone use them. They had been going over above to cut me off from the lines, and dove on me as soon as I turned. They must have been directly above at the time. There is one good point about the Hun, and that is, that he has such wind up that he fires at you from about 200 yards, and thus lets you know he is coming. But these machines had me all alone you see, and were about 50 yards away when I saw them. You bet they put the winds up me, but you never saw a circus clown go through more antics in an hour than I did in the next 30 seconds. I couldn't spin, because I was about four miles over the lines, and they would have only followed me down and had me between two fires right on the fire. I just jammed down my nose engine full on and hit for the lines, wriggling and twisting all the time, and making about 200 miles an hour. As soon as I dove they opened fire, and it wasn't at all pleasant to see three streams of tracers going past. But I soon pulled away and gained the lines. They daren't follow there, because our machines were about. They got only one hole through my plane, but several have been picked off in these low shows. After that I feel as if I have some interest in the war now, and something to pay back. I only wish I had got that fellow the other day. As it is, I believe we have got at least twenty in the last three weeks, and haven't lost more than a quarter of that on low bombing. Our flight hasn't lost a man yet. We have a great flight commander, Leman by name, pronounced like Le Man in French, but we all call him "lemon." He has been a flight commander for eighteen months, and knows all the dodges of the game. He is certainly a great head too. As one fellow said, "I would follow him—Well, I would follow him—I would follow him until we ran into any danger." But he is a man that you can follow and know that he sees all that is going on, and will not take any unnecessary risks. He doesn't believe in getting Huns if he is going to lose his own men. On the ground he is just like one of ourselves, not at all like an army captain.

White often.—Yours,

Lorne.

Letter Number Two.

The following letter was addressed to his sister, Miss Elva McIntyre:

No. 3 Squadron,
April 21, 1918.

Dear Elva,—There is a Baron von Richtofen in the Hun flying corps who has about 80 machines to his credit. He quit flying for a while, but has been out lately on our front flying triplanes. They paint each of their machines a different colour, and they are extremely ugly-looking things, especially when they are shooting at you. The Baron has been going around accompanied by half a dozen picked men in this circus of his and they make a very formidable crowd.

Well, yesterday afternoon, on just such a day on which I got chased by Tripes, with the clouds very low, our flight (A) and C flight started out on a C.O.P., with C flight leading about a mile ahead. The Major, who isn't supposed to fly, decided to go with C just to break the monotony of his routine I guess, and flew first man on Bill's left. Bill is the commander of C, and has been getting Huns wholesale lately. They also had a new pilot just out from England, taking his first trip on Bill's right.

We crossed the lines at about six thousand, and C made for the only opening in the clouds that could be seen, just to take a look above before going further. We started to climb before reaching the hole, and thus ran into the clouds. I remember just then seeing a formation close on our right, which I thought was C flight. Upon emerging into the light we saw a great scrap going on at the further edge, and two machines sitting up above the fight, waiting a good chance to dive. Just then a machine rolled over, fell about a hundred feet, then burst into flames, going down, leaving a great trail of fire behind.

BLOODLESS WOMEN

Feel Weak, Depressed and Worn Out All the Time—Do Not Eat Well or Sleep Well

It is an unfortunate fact that nine women out of ten are victims of bloodlessness in one form or another. The girl in her teens, the wife and mother, the matron of middle age, all know its miseries. To be anaemic, means that you are breathless after any slight exertion—you feel depressed and worn out all day. You turn against your food and cannot digest what little you do eat. At night you do no sleep well and in the morning you wake up tired and feeling unfit for the day's duties. Perhaps there are splitting headaches, or pains in in the back or side. Often a feeling of dizziness and despondency. These are the signs of anaemia or bloodlessness. There may be only one or two of these signs noticeable, but the more there are the greater are the ravages of the trouble. There is only one way to cure anaemia and that is by increasing and enriching the blood supply, and there is only one medicine that can do this speedily and effectively—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills purify the blood. It is in this way that thousands and thousands of weak, ailing girls and women have been restored to the joy of energy and good health through their use. Give these pills a fair trial and you will enjoy that health and strength that is the birthright of every woman. Mrs. W. H. Neff, Hughes avenue, Toronto, says: "For several years I suffered from a weak and watery condition of the blood. At times I would be so bad that when I walked up stairs I would have to sit on the step and rest. Sometimes my face would swell to twice its natural size, and at other times my feet would swell so that I could not put my shoes on. Frequently I would take fainting spells, and was wholly unfitted for my work. I was under a doctor's care most of the time and if I felt better for a time it was only to have the trouble worse than before. While in this condition I was visiting a friend who had great faith in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and she got me three boxes. By the time I had taken these I felt so much better that I got six more boxes and before I had taken them all I was again enjoying the best of health; had increased in my weight, my appetite improved, and I have not had a symptom of a relapse to the old pitiable condition."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any dealer in medicines, or by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

THE SOLAR ECLIPSE TO-DAY WILL APPEAR AS PARTIAL ONE TO PETERBORO' PEOPLE

Will Be First Total Eclipse of the Sun Since May, 1900—Astronomers Will Search For New Planets Between Sun and Moon—"Untimely Darkness" Will Begin This Evening

Today astronomers will have an opportunity of studying the first event of its kind since May 28, 1900, and the public generally will be provided with a new topic for a few hours. Smoked glasses will be the order of the day, both for students and for the curious.

This evening there will take place a total eclipse of the sun, the moon coming directly between it and the earth and cutting off the light. It will be one of three eclipses during the year—two of the sun and one of the moon. The lunar eclipse will take place on June 23-24, and will be only partial, while the second of the sun will occur on December 3 and be visible only in South America.

Is Partial Eclipse.

The eclipse of June 8 will be total at no point in Canada, but will be visible as a partial eclipse in all parts of the Dominion. In Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, however, the sun will set before the eclipse ends.

So far as this distinct is concerned the eclipse will begin at 6.26 p.m. "new time", reach its maximum at 7.23 p.m., and end at 8.15 p.m. Position at these times are shown in the chart accompanying this article.

The pat hof totality of the eclipse begins south of Japan, crossing the Pacific Ocean, and the United States, and ending east of the Bahama Isls.

Is Interesting Study.

Though of short duration, total solar eclipses are very interesting to astronomers because of the opportunities given to study the upper strata and corona of the sun, and to search for planets between the sun and the moon.

For the superstition, an eclipse contains portents for either good or evil according to the interpretation each individual chooses to place upon it.

Peterboro' Aviator Was In Fight, etc.

"Hello," I said. "The Huns are getting the worst of it."

Of course we headed straight for the fight, and I thought to myself C flight will soon be here too and there won't be anything to it.

From then I centred all my attention on these two machines above. If they were ours we could go right after a machine each in the fight quite safely, but if they were Huns and Leman and I, who were leading, went down they would come right down on top of us. As we drew nearer I noticed that one top machine was painted bright red and the other blue, as they turned up their wings in making a turn. About the same time I noticed that the enemy machines were Tripes and ours were Camels. Thus it was C flight that was in the scrap, and the formation I had just seen were S.E. 5 who never turned up until it was all over. Whether they did not see us, or deliberately stayed out, is a matter of opinion. It is well known that S.E. 5 don't like to meet Tripes at that height, being a little too low for the S.E. to appear to its best advantage.

Well, as soon as I saw that the top machines were Huns, I nosed up for the blue fellow. He was going away from me at the time, but he must have seen me and did a half roll and started back. As soon as he started to turn I let him have it as he came towards me nose on. I blazed away all the time (about 3 seconds). I don't think he fired at me, thinking, perhaps, it was safer to get out of the way, since I started first. He dove and disappeared under me. I could not follow, because in the meantime I had lost sight of the red fellow, and he might be bearing down on me for all I knew. I did a steep climbing turn around to look for him, and to get on his tail if he was behind, but he was no place in sight. It appears that Leman had kept him busy. Seeing no Huns about, I hit west with the rest of the outfit, and soon picked up Leman again. The sky was then full of S.E. 5's. After patrolling the line for some time and seeing nothing else, we came home, and as soon as I got out of my machine my mechanics told me that they had got the Major. I was never more surprised in my life. The machine I saw go down was he, and then Bill told us that they also got the new fellow before we got there, and a third man was shot through the arm and had gone to the hospital before I got down.

Bill says that they met the Huns head one, coming directly towards each other, and the Huns opened fire at about 300 yards, long before they even thought of doing so, and they did some remarkable shooting, getting the three machines before the fight had really begun. We always hold that it is no use firing at over 100 yards at most, as you cannot hit anything, and you only waste ammunition and also neglect your flying to a certain extent. But these fellows were remarkable shots, and they must have been using incendiary bullets, or they would never have set the machines on fire at that range. It was the old Baron's circus without a doubt, and the fight took place at the identical spot where they caught me before. Although it has taken me so long to tell it, the whole affair, from the time we saw them until they were gone did not last over four minutes at the most. Bill got one Tripe for sure, and perhaps we got a second, but were not sure, as we did not see him crash, although he went down apparently out of control. It is the first time we had got the worst in a fight, and losing the Major was such hard luck that the whole camp was in the dumps all evening. Imagine our delight the next afternoon, or to-day, when we heard that Baron von Richtofen had been brought down and killed on our side of the lines this morning by the observer while attacking an artillery observation machine. A Camel flight came along just then and destroyed four more of the Tripe formation. So seven out of a probable ten in two days doesn't leave much of the circus left, does it? The main use of the Baron's death will be the effect it will have on the German Flying Corps. They believed him superior to anything alive, and thought it impossible to bring him down. Now they will have a bigger gust up than ever, thinking if we got him there isn't much chance for them, also taking into consideration their large casualties. So you see stock is going up every day.

Write soon, with lots of news. —Yours, Lorne.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM LEO COPP

Peterborough Soldier is Now in England After a Strenuous Time at the Front

The following letter has been received by Mrs. W. J. Copp, 210 Antrim street, from her son, Signaller Leo Copp, whose name appeared in the casualty list a short time ago:

V.A.D. Church, Brampton,
Northants,
May 19, 1918.

Dear Mother, Dad and Brothers,—I saw a letter of yours written on March 24. Howard got it so he sent it up to me. It just takes 24 hours for a letter from How to here.

I have not been to church to-day as I am mess orderly. Everyone takes their turn at washing dishes, and mine happened to come to-day. This is Whitsuntide in England. Monday and Tuesday are holidays here.

I have been in to Northampton twice now. It is a place about the size of Toronto or nearly. There is a Y.M.C.A. Rest Room for wounded soldiers there, and the fellow in charge is a Mr. Phillips, a yankee, whose father comes from Belleville, Ont. Last Thursday he gave us an invitation to their picnic for wounded. We had dinner at the Rest Room. Then in charge of a couple of Y leaders who were Belgian ladies originally from Brussels, we went by bus six miles out of Northampton to the Rectory of Ecton village. The Canon of the Rectory showed us all how to lawn bowl and took us all through his gardens—the prettiest was his rock garden consisting entirely of flowers which he himself had brought from Switzerland. Then we had tea on the lawn, everything supplied by Y.M.C.A., and then the Canon took us through his church, one of the most historic outside of some of the Cathedrals. It was only small but parts if it were built about 907 A.D., and you could distinguish each stage as additions were made and a different kind of architecture employed. As you entered there was the original Holy Water bowl, then inside was the font which for a good many years had been used as a pig-trough in the Rectory farm-yard, but which was about 40 years ago restored to its original use. As the nave of the church (really the body) became too small they had built a narrow part along each side and then instead of taking out the entire intervening wall, and the most peculiar part is the difference in the width, size and kind of carving, on these arches and pillars supporting them. No two are alike, although there are six altogether. It looks as though they had experimented and that some of the arches had been cut at a very early time, and others had been cut later. Why on some of the pillars the carving lines as they ran around the pillar would work up or down until by the time they got around to the starting point the lines wouldn't meet. So you can imagine how crude it is, still it is beautiful inside. On one the arch is narrower than the corresponding arch on the other, and consequently the pillar in between on one side is wider than on the other.

Another peculiarity is the leper's window, a little window overlooking the high altar where lepers of olden times had to stand outside and see high mass administered through the little window only. The people wouldn't allow them inside.

This village and church took our eye all the more because Benj. Franklin's father, Thomas Franklin, was raised here before he went to America about 1660. There is a memorial tablet in bronze in honor of one of his favourite sayings on the bottom, "I have lived a long time, 81 years, and the older I get, the more I am convinced that man requires the presence of God in all things." There is also something else interesting re this tablet, but I'll be sending you a parcel instead of letter if I tell you everything about the place. I think I had better halt with Ecton.

I want to enclose a snap of this hospital when it was the club house, and also a snap taken in Duston. The little Sister standing up behind me is the one that used to treat me well when I was so sick in bed. She would bring me hot milk, lime-juice, etc., when I used to tell her not to bother.

We were inspected by a Surgeon-General this week.

I got that snap of the bunch. What had Willie been up to in that picture? Dad looks as though he had been after Willie. Howard also sent up two of those Harold sent.

Three of us from here, two Toronto fellows, and myself, have an invitation to another Y.M.C.A. picnic to another village not far from here next Tuesday. I don't know whether we will go or not. Mr. Phillips told us he wouldn't take any excuses, but it seems that they treat us too well with bus fares, eats and everything.

Am on the lookout for mail from France, so will likely have some news from you later than March.

From your loving son and brother,
LEO.

Surgeons Use Bottled Blood To Save Lives

London Specialist Describes to American Doctors One of War's Wonders.

CINCINNATI, June 7.—How the lives of the fighting men on the battle fronts of Europe are saved by the injection of bottled blood into their veins was told and discussed to-day at the convention of the American Surgical Association here.

This blood is known to the medical profession as citrate of blood, and, Sir Arbuthnot Lane, of London, told the delegates that in the recent German drive in northern France, when the third British army was forced to retreat, thirty bottles of citrate of blood had been captured by the Germans. "I hope that the foe will use this blood," said Sir Arbuthnot; "perhaps it will make better human being out of them."

Major W. J. Mayo, of Rochester, Minn., announced that he had already enlisted persons of pure blood who will gladly offer their blood for the treatment of American wounded. He announced also that it was not the custom of military surgeons to employ civilians for this purpose as it is preferred to take the blood of men who are slightly wounded and who are convalescing in the hospitals behind the lines.

Col. Herbert A. Bruce, of Toronto, Ont., reported that he had been successful in 320 cases of blood transfusion during a short period of service behind the lines.

Juice of Lemons! How to Make Skin White and Beautiful

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan, and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It should naturally help to whiten, soften, freshen and bring out the roses and beauty of any skin. It is truly marvelous to smoothen rough, red hands.

These Warm Weather Days—Make Milk Your CHIEF Diet

For Health and Economy—For Children and Grown-Ups

Warm weather demands a change in diet. Health and happiness is related to pure food. Over taxing the stomach in warm weather robs you of energy. Nature urges you to use concentrated foods Chief of these is milk. It is nourishing. It contains all the food elements the active body craves. It is delicious either as a beverage or as a food. It does away with the need for many other foods. It is easily digested and helps to digest other food more readily.

Children especially need more milk in warm weather, for milk nourishes without distressing. Children who drink lots of milk in warm weather keep fit for both school and play. Their growth is encouraged. They are happier--less likely to get peevish.

Another thought—sleeplessness often is only hunger which you can quickly satisfy with a glass of milk. Double your regular milk order for the summer months

Most important of all—use Pure Milk from the Peterboro Milk Products Dairy —milk that is rich in cream, that is scientifically pasteurized and clarified in a most up-to-date dairy, that is delivered to you regularly in time for each morning's breakfast—that costs no more than ordinary milk.

Peterboro's Home of the Famous "Ye Olde Firme" Heintzman Pianos

The First Year's Business at Heintzman Hall under the Management of Mr. H. B. Britton Has Been One of Graiifying Results. Exceeding the Hopes and Prospects Under Which It Was Opened.

Heintzman Hall, the Peterborough home of Heintzman and Company, Limited, closed its first business year on May 31st with a record of sales that places it among the leaders of "Ye Olde Firme's" twenty-nine stores throughout Canada. In the local district, of which Mr. B. H. Britton is manager, there are about two thousand Heintzman pianos; and the majority of them have been sold from Heintzman Hall. These figures were obtained from the financial statement covering the business of the past twelve months, and will serve to confirm the public's opinion of the progress and success that has accompanied Mr. Britton's efforts. From the day the splendid show-rooms were opened in the Royal Bank building, there have been steadily increasing evidences of the developing activities at Heintzman Hall, and the year's showing more than fulfills the expectations of the public, who were quick to observe the aggressive methods of Mr. Britton.

Heintzman Means Standard.

The name Heintzman is a household word in Canada, standing for more than half a century as a standard of the highest quality in piano workmanship, tone, action and durability. This is a fact that has been so often attested by artists and the general public alike that it is almost unnecessary to refer to the reputation of the house of Heintzman. The voluntary testimonials of great pianists, who have used the best instruments of Europe and America, could be cited as striking proof of the Heintzman instrument, and with these convincing recommendations could be quoted the satisfaction and pride with which many a household in this community alone regards its Heintzman. This is no idle exaggeration, but a plain fact, upon which the great reputation of "Ye Olde Firme" has been securely built. In many homes, a Heintzman piano has not only been the centre of family life for a generation, but the years have mellowed its glorious tone, its action has retained its facility, and its inherent qualities arising from sound and expert workmanship have improved with use.

In short, the fame of the Heintzman instrument has preceded it everywhere, and with this advantage, Mr. Britton has made the most of his first year in Heintzman Hall. Not only in the city of Peterborough, but in the nearby villages and in the towns and townships that comprise this district, the sales have mounted up steadily to the fine figure that represents the result of the first year's business under Mr. Britton's management. He is no stranger to the Heintzman Company. Twenty-five years of salesmanship in Toronto and on the road were behind him before he came to Peterborough. Hence he not only knows pianos, but he particularly knows the value of the Heintzman. Incidentally, his work has not only been successful, but it has revealed to him that Peterborough's homes demand quality in their pianos, and that the Heintzman enjoys their confidence and favour.

A Strong Sales Staff.

An idea of the selling force that claims Heintzman Hall as its headquarters is found in the fact that at the present time there are ten men in the district. Not only have there been many sales, and a large number of them for cash, but there are numerous prospective purchasers, some inclined to hesitate until the end of the war looms into view, others who are waiting only for personal business reasons. Hence, the outlook for the second year is altogether bright, and the record of the last year is at once an inspiration and a promise for the future. The assistance of Mrs. Britton has been invaluable in counsel and in the diversity of duties at Heintzman Hall.

Established 70 Years Ago.

The first Heintzman piano was manufactured seventy years ago in Canada. "Ye Olde Firme" makes no empty boast of its honorable age. The passing years have established its prestige, and its reputation forbids any lowering of standards. In fact the sales have so multiplied during the past decade that no stronger evidence of the company's standing, of the cumulative sales, could be presented. In those years the rate of increase has been fifty per cent. per annum.

To the excellence of workmanship of the Heintzman instrument, to its spendid finish of the different styles in which the instruments are cased, there is the outstanding feature of the full, round, singing tone that has always been its pre-eminent characteristic. This is found in every piano turned out of the great Heintzman factory at Toronto. It was one of the distinguishing qualities of the special instrument provided for the exclusive use of the present King and Queen when they toured Canada, as it is peculiar to the instrument that any citizen may buy. It is the hall mark of the Heintzman piano.

It is a striking fact that in farm homes, where music has entered into family life perhaps to a greater extent than in the cities, the Heintzman piano is universally popular. For the prosperous farmer, whose home is his pride, though often a close and always a careful buyer, demands quality first. In the country, as in the city, the Heintzman is recognized as the standard of piano perfection, and its sales will continue to-morrow as they have been in the past.

It is significant that this piano has been used by the foremost musical artists who have visited this country. Calve, Homer, Albani, Melba, Tetrazzini and others in their Canadian tours found the Heintzman equal to their every demand.

Another Shell Company May Open Soon In Cordage Factory

It will be welcome news to the citizens to learn that negotiations are proceeding for the leasing of the Metal Products factory to a company that has all but decided to locate a munitions factory in Peterboro. The financiers behind the movement have been in communication with the Manufacturers Committee, and although nothing definite has been announced, it is understood that the prospects of the big shell plant re-opening again are quite promising.

The interests behind it are among the strongest in the province, and if they decide to take this building will employ between four and five hundred men.

Random Garden Notes

A Potato Periscope.

After straining his back in hunting hatching potato bugs in his war garden, a foreman in the C.G.E. works had an inspiration. While he was pursuing the busy beetles, his subconscious processes were doubtless searching for relief from the toil of bending over his plants, examining them leaf by leaf for the new laid eggs on the underside. So the next night, he appeared on the lot with a strange instrument consisting of a mirror attached to a stick several feet long. With this periscope he could examine the hidden side of the leaves without stooping, and to the envy of his neighbours he went up and down the rows stooping only when the mirror located the red eggs.

Reviving Flower Boxes.

Many homes have been beautified with verandah and window flower boxes and urns, which have been carefully filled at the greenhouses. In some of the urns there are as many as fifteen different plants packed into the comparatively narrow space, and, as the plants grow, their roots fill up the urns and boxes. For the present these plants require little attention except watering, but persons who desire to maintain the blooms and colors should add some fertilizer during July when the boxes are becoming root-bound. Occasional treatment of this kind should keep the urns flourishing throughout the season. Florists state that they have known some urns to break under the expansive pressure of the growing roots, and when the vessels are emptied in the fall the root filaments have become so tangle it is practically out of the question to separate the plants.

To Rose Growers.

If any rosarians in Peterborough desire to join the Ontario Rose Society they should apply for membership to Miss Marion E. Armour, 108 Avenue Road, Toronto. The fee is one dollar a year, and the advantages are worth far more than that nominal sum.

When Seed Is Cheap.

"Plant when seed is cheap" is the advice of an experienced market gardener who declares this to be a wise policy. When potatoes are scarce the price soars, and, expecting big returns, many persons then take to potato growing. But their very numbers result in a large crop usually, and the price falls, with a resulting loss. But when seed is comparatively cheap as it is to-day, the public assumes that the staple tubers will be cheap in the fall and winter, and they let George, the farmer, do it. Follows, reduced production, higher prices, and the wise public has been caught again.

Editor of the Examiner,—

Sir: At the banquet given to the Honourable the Minister of Railways and Canals, it was incorrectly stated by one of the speakers, who undertook to give "a historical sketch of the first journey over the Trent Canal roure by the pioneers who settled in Peterborough," that it was in 1819, but as a matter of fact it was in 1818, when Adam Scott was the first white man to come up the river after whom the present city site was called "Scott's Plains." It has been claimed, however, that the families of John Walton, Thomas Lee, Thomas Walton Milburn, William Dixon and Jno. Smith, after whom the Township of Smith was named, and all of whom settled in that township, were the first actual settlers in that year.

Another speaker is reported as having given "a stirring picture of the work," said it "had its inception eighty-five years ago," but I have seen it stated that it had its inception ninety-seven years ago, i.e., in 1821. Its construction was then looked upon as a military necessity in case of an invasion, as well as for commercial purposes.

The mayor spoke of incidents in connection with the canal, some of which date back to a period anterior to his birth. In speaking of those instrumenal in the promotion of the works, the honors he bestows do not apply to all alike. Some of them deserve all the praise he ascribes to them, but others are not so entitled —who pooh-poohed the feasibility of the work, and belittled it as a frog-pond.

In order to give credit where credit is due we shall have to hark back to the middle of the last century.

The most conspicuous and self-sacrificing figure of those days was the late W. S. Conger, who gave up the shrievality of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria in order to go to Parliament so that he might be able to give his best services to his country and particularly to the advocacy of this canal.

We all in common along the entire length of the canal, desire its construction but if it had been completed when we had access to our river front, it would have been of infinitely more benefit to our city. Not only locally but to the whole Dominion, it will be of inestimable value.

Yours, etc.,
CITIZEN.

POTATO PENS FAILED.

Last Year's Wonderful Discovery Didn't Pan Out.

Last year people all over the country were building potato "pens." Somebody, somewhere, it was said, had raised enough potatoes to last an ordinary family a whole year in an openwork box eight feet square. The box was filled with soil and seed potatoes in the spring, and that was all there was to it. The vines grew out through the cracks all around, and the bin was full of good tubers in the fall. Fine business it was.

The only trouble with this grand scheme was that it didn't work. Professor Christie of Purdue University says that in Indianapolis most of these sky-scraper potato gardeners didn't get back their seed. Of forty pens tried in Indianapolis, according to City Garden Superviser Osborne, not one succeeded.

Experiments by the United States Department of Agriculture were equally disappointing. In a potato pen at Washington twenty pounds of seed were planted and eight pounds of potatoes were harvested. The "barrel" plan was just as bad. The crop from two barrels weighed less than two pounds.

It doesn't pay to be a mossback, of course, but it does pay to stick to approved methods of farming.—Farm Life.

Who Began Trench Warfare?

THE trench, which always encircled the Roman castra, or camp, was brought to France by Julius Caesar and used by him on the very battlefield where to-day the Allies and the Huns have 25,000 miles of trenches.

With rings of trenches, gradually drawn smaller, probably the first modern trench warfare, the Turks in 1667 took Candia.

Vauban, builder of Verdun, in 1673 employed the first parallel trenches, the system of the present war.

Defeat, not foresight, turned the Germans to trench warfare. But Goodrich never had to dig in.

Since twenty-two years ago Goodrich manufactured the first American pneumatic automobile tire, Goodrich has driven ahead to the big, graceful, masterful—

GOODRICH
SERVICE VALUE TIRES

But whether Goodrich was revolutionizing tire manufacture by bringing forth the first American clincher tire—

Or originating the one practical non-skid, the cross-bar, safety-tread, or tough black tread rubber—

Goodrich built tires to one end—SERVICE VALUE—what they are worth to the motorist on his car and on the road in COMFORT of an easier riding car—ECONOMY in gasoline saved,—and LONG MILEAGE.

Small difference whether you buy GOODRICH SILVERTOWN CORDS, or BLACK SAFETY TREADS, you get SERVICE VALUE TIRES.

GERMANY AIMS TO FORCE THE UNITED STATES TO CALL HOME ITS NAVAL FORCES

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, June 8. — Count Von Reventlow, foremost German advocate of "frightfulness," believes the submarine operations in the Western Atlantic will force the United States to withdraw its chief naval forces to defend its coast. The German press sees in it a close connection with the west front offensive, through the possible torpedoing of American transports.

"The submarine attack on America weakens the hold of the American navy in home waters," von Reventlow declared, according to advices received to-day from The Hague.

"Great Successes."

"This attack on America cannot fail, as others have," the Cologne Gazette said. "We can picture great success as the result of this offensive against America. They have not had experience, and they apparently have sent their best destroyers to Europe."

"It is a campaign against prolongation of the war by America," said the Nord Deutsche Allgemeine. "It is connected with the west front offensive."

The newspaper admits it is hard to attack American transports in the open sea, but thinks more favourable results will be obtained by submarines operating near the harbours of departure.

Wind Blew Papers Off Waggon, But Onus Was On Owner

"Peter Cesarora," read Magistrate Dumble from an indictment this morning. "Great Caesar, you've stolen his name!"

Peter was charged with having caused paper to be left on the streets.

"You smile guiltily," remarked the Magistrate—"$7.60."

Mr. Louis Florence, his employer, approached the Magistrate to explain the circumstances of the offence.

"He was drawing paper for me," Mr. Florence began.

"I'll be glad to put it onto stronger shoulders," the magistrate interrupted.

"Your Worship, he was driving baled paper, but it was a very windy day."

"You should not put out of port on such a day," remarked the Magistrate.

"If we didn't work when it rained or blew, we wouldn't accomplish very much," replied Mr. Florence.

"$7.60," Mr. Dumble repeated.

"You might as well have just sent us the bill," said Mr. Florence good naturedly.

"We are," replied Chief Thompson. "Do you want to pay this?"

"I guess there is nothing else to do," said Mr. Florence.

BROKE TRAFFIC REGULATIONS

Carman Clark, a Campbellford youth made such a flagrant breach of the traffic regulations that the police would doubtless have seen him even had they been blindfold, it was so palpable.

He was driving south on George street. A car ahead of him signalled the left turn to the east, and Clark speeded up, passing it at the corner, and turning west.

For not giving the other car the right of way, Clark was fined $7.60, and Magistrate Dumble presented him with the A.B.C. book of traffic rules.

TWO WEEKS TO CLEAN UP.

Harry Abromowitz was given two weeks to clean up his junk yard on Lansdowne street. "I got it cleaned up!" he said, when he arrived late, after Mr. J. A. O'Brien had argued that foreigners should be carefully taught the ways and the ideals of the country.

The Automobile Industry Will Not Be Affected

Washington, D. C., June 8 — There will be no special curtailment of the motor car industry. Car manufacturers have agreed with the government officials that war needs demand 100 per cent. priority on steel and other materials required for munitions manufacture.

When the Government officials persisted the motor car committee stood pat. It stated that it would not set a curtailment figure but would force the responsibility for any such drastic curtailment upon the War Industries Board. In view of its own lack of knowledge of steel and other material requirements, the Board hesitated to set a specified drastic curtailment which might be unnecessary, and in the near future bring severe criticism upon the War Industries Board, with the result stated above—that their will be no specified curtailment, but instead an arrangement whereby the government has first and full priority with motor car makers taking what materials are left for use in the production of cars.

It was agreed that this plan was by far the best. It prevents all hysteria and panic in the industry and especially among the 37,000 dealers. It gives the government all of the materials it needs, yet it allows the industry to run up to normal production as speedily as the shortage situation clears up. According to the agreement made between the industry and the War Industries Board the present 30 per cent. curtailment period expires July 31.

The steel situation is the pressing one, and whatever curtailment for next year is decided upon will be dictated very largely by the supply of steel. The Shipping Board, under Edwin N. Hurley, has announced that it is building 4,000,000 tons of shipping, but Chas. M. Schwab, who has assumed charge of production, declares that he is going to build 6,000,000 tons of shipping. This will mean a very heavy drain on the steel resources of the country. The proposal not to ship steel to any industries for a period of 60 days seems to have been primarily intended to stock up the shipyards with steel so that next winter there will not be any holding back of the ship building programme because of a failure of our transportation system similar to that of last year. The War Industries Board is determined that those primary war industries, such as ship building, etc., will be cared for no matter how other industries may have to suffer.

Rhode Island's Capitals.

Rhode Island adopted a constitution in 1842, which named five capitals for the state, designating Newport, South Kingston, Bristol, East Greenwich and Providence as the places for successive honor. In 1854 an amendment restricted the meeting places of the general assembly or legislature to two places—Newport and Providence. In 1900 Providence became the only seat of the legislature.

Costumes For Afternoon And Street Wear That Hint of Summer

About Sleeveless Overblouses and Capes

NEW YORK, June 8.—One by one on the streets the costumes for summer weather are appearing. It is very interesting to walk up Fifth Avenue now, for one's attention is divided between the glowing shop windows and well-dressed crowd that throngs the pavements. The warm days we are having make our heavy clothes seem unbearable, and, so, it is with a deeper interest than ever (if possible) that we study the latest styles and appropriate for our own frocks, a collar here, a sash arrangement there, and perhaps a tunic or draped skirt from some place else.

The sleeveless overblouses in all their gay colours make charming street wraps. They were originally intended for sports wear, but are so practical and generally becoming, they are being worn for many different occasions. Satin skirts are usually the accompaniment of these overblouses, though skirts of pique, corduroy, cotton gabardine and flannel are often worn with them. The hat, as a rule, belongs to the sailor type, with a wide brim and rather high crown, repeating the predominating colour of the costume in the band or under facing.

Sports shoes in white or dust-tan are considered very smart.

The Afternoon Frock.

A trip through the shops convinces

one without further argument of the many, many ways in which one can unite economy with style! Never have the materials been so attractive. The colours seem fresher than of old, and the quality of the materials higher. Voile is one of the most valuable aids to summer coolness. The little afternoon dress illustrated here is one of that fascinating material. Some of those unusual flowers that only bloom in Fashion's garden are scattered over the background of creamy white with a cross bar of moss green. The dress can be closed on either the right or the left side, one of its unusual features; another being the cash slipped through a sash. The surplice closing is becoming to most women, giving a charming length of line which is continued in this case into the skirt. Short sleeves are fast becoming the rage, and really they are the more comfortable for summer. Note the novel arrangement of the cuffs.

Capes, Military and Civilian.

The cape has come to stay, at least for the time being. They are graceful things and can be used for so many occasions. Some are copies of the capes worn by our Navy officers, extremely good looking they are, too. For the women who do not want these military capes, there are others just as attractive. Some are much longer on one side than on the other and can be thrown around the arm and over the shoulder after the manner of the Italian officer. Some are shoulder capes with a coat arrangement in the front. Most of them are made of dark colours for street wear though evening capes come in all the delicate shades. There is not a great deal of trimming on them. Often the gay lining is repeated for the draped collar. Some times the deep armholes are bound with a contrasting colour, or the pockets are faced with satin or foulard or sports silk.

After the third or fourth application of this grand Ointment I obtained relief and a few boxes were sufficient to make a thorough cure

More Restrictions For Restaurants

New Order Would Throw Additional Burdens on the Patronizing Public.

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, June 8.—It is rumoured in hotel circles, that the Canadian Food Board contemplates regulating hotels restaurants and cafes further to the extent of making it compulsory for them to operate on the European plan, that is, a la carte, exclusively. The purpose of this regulation of course, is to save food and incidentally help the hotels get on a better business basis, the heavy end of the order resting upon the patronizing public.

Managers of the downtown hotels, interviewed, have totally different views as to the efficacy of such an order in conserving more food for the Allies.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SPORTING COMMENT

Napoleon Lajoie and the Indianapolis team, champions of the American Association last season, are worrying along in the second division.

New York National League fans have focused the calcium light on Ross Young. Benny Kauff wants a place in the glare and is proceeding to smash his way in by means of his bat.

Pitcher Grover Cleveland Alexander passed through St. Louis en route to an Atlantic port with an American artillery unit. The great pitcher has never been in the army until recently, but he ought to be a handy man around a "battery," May-be the Sammies over there won't give the big pitching ace a welcome.

There are more ways of choking a cat than with butter. Clubs in the New League in New York State were turned down in their application for permission to play Sunday ball, but they do it "all the same." They sell score cards for twenty-five, fifty, and seventy-five cents, the sale being made outside the ball parks. The red card entitles the holder to a reserved seat, the white one to a general admission seat in the grandstand, and the blue card to a soft plank in the bleachers.

Ban Johnson, president of the American League, announced at Chicago that his organization would refuse to join in a proposed request to the Government for special railway rates for baseball players.

LAWN BOWLING

Last night the first contest for the Jobs took place between the Fitzgerald and the Hammond rinks. The Hammond rink won out by one point. The Hammond rink will now play with the Waddell rink, either to-day or Monday.

The first contest for the Scotch doubles will take place next week.

ACOUSTIC CLOUDS.

Why Church Bells Sound Louder on Some Days Than on Others.

Every one has noticed that on certain days church bells are heard much better than on others and sometimes are not heard at all on other days. The same distance intervenes between the church and the person's residence, the same intensity is used to strike the bell, the same visible obstacles are between the two at one time as at another.

Then why does the intensity of the sound vary? It has been found that there are what is known as "acoustic clouds" in the air. They cannot be seen, but they may be detected artificially. They have the property of reflecting sound just as a brick wall has. So if a thick one of these so called "clouds" intervenes between the church bell and the observer most of the sound is reflected back to the bell, and very little gets through. The acoustic clouds consist simply of a large quantity of water vapor in the air, and water vapor itself is invisible. So we are able to see through something that we can not hear through. Generally, of course, it is the other way round. We can hear through a piece of black paper, but we cannot see through it.

Now, if these acoustic clouds are disposed in a certain manner it is possible that they will reflect the sound into a region where the bell's tone is ordinarily not heard at all save when the clouds are present and disposed in the proper manner.—Chicago Herald.

Still Observe Druid Festival.

The old midsummer fire festival of troubled origin is still celebrated on the continent, but there is probably only one spot in Great Britain where it is still observed, and that is Tarbolton in Ayrshire. Four days before the festival the villagers begin to collect materials for the great bonfire. The fuel is built upon an altar of turf, and a maiden is appointed at sunset, after which the folk solemnly march around the blaze and the daring youngsters vie with one another in dashing through the flames.—London Tit-Bits.

Dangerous Occupation.

"Does my practicing make you nervous?" asked the man who is learning to play the cornet.

"It did when I first heard the neighbors discussing it," replied the sympathetic person. "But now I'm getting so I don't care what happens to you."—Washington Star.

BLUFFING IN A DUEL.

"Labby" Put Up a Brave Front, Though He Was Badly Scared.

During his early diplomatic career while he was attached to the embassy in Stockholm Henry Labouchere fought a duel.

"There was a want of logic about the entire proceeding that went to my heart," he confessed later. "To be killed is bad enough, but to be killed paradoxically is worse. I never felt more dismal in my life."

Paradoxical the combat certainly was, since Labouchere had been the challenger, his ground of offense being that his antagonist, an Austrian officer, had presumed to criticize the British minister for having given social countenance to a fellow Briton who disapproving of duels, had recently declined a challenge from conscientious scruples. The young diplomat, asserting with spirit that his chief had behaved properly and that Englishmen were no so silly as to fight duels, had left the rest to his seconds and found himself pledged to fight the next morning with pistols at 7 o'clock. He had hoped for an apology, and admits he was dismayed; but he did not allow his feelings to be divined, and duly made his appearance upon the field of honor.

"The Austrian stood apart; I stood apart. The surgeon already eyed me as a 'subject.' The seconds consulted; then the Frenchman stepped out twelve paces. He had very short legs, and they seemed to be shorter than ever. After this came the loading of the pistols. Sometimes, I thought, seconds do not put in the bullets. That comforted me, but only for a moment, for the bullets were rammed down with cheerful energy. By this time we had been placed facing each other. A pistol was given to each of us. 'I am to give the signal,' said the Prussian. 'I shall count one, two, three, and then at the word fire you will both fire. Gentlemen, are you ready?' We both nodded. 'One, two, three, fire!' and both our pistols went off. No harm had been done."

He thought it was all over, when his opponent, stepping up, remarked that he supposed he ought to allow him a second shot, but, should nothing come of it, he would not consent to a third. Reluctantly on the part of both participants a second shot was fired, and they both missed—if indeed either had aimed again. Then Labouchere boldly demanded a third shot.

"The seconds consulted together. For a moment I feared they were going to grant my request, and I was greatly relieved when they informed me they considered that two shots were amply sufficient. I was delighted, but I pretended to be most unhappy and kept up the farce of being an aggrieved person."

The whole affair was certainly farcical; but the fun depended upon the seeding actors being both very bad marksmen.—Exchange.

It Is Indeed.

In these days of the high cost of living the following story is not without a decided point.

The teacher of a primary class was trying to show the children the difference between natural and man-made wonders and was finding it hard.

"What," she asked, "do you think is the most wonderful thing a man ever made?"

A little girl, whose parents were obviously harassed by the question of ways and means, replied as solemnly as the proverbial judge:

"A living for his family."—Woman's Home Companion.

Electricity and the Human Body.

A series of experiments on the variation of skin resistance to the passage of electric currents through the human body has been carried out by Professor von Pfungen of Vienna. The experiments proved that habits of strict sobriety appreciably lessened the danger of fatal injury from an electric shock. Nervous excitement of any kind lowered the protective power of the skin to a remarkable extent. The measurements were made by means of a sensitive galvanometer, the current passing through the body of the subject from one hand to the other.

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 40 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $3,500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 21.

Besides while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

Berlin Pastors Still Blind

On the occasion of the four hundredth anniversary of the reformation, five prominent Protestant clergymen of Berlin issued a declaration, "in answer to manifold demonstrations of a similar character which have reached us from neutral countries." Its appearance in America was delayed, and it has received but slight attention, except among those who read into it meanings which are not on the surface. This is the document:

"We German Protestants, conscious of the Christian heritage, and Christian ties which we hold in common with them, extend to all fellow believers, to those in enemy countries also, our heartfelt and brotherly greeting.

"We recognize the deepest causes of the present war to lie in the anti-Christian powers which control the lives of the people of the earth, their mutual suspicion, their covetousness, and we behold in a peace by mutual agreement and reconciliation a peace that is worth striving for.

"We find the obstacles to an honest and closer approach of the nations to be mainly the unholy sway of lies and phrases by which the truth is distorted and silences and also opinions gain currency, and we call on all, in all lands, who desire peace to resolutely combat this evil.

"We feel it a duty, in view of the present frightful war, in the name of our common Christianity, to strive henceforth with determination that war as a means of settling differences between peoples shall disappear from the earth.

"Dr. K. Aner, W. Mithack-Stahn, O. Pless, Dr. F. Rittlemeyer, R. Wieland."

The closing paragraph, with its frank repudiation of militarism and war, is a welcome note, coming from such a source, though out of chord with the chorus of hate and glorification of arms which has disgraced the German pulpit since August, 1914.

Apart from this sign of chastened spirit, the declaration is disappointing. The second paragraph attributes the causes of the war, to "worship of force, and coveteousness" on the part of "the people of the earth." That is the naked truth as relates to Germany's attack upon the peace of the world, but it is stark nonsense as regards Canada's participation in the struggle. The "peace by mutual agreement," which they think is worth striving for, is not a safe peace for humanity, so long as it leaves the Central Powers under the leadership which has proved itself a menace to the world.

The third paragraph finds the obstacles to peace to be mainly "the unholy sway of lies," and calls on "all lands who desire peace to resolutely combat this evil." This sentiment shows that the truth is making no headway in Berlin. Otherwise these pastors would know that it is not lies but stern and hateful facts that are the chief obstacle to a negotiated peace.

This declaration of the Berlin pastors has been hailed in pacifist circles as an evidence that "the morning light is breaking." We cannot believe it, until the darkness disappears enough to make visible some sign of "potential tears." We do not find such light here, except for the lonely beam that shines out of the final sentence, like a good deed in a naughty world.

Let no one be amazed at the attitude of the Prussian clergy toward the policies of their paymasters. Even in free Canada, where public opinion has been the only law, it is hard enough to maintain an independent pulpit. But the German Government leaves no room for private judgment. Pastors of the Established Church of Prussia must take this solemn obligation upon being admitted to its ministry:

"I will be submissive, faithful, and obedient to his Royal Majesty, and his lawful successors in the Government, as my most gracious King and Sovereign; promote his welfare according to my ability; prevent injury and detriment to him; and particularly endeavor carefully to cultivate in the minds of the people under my care, a sense of reverence and fidelity toward the King, love for the Fatherland, obedience to the laws, and all those virtues which to a Christian denote a good citizen; and I will not suffer any man to teach or act in a contrary spirit. In particular, I vow that I will not support any society or association, either at home or abroad, which might endanger the public security, and will inform his Majesty of any proposals made, either in my dio cese or elsewhere, which might prove injurious to the state. I will preach the Word as his Gracious Majesty dictates."

What light or leadership can be expected from a ministry that must submit its soul to such gyves as these.

FLATTERING THE KAISER.

All His Doings and Sayings Are Carefully Recorded.

The Kaiser has found his Boswell in Karl Rosner, war correspondent of the "Lokal Anzeiger," who, says the Daily News, retails to the German public all the wise and humane utterances the "All Highest" has been making of late in the course of his tour around the battlefields of Flanders.

Rosner faithfully records how the Kaiser as the clock strikes one sits down to his soup, which he brings with him in a thermos saucepan, and how, afterward, he busies himself ideally with picking fresh violets to send them to the Kaiserin. Rosner accompanies the Kaiser on his round and witnesses his meeting with a squad returning from the battlefield.

"What's Tommy doing?" asks the Kaiser.

"Tommy is running away, your Majesty," is the reply.

"Let him run, then," observes the Kaiser, "people who are in a hurry must not be kept back."

Rosner gives an account of the Kaiser's visit to the big gun, and says "Long Herman"—as it seems to be called by the Germans—is firing at Paris, Rosner writes: "It does not really look like a gun at all; it is more like a gigantic grey crane, which for some unaccountable reason has been planted here amid violets, primroses and other spring flowers. It stands dreaming, as it were, and then it suddenly awakens, disturbing the peace of this field. The violent disturbance of the air, which shakes the very trunks of trees, becomes quite visibly a black thread cutting along the sky. This thread is the travelling calamity.

"It can travel thus 78 miles, but it is satisfied this time with less. It will remain on the move exactly 180 seconds. We stand still and watch its course. Birds which had been soaring in the air come back frightened to the trees and once more the gun stands in some prehistoric animal. More minutes—calamity has landed in Paris."

The Scandinavian Confederacy.

The recent meeting of the three kings of the Scandinavian countries, so unexpected and so unusual, was practically a meeting in self-defence, forced on them by the precarious situation in which the war had placed their countries. Sweden had prided herself on her militarism, copied from the German system. Norway relied on its coast-line, its shipping, its fisheries, and the firm belief that it was practically independent of the world, with an assured future made by its own brains and its natural resources. Denmark, never free from the fear of the German Colossus, believed that Great Britain and Russia might save her from extinction at the crucial moment; and the preponderance of Anglo-Saxon opinion at the various Hague conferences made her hope that the moral force of this opinion might prevent her national extinction. These hopes are gone. Denmark fed Britain, she exported certain products to Germany, she had made herself the foremost scientific agricultural nation of the world, she was the freest, she was working out the ideals of her national life without desiring to acquire territory or to infringe on the rights of others; but the moment the United tSates entered the war, she and the other Scandinavian nations gave up hope of any protection or help, and they have now determined to band together in an industrial economic union. The world has deserted them, and they have determined to do their best to become independent of the world.

Was In Bed Nearly Half Of Her Time

Decided to Take Tanlac After What It Did For Her Husband and Troubles She Overcame

There was recently printed in this paper a remarkable statement made by Daniel Hickey of 217 Euclid Avenue, Toronto, in which he tells how Tanlac relieved him of a long-standing case of stomach trouble and rheumatism, and his wife of a serious nervous trouble from which she had suffered for several years. Mr. Hickey has lived in Toronto all his life, is employed at the Dominion Wheel Works and both he and his wife are so well known in the community that his story has been widely commented on. Now comes Mrs. Hickey who, in corroboration of her husband, tells in her own words of the wonderful way in which Tanlac has also benefited her.

"I was practically a confirmed invalid with nervous trouble for the last six years," said Mrs. Hiskey the other day, "and my system was so broken down that I had to spend four or five months out of every year in my bed, and what time I was able to be up I would be so weak and lifeless that I wasn't fit for a thing. My energy seemed to be completely gone and I was so rundown that I couldn't even sweep the floor, let alone do any other housework. Sometimes I would have a most disagreeable, creepy feeling all over my body just as if something was crawling underneath my skin, and I was so touchy that the least little thing would irritate me and put me all out of humour. I didn't have a bit of appetite and what little I forced down tasted so bad that I couldn't relish it, and it didn't do me any good. My skin had that pale, sallow, unhealthy look as if I had no blood in my veins, and I would get so restless at night that I could hardly go to sleep at all.

"I had taken so many different kinds of medicines, and been treated too, by specialists, without getting any better, that both my husband and I were greatly discouraged. But when he started on Tanlac and saw that it was helping him he wanted me to try it too. Well, I have taken four or five bottles now and am actually in better condition than I have been in years. My nervousness is completely gone and I never have that disagreeable creepy feeling any more. My appetite is just fine and I sleep like a child all night. I am so much stronger and better in every way that my husband tells me I look like a different person. I sure do feel like one. From the way Tanlac has fixed me up both my husband and I think it is about the finest medicine there is and we are more than glad to recommend it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Demike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Mr. Garvin is general sales manager of "The Oxford Securities Corporation, Ltd," Royal Bank Building, Toronto. Mrs. Garvin is the widely-known and popular Canadian literary woman, whose nom de plume is "Katherine Hale." While in Toronto recently the distinguished actress, Constance Collier, referred publicly to Katherine Hale's "The White Comrade" as one of the greatest poems which had come out of the war. A year ago the editor of The Poetry Review, London, England, referred editorially to Mr. Garvin's large work on Canadian poets as a "monumenta collection," and "as the one permanent celebration of the jubilee of the Confederation of British North America."

G.T.R. Grass Plot Doomed To Become Taxi Stand

It is in the plans of the G.T.R. to make a cab and taxi stand of the little green park at the station on Charlotte street. This step is designed to remove the waiting automobiles from the roadway to the east of the station, practically in the G. T. R. yard, and to leave that passage free for freight traffic. There is no definite time fixed for the carrying out of the change, but the loss of this little green oasis will be regretted by thousands of citizens who pass that way.

REIGN OF ATTILA.

Barbaric Brutality of That Savage King of the Huns.

Atilla was a barbarous king of the Huns who reigned from the year 434 to 453 of the Christian era, but he had no religion except that of brutality, conquest and loot. He ruled with all the weapons known in that day, and his hordes were compelled to follow him by the same means as he had no mercy on any who showed the least lack of fealty to him or mercy to the conquered. For a considerable part of his reign it is said that his individual word was law over a vast territory extending from the Caspian sea to the river Rhine. As a leader he was fearless and masterful and savage. He called himself "the Scourge of God."

He ruled jointly with his brother for several years, but wanted no division of the spoils, and his royal brother was disposed of as others of the royalties of that region have been disposed of.

He founded the city of Buda, made it his capital and from it directed the slaying and looting wherever there was anything to get that was worth having. He laid waste to the most ruthless manner some of the finest and richest cities of what are now Greece, Italy Spain, France and all the territory north of that, levying heavy tribute everywhere and burning and looting where tribute was not promptly paid.

He conquered the powerful Byzantine emperor, Theodosius, in 448 destroying hundreds of gems of architecture and art, and compelled the emperor to pay to him the last money possible. He again laid waste all the eastern empires in 450 and then gave his attention to Gaul in the west with an army said to have been 700,000 strong, but this is thought by some historians to be an exaggeration. However, that army was strong enough to do its will in all that region. He then made an attempt by force and cunning to detach Theodoric, king of West Goths, from his alliance with the Romans under their general Aetius; but failing in that, he gave battle to the allies near Chalons, on the Catalaunian fields, and there had his first real reverse.

The allies failed to follow up their victory, and the following year Attila and his savage hordes laid waste all northern Italy and had arranged for an assault on Rome, but he had just had an example of the prowess of the Roman soldiers and when he heard that they had concentrated there in great numbers he desisted.

Arduous campaigns and intemperate living had sapped his strength, and in 453, on the very night when he married Ildiko, a Burgundian princess "the Scourge of God" was himself scourged into another world.

An Error Perpetuated.

The compositor, who has been accused of many things, seems really to have been responsible for the fixing of the festival of St. Alban, the first British martyr, on June 17 in the English calendar. All other saints recognized by the English and Roman churches in common are honored on the same days in both calendars, but in the Roman calendar St. Alban's day is June 22. In all English prayer books also, prior to 1662, St. Alban is commemorated on June 22, and the present discrepancy seems to have arisen from the typesetter of the prayer book of 1662 mistaking the X of XXII for V and rendering the date June XVII—an error which has been perpetuated ever since.—London Chronicle.

Valuable Hair.

In Bokhara, where the finest and most costly cameishair shawls are made, the camels are watched while the fine hair on the underpart of their bodies is growing. The yarn made from the hair is of surpassing softness and is dyed all sorts of lovely colors.—London Answers

"The entire eastern situation offers no pleasant picture," the newspaper continues.

SUBMARINES WERE FOILED IN ATTEMPT AGAINST CONVOY

Mr. Warring did not know whether any submarines had been sunk.

OLD TIME HARVARD LAWS.

When Students Had to Get the President's Permission to Smoke.

Imagine a twentieth century Harvard undergraduate asking the president of the university for permission to smoke or buy a drink. Yet permission was necessary in the eighteenth century, according to the history of Harvard before 1750. One college rule read:

"No scholar shall take tobacco unless permitted by ye president with ye consent of his parents or guardian and on good reason first given by a physician and then in a sober and private manner."

Further, "No scholar shall unnecessarily frequent any tavern or victualing house in Cambridge to eat or drink there without leave from ye president or one of ye tutors."

Another regulation read:

"If any scholar be guilty of drunkenness he shall be fined 5 shillings and make a public confesson. No undergraduate shall keep by him distilled spirituous liquors, nor shall he use any such drinks as punch or flip."

Saturday evenings all students were required to retire to their chambers at sunset and not unnecessarily leave them.—New York World.

RUSSIA RUINED BY "FREEDOM" REVOLUTIONISTS HAVE WROUGHT

Terrible Picture of the Utter Chaos That Sweeps the Country—Life in Petrograd is Awful—Illiterate Peasants Compose the "Law Courts"

NOWHERE IS THERE SECURITY

NEW YORK, June 7.—The distress, hopelessness, and chaos which overwhelmed the well-to-do and official classes in the Russian revolution are vividly portrayed from the standpoint of a Russian woman in a letter received by her former classmate in this country. The writer is a daughter of a Russian diplomat, who was connected with the Russian Embassy in Washington about twenty years ago, and the widow of an officer in the Russian Army who was killed early in the war.

"Russia, crushed by exterior and interior enemies, justly despised and abhorred by the great countries that once trusted her, is ruined and disappearing," she wrote. "My country is ceasing to exist. It was bad enough before the March revolution, when our unhappy, half-witted Emperor, under the influence of his German wife, seemed to do everything possible to make people lose patience. We have a thousand anonymous potentates, the top ones paid by Germany, and the lower ones lured into supporting them by money, money, and money.

"The present Government has abolished all laws, all courts, the police, land ownership, all private real estate in towns, all distinction of castes and grades in the army and navy. They have seized all the banks, are opening all the private safes, and confiscating all gold and silver found therein, though it had never been said before that it was criminal to have it.

"Of course, everything they 'decree' is so mad that it is quite sure not to last forever, but the chaos they make will take centuries to forget. The country is going back to a savage state. And we will not live to wait for better times.

All Russia Suffocating.

"All Russia is suffocating — every day brings new surprises that show that there is but one way out of it—the grave. On the ground of liberty they abolish all laws, judges, attorneys, and substitute for it 'people's courts of justice,' with only soldiers, workmen or peasants, often quite illiterate and always without the slightest knowledge of court proceedings, taking the places of the former judiciary.

"On the same ground they abolish all police, let loose all the criminals from the prisons, arm them, constituting from their number, together with workmen, deserters and hooligans, a 'red guard,' and fill the prisons to their utmost with all those who crave for order and will not work together with them toward the total ruin of the country.

"On the pretense of equality they abolish all grades in the army and navy and make all posts elective by the simple soldiers. In most places it is understood as complete extermination, lynching of the officers, who, for being better educated, are under suspicion of being 'counter-revolutionary.' The highest posts are occupied by elected soldiers who very often can hardly sign their names, and the former officers are made simple soldiers, with a soldier's pay of $3.50 a month, and ordered to the lowest tasks, cleaning of the barracks, cooking food, taking care of the horses.

"Our great country could only exist when all the wheels of the Government were working in harmony. Now everything is a perfect chaos. Everybody was willing to throw over the Czaristic Government, but not in order to change it for this one, of loot, anarchy and treason toward our allies! Oh, the shame, the disgrace and the folly of it!

"The army, which now consists of young boys (the regular one is long ago killed), without any sense of duty, morals, and discipline, see their acquired 'freedom' in the freedom to go home when they want to. And so all the trains, all the stations, are attacked and destroyed by this horde of savages, who kill engineers, if it seems to them the train goes too slowly, who martyrize the railway agents who tell them of the impossibility of starting their train, for there is another one coming toward them in the same time. As this human flood goes home without any organization, everything is looted and destroyed.

"Some months ago, I was believing myself to be quite well off. I have a house in Petrograd. Last spring I was offered $125,000 for it, but was advised not to sell and go over to America to have my little girl become a happy American school girl. Now—I have on hand about $2,000 and no other resources; the house, like other private property, is being confiscated, the revenue going to the Government, that is to say, to the private pockets of the usurpers. The Government bonds annulated (repudiated)—and even if I had not more money—believe me—there is nothing to buy.

Hunger Imperils Petrograd.

"Petrograd will begin to die from hunger one of these days. And those who are the authors of it are sure to escape at the last moment abroad and live happily afterward with the millions they will have robbed, and leave the country to its dreadful fate.

"Life in Petrograd is horrible—all the criminals, all the workmen, and demoralized soldiers rob the few cars that still bring some kind of products. In the very heart of the city, in daytime, you have your clothes taken off your back literally. Just think that there is no police, nobody to call for help, for those who would like to help have had their firearms confiscated, even the officers, even the highest Generals. All the soldiers, etc., are armed and have become highwaymen. At any moment you can expect a number of them to come into your private lodging and, under the pretense of 'perquisition,' take away all your money and valuables.

"And as the Government declares that in a 'real Socialistic State,' no crime against private property will be considered as such, for the biggest of all crimes is just 'the crime of private ownership,' you see there is nowhere to look for help.

"Our money is not accepted anywhere abroad. Russia is bankrupt, so that it is impossible to escape. All my friends and relatives are in the same awful position. Everybody lives on their last money, even those who were quite rich. Their money was in Government or private bonds, and as they are declared void, where will you get money from? My poor mind cannot grasp the whole thing; it is too great a madness.

"I hope with all my heart that my dear American friends are happy. It is some relief to think that there are people not suffering what we have to. My only chance to save my little girl's life and my own would be to get away from here and go to the United States. If you can thing of any way to bring this about please write to me at once. I would do any kind of work, and if I came to starve there it would be to have my little one escape from this madhouse. Here, if we do not die in the next months, we will be slaves, regular slaves, of our lowest classes. So you see that anything in free America would surely be a thousand times better than what we must expect here."

TWO VIEWS OF A DANDY.

In Which Carlyle and Dr. Holmes Took Opposite Sides.

When your gaze runs afoul of a male adorned with a wrist watch and pink socks and a purple necktie, think kindly or unkindly of him—it all depends upon whether you swear by Thomas Carlyle or Oliver Wendell Holmes, both of whom have furnished intimate descriptions of the "dandy." Says the former in "Sartor Resartus:"

"A dandy is a clothes wearing man—a man whose trade, office and existence is the wearing of clothes. Every faculty of his soul, spirit, purse and person is heroically consecrated to this one object, the wearing of clothes wisely and well, so that, as others dress to live, he lives to dress."

And now look on the other side of the picture furnished by Holmes:

"There was Alcibiades, the curled son of Clinias,' an accomplished young man, but what would be called a 'swell' in these days. There was Aristotle, a distinguished writer of whom you have heard—a regular dandy he was. So was Marcus Antoninus, so was Sir Humphry Davy, so was Lord Palmerston, if I am not forgetful. Dandies such as I was speaking of have rocked this planet like a cradle—aye, and left it swinging to this day."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Forethought and Good Judgment Used

Travellers show preference for Scenic Route; Busy Men use Night Trains

Nowadays, forethought, and a lively sense of public appreciation play an important part in the construction of a railroad. The Canadian Northern made a happy choice in the selection of its route between Toronto and Ottawa: skirting the shore-line of Lake Ontario and the Bay of Quinte; over the height of land between Napanee and Sydenham; and through Rideau Lakes region, adds zest to the daytime journey in Spring or Summer. Comfortable day and night trains, stopping at principal intermediate stations, have made the route very popular.

The Woman Who Changed

DRESSED FOR THE DANCE

CHAPTER LXXXIII.

I never dressed so hurriedly in my life—nor with such calmness. I was so angry, I was cold as a stone. "I will show Julia Collins," I mumbled, over and over, as I rearranged my hair and changed my stockings and slippers. I had decided to wear a dress the colour of the sea when the sun is on the water. It was one that George had admired when it had been sent home. There was a lovely ornament for my hair, with it, and I wore my pearls. I threw a wonderful wrap of softest silk and chiffon over my shoulders, and hurried downstairs just in time to meet George and Mrs. Collins as they came out of the dining room.

I saw that same look of pride, in George's eyes, that I had surprised on one or two other occasions. But Mrs. Collins looked as if she could cut my life short without a tremor.

"That is better," George said, so low that she didn't hear.

I purposely kept my wrap closely about me until we reached the casino. When George took it from my shoulders, I saw a malignant look leap into her eyes, gone almost as soon as it came.

I was more than delighted when I saw Clark Huntington making his way towards us.

A Satisfactory Evening.

"What luck! When did you arrive?" he asked, after greeting us.

"To-day," Mrs. Collins answered. "It is quite gay for so early in the season, is it not?"

"Very." Then, as he spoke of the people she knew, who were dancing, I said to George:

"Come, dear, you and I must have the first dance together. After that, I suppose I shall have to resign you to your other friends."

As we whirled away, I caught a look of almost utter stupefaction upon Mrs. Collins' face. It raised my spirits wonderfully.

"You are looking charming, Helen. That dress is most becoming," George said to me, thereby increasing my content. But he did not mention my deceit of the dinner table, and neither did I.

After the dance was over, George introduced me to several of his friends. I danced with them all, but gave Clark Huntington the preference.

"What possessed you to come with Mrs. Collins?" he asked.

"Why?"

"Oh — well— I don't suppose I should say it, but she used to be such a pal of your husband's in all these places. It is clever of her, all right to tag along, now that he's married." Clark hadn't much tact at any time. When I grew older, I realized how more than tactless had been that particular speech.

George came for me at supper time. I could depend on him for the proprieties. In some way, I would turn the tables on Julia Collins before we left. I should be even willing to have George send for Mrs. Sexton to help me, rather than to fail!

I had a delightful evening in spite of her, however. It was almost morning when we returned to the hotel. George warned me to sleep late.

"You will lose your looks, if you do not," he said as he kissed me good night.

All My Theories Upset.

The next day I was sitting on the wide verandah of the hotel, waiting for George to come to luncheon with me, when I overheard a conversation between Julia Collins and another woman. Neither of them knew I was there (a giant palm hid me from them).

"No! A woman is a fool to tie herself down with children," Julia said. "A man gets to going out alone, and leaving her at home. I know dozens of unhappy married people who date thier unhappiness from the time the wife was unable to go about with her husband because a child was expected."

I got up quietly and escaped to my room. I had so longed for a child. Ever since I had talked with that woman on the train, and see the delight with which the young husband and father had greeted his baby, I had longed with all my heart to have this additional claim on my husband's love.

But my theories were all upset. These women were women of the world; they evidently knew what they were talking about. A wave of almost nausea seized upon me. I was so ignorant, it seemed, of ALL that made up the lives of these women. Why, at home, to have a baby in the house was the greatest happiness the young wife could have. I recalled the fuss we all made over a bride when her first baby came, and tears filled my eyes as I thought I never would know anything of that joy. I MUST keep as much of my husband's love as I had. I could not risk it in any way.

To-morrow—No Time For Thought.

WOMAN'S NERVES MADE STRONG

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Winona, Minn.—"I suffered for more than a year from nervousness, and was so bad I could not rest at night—would lie awake and get so nervous I would have to get up and walk around and in the morning would be all tired out. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and thought I would try it. My nervousness soon left me. I sleep well and feel fine in the morning and able to do my work. I gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to make weak nerves strong."—Mrs. ALBERT SULTZE, 603 Olmstead St., Winona, Minn.

How often do we hear the expression among women, "I am so nervous, I cannot sleep," or "it seems as though I should fly." Such women should profit by Mrs. Sultze's experience and give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial.

For forty years it has been overcoming such serious conditions as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, dizziness, and nervous prostration of women, and is now considered the standard remedy for such ailments.

SUFFERED WITH NERVES COULD NOT KEEP QUIET

Diseases of the nervous system are very common.

All the organs of the body may be sound while the nerve centres may be affected.

Many women become run down and wornout by household duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with their nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the shaking nerves, strengthen the weak heart and build up the entire system

Mrs. F. Bailey, 221 Earl St., Kingston, Ont., writes: "I was suffering very much with my nerves, so much so that I could not keep myself quiet at all. I was recommended to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I bought three boxes, and I must say I have derived much benefit from them, so much so that my friends have all noticed the change in me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Song and Addition.

If soldiers be encouraged by the authorities to sing on the march civil servants might be exhorted to lighten their duties in the same way. Sir Laurence Gomme confesses that at the beginning of his official career he used to add up huge columns of figures for statistical purposes by the simple process of doing the task to the tune of Gregorian music, and he was always correct in his arithmetical results. Examples of the practice of performing labor tasks to the accompaniment of music could, Sir Laurence says, be produced from all over the world. He instances the case of the London pavers who until forty years ago or so used to be mulcted by their mates of the price of a pot of ale if they omitted to groan rythmically at each thud of the rammer.—London Standard.

Bean Milk.

"Pigeon milk is a myth," said a milkman, "but there actually is a bean milk. It is drunk, put in tea and coffee and even frozen for ice cream. The Japs are its inventors. This milk is made of the soja bean. The bean is first soaked, then boiled in water. After the liquid turns white sugar and phosphate of potash are added, and the boiling is kept up till a substance of the thickness of molasses is obtained. Nobody could tell this bean milk from condensed milk, and when water is added it can't be told from the fresh. The Japanese poor use nothing else."

Putting It Gently.

"Are you trying to accuse me of overcharging you?" asked the taxicab driver.

"No," replied the man who is mild, but tenacious. "All I say is that your fare indicator ought to be arrested for exceeding the speed limit."—Washington Star.

A PLEA FOR DANGER.

This Writer Argues That Too Much Safety May Breed Weaklings.

In these days of the placarding of "safety first" and the juxtaposition of "safe and sane," is a voice necessarily that of a madman if it be heard in the land singing the praises of danger and risk? With all our laws and movements and committees for the elimination from our daily life of all chances unfavorable to life, limb, health and property are we in no danger of saving the body at the expense of the spirit?

Too great security breeds weaklings and too nervous a regard for physical safety is not only craven but ultimately unwise. Our nation, if it is to be great and free, must set high value on the courage, resourcefulness and high spirit of the individual citizen. Now courage is nourished on dangers coped with, and the prudent soul that always "plays safe" cannot be called high or noble. Our evolution up to this point has always been conditioned by the need of self preservation in the face of innumerable enveloping dangers. The creature that hesitated to take chances or always avoided threatened injury soon ceased to exist, either as species or individual.

Hence our bodies, our minds, our very spirits have been evolved, in part at least, to fulfill this function of coping with some kind of danger. For what purpose our eyes, our ears, our nerves, our muscles, our sense of right and wrong? A removal, then, from our environment of this element of danger tends to be followed by degeneracy and atrophy in all parts of our natures. Indeed, in modern life we are prone to become stall fed in body and spirit. This we tacitly confess in our passion for sport, which is essentially mimic hunting or war and for the vicarious adventure of romantic fiction.—Scribner's.

Heat of a Match Flame.

The flame of an ordinary match has a much higher temperature than is generally known and will melt cast iron or steel filings. Try it by striking a match and sprinkle the filings through the flame. Sputtering sparks will be the result of the melting metal. —Popular Mechanics.

HEADACHE OVER THE EYES? LOOK FOR NASAL CATARRH

Catarrh Never Stops in One Place—It Spreads Rapidly—Often Ruins Health Completely.

In this changeable climate it is the little colds that drift into Catarrh. Unless the inflammation is checked it passes rapidly from the throat or nose to the bronchial tubes and then to the lungs. You can't make new lungs any more than you can make new fingers or toes, but you can cure Catarrh.

The surest cure consists of breathing in the healing balsamic essences of CATARRHOZONE, which is simply a medicated vapor so full of rich curative properties that every trace of Catarrh vanishes before it.

The soothing piney vapor of Catarrhozone is the most powerful medicine I ever used," writes Mrs. Edmond J. Christine, of Saskatoon. "Every breath drawn through the Inhaler sends a grateful feeling through the air passages of the nose and throat. Catarrhozone cured me of frightful headaches over the eyes, relieved me of a stuffy feeling in the nose, and an irritable hacking cough that had been the bane of my life for a year. My general health is greatly improved, my appetite and digestion are considerably better than before. Catarrhozone has been the means of giving me such health as I always desired, but never possessed."

Even though catarrh has a firm hold on you, and affects your throat, nose or ears, you can thoroughly cure it with Catarrhozone. Large size, guaranteed, costs $1.00; smaller size, 50c.; sample size, 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

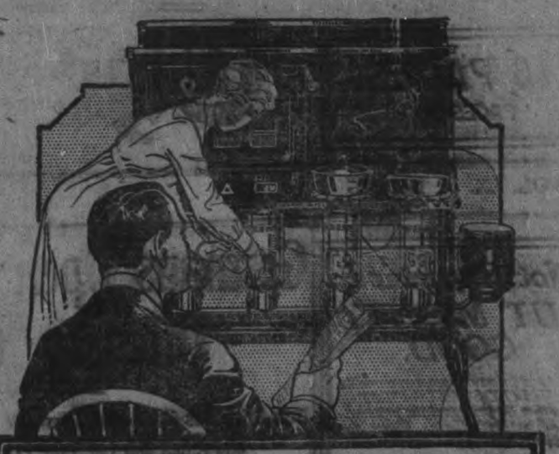
MARBLES OF VERMONT.

They Surpass the Product of Italy's Famous Quarries.

The greatest marble producing industry in the world is no longer to be found in the famous Carrara district of Italy, but in Vermont, where one of the richest veins in the world stretches in an irregular line across the state.

So great is the production of marble in this section that the inhabitants have lost much of their appreciation of its value and use it for such humble and utilitarian purposes as paving, underpinning for barns, hitching posts, stepping stones and drinking troughs for horses. This vein is about fifty-seven miles long, from 1,000 to 2,200 feet in width and runs from 375 to 850 feet in depth, and from it is being taken in enormous quantities white marble that is equal to the finest Italian marble as well as an endless variety of blue, yellow, green and jet black marbles.

For quarrying and finishing the marble the most up to date methods and equipment are used, no part of the work being done by hand that can possibly be done by machinery. Hand methods of drilling, still in vogue in Italy, have been entirely superseded by power driven drills and channeling machines. The blocks as they come from the quarry are handled by derricks and are conveyed in most cases by an inclined railway or a ropeway to the mills, where they are sawed and shaped by power driven machines, only the last delicate stage of polishing being done by hand.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.



COOKING IN COMFORT, AT LAST!

"Well, no more coal or ashes to bother about now. And if my eyes hadn't been opened, you would still be cooking on the coal range all through the summer."

Husbands and sons—if you had to do the cooking, wouldn't you like to do it in the most economical, most efficient, simplest way possible? Save your wife or mother further fuel worries. Buy her a New Perfection Oil Cook Stove—It will mean better cooking, a cleaner, cooler kitchen and less work for her—and for you, economy, comfort and no waiting for meals.

Select the style now that suits the individual need of your home—one, two, three and four burner sizes. Be sure it's the stove with the Long Blue Chimney—and that it has the Cabinet and the New Perfection Oven. They make the stove complete for year-round cooking service.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HER CHOICE

By Louise Hubert Guyol

Copyright, by T. C. McClure

"Now that it is all over, I don't mind telling you that is the girl that I had chosen for you to marry."

She looked up at him over the great bunch of pink roses that she held in her arms and from under the soft cliffon of her white hat, and he looked down at her out of deep set eyes under shaggy brows. Then his glance followed hers down the long distance of the room, resting on the girl who stood there beneath a bower of palms. The cloudy masses of her white veil were thrown back from a face of smiles and blushes as she received congratulations and wondered vaguely at the strange sweetness of it all.

"You—don't—mean—it?" There were great pauses of incredulity between Wilton's words, and the slow smile that came into his eyes was not one of vanity, rather of great pleasure in an unexpected compliment.

"Is she not the girl I have always described? Tall and slender, big brown eyes and soft, curling, light brown hair? You have been blind all this time not to have seen who I meant.

"I DON'T SEE WHY WE DON'T EITHER. DO YOU, MARGARET?

I had set my heart on it somehow," she added sadly. "You both seem so well suited to each other."

"Why did you not tell me sooner? I might have set to work. It would have been hard work, though." He was still looking at the bride.

"Play the part of matchmaker? And where my little sister was concerned? Ah, no! I could not tell you, but I did so want it."

"That is the greatest compliment you could have paid me. I really"—He had turned and was looking down into her eyes. Suddenly he stopped as if a thought had stifled his words, and the color left his face for one short second.

"Come," she said, as though divining his thought and wishing to interrupt it, "you are to make the first toast, I believe. You must continue your duties as best man."

She led the way down the long hall, and together they paused on the threshold of the dining room.

"Did you do this?" he asked.

"Yes. Do you like it?"

He stood silently drinking in the beauty of the room, with its filmy draperies of asparagus fern, amid the delicate green of which stood forth tall silver and crystal vases filled with long stemmed Bridesmaids' roses. Here and there low bowls of green and gold Bohemian glass were half buried beneath the dainty color of the Duchesse rose veiled in leaves of maidenhair. The conventional cake, with its streamers of narrow satin ribbon, shimmered white amid the colors, and the pink shaded candles threw soft reflections over everything.

It was very beautiful, and he said so to her. She was very beautiful as she moved about in her clinging gown of palest green chiffon, straightening a leaf here or bending a flower there, and his eyes said so, although she did not see it.

Then the next thing he knew the room was filled with people, the young bride was beside him, and some one was holding a glass toward him, saying, "Will you not toast them?"

He looked at the bride, bowed and began.

"Hail to thee, blithe spirit!" then stopped, laughing. "That won't do. You are not a skylark."

"She's a bird, though," vehemently interrupted a boy who had adored the girl for years.

"Then I cannot continue at all, for 'bird thou never wert' won't apply. What shall I say?" He looked at the tall man standing near, then into the eyes of the girl bride.

"With thy clear, keen joyance Languor cannot be."

he quoted, then, improvising, continued:

"Mar shadow of annoyance Never come near thee."

He raised his glass and turned toward the groom:

"Thou wilt love and ne'er know love's sad satiety."

And amid a murmur of applause and clinking of glasses the toast was drank. Then some one, taking up the thread of Wilton's thought, began:

"What thou art we know not
What is most like thee?"

And the boy who had used the slang surprised them all by continuing the quotation:

"She is 'like a glowworm golden.' Oh, oh, oh! But 'like a star of heaven in the broad daylight' or 'a rose embowered in its own green leaves.' 'All that ever was joyous and clear and fresh or"—

STOP HEADACHES BEFOREHAND

You never had a headache when you were well.

To keep well is to keep clean, inside.

To relieve headache, and to prevent it, keep the liver active and industrious and the bowels as regular as a clock.

Two generations of healthy, vigorous people have done this by taking one pill at bedtime, regularly—a larger dose when nature gives the warning.

Colorless faces often show the absence of Iron in the blood.

CARTER'S IRON PILLS will help this condition.

"Please," said the bride appealingly, "no more. It is very beautiful, but so embarrassing. I don't deserve it. I am going to drink to Shelley, who taught you to say such beautiful things."

"With such a subject," some one began, but Margaret and her sister had disappeared.

Wilton slipped from the crowded room out into the quiet halls, where he wandered up and down, thinking, wondering how he had not thought the same thing before. All these months past how stupid he had been! Yes, he thought it would do no harm to try his luck. Ah, no; she never would, she could not love him; it was too much to expect. She would look higher and find— But she had chosen him for the little sister, whom he knew she loved better than life. If she thought him good enough for her, would she not be willing to—

The idea had taken so strong a hold upon him from the moment he had looked down into her eyes to thank her for her compliment that now he wondered how he could have been blind to it for so long a time. It seemed to him as if he had never had any other thought than this, as if he could never have any other thought than Margaret. He wondered if—

The carriage was at the door; the bride had her arms about her mother's neck; the groom, already halfway down the steps, was impatiently waiting. A shower of rice filled the air, a white satin slipper shimmered through the shower. With a quick pull the horses started, and the man within the carriage turned from waving a last adieu to the party on the balcony and put his arms about the girl.

"At last I have you safe," he said. "Do you know, I was always afraid of that man Wilton?"

That man Wilton was already following Margaret into the drawing room just as a voice behind them said:

"That's the best fellow in town. I don't see why he and Margaret don't"—

The color rushed over Margaret's face as she glanced up to see if he had heard. The smile in his eyes made her look down again quickly. She walked to the far end of the room beneath the palms where her sister had stood and, stooping, picked up some rose petals that lay scattered at her feet. She did it all unconsciously. When she rose Wilton was standing over her. He took her hands in his, rose petals and all, and looked down into her eyes.

"I don't see why we don't either. Do you, Margaret?"

Some one had gone to a piano, and the strains of the march from "Le Prophete" came to them through the open doors, a breeze softly stirred in the palm leaves above their heads, the pink rose petals slipped from her fingers in a shower down over her gown as she put her hands up on Wilton's shoulders and met his eager, questioning look.

"No—I don't," she said very softly.

Going Too Far.

"Why would not Jiggs patronize the fortune teller? Was he afraid to have his future told?"

"Oh, no; he said he didn't care what she said about his future, but she threatened also to tell his past."—Buffalo Express.

SHOOTING A DEER.

The Tropical Poisoned Arrow Sent Him to Sleep and Death.

Hunting with poison, as practiced by the natives of Brazil and other tropical American countries, is thus described in a communication to the National Geographic society, at Washington, by Dewey Austin Cobb:

"In hunting, the arrows, which are dipped in poison, consist of a point of wood or bone, not more than an inch long and the size of a toothpick, to which is attached a little tuft or hairy fiber of the silk cotton tree. The gun is a straight bamboo tube from five to six feet long, with a sight at one end and a funnel shaped expansion to fit the mouth at the other. The principle is precisely the same as the schoolboy's tube for blowing putty balls, and the accuracy of the natives is wonderful."

Mr. Cobb gives the following description of the shooting of a deer:

"A good sized buck walked out of the corn and stopped, exposing to us its full broadside as we lay some thirty feet away. Our hunter fired. The animal gave a slight start as he felt the prick of the arrow on his flank and turned partly around, sniffing the air for a scent and looking around as if searching for the insect that had bitten him. Detecting nothing, he stood still and unalarmed. At the end of a minute or so his head dropped a little, as if he was sleepy. The hunter stepped out in plain sight. The deer looked at him and moved forward, not away from him, a few steps and stopped. He showed no fear, but simply curiosity.

"My companion and I rose, and the three of us walked quietly within reach of him. He made no movement to run away, but watched us intently and shifted his position a little. His movements seemed perfectly easy and natural. Absence of fear seemed the only observable change until at the end of three minutes or more; then he lay down, not failing, but as naturally as a cow or sheep would do ready for sleep. His breathing seemed easy and natural. At the end of ten minutes, though he opened his eyes when touched, his breath became shorter and slower. Eighteen minutes after he was struck by the arrow he was dead."

Frederick's War on Coffee.

In a manifesto issued by Frederick the Great in 1779 the mighty monarch deplored "the increased consumption of coffee by my subjects and the amount of money that goes out of the country in consequence. Everybody is using coffee. This must no longer be. My subjects must drink beer. His majesty was brought up on beer, and so were his ancestors. Innumerable battles have been fought and won by soldiers nourished on beer, and the king does not believe that coffee drinking soldiers can be depended upon to endure hardships or to conquer his enemies should another war occur." Coffee roasting was made a government monopoly, and a prohibitive price was charged for the berry. "Coffee smellers" were appointed all over Prussia to check illicit roasting. Coffee was therefore ousted from popular favor.—London Chronicle.

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES
ASHAMED TO GO OUT

Many an otherwise beautiful and attractive face is sadly marred by unsightly pimples, blotches, flesh worms and various other blood diseases.

Their presence is a source of embarrassment to those afflicted as well as pain and regret to their friends.

Many a cheek and brow cast in the mould of beauty have been sadly defaced, their attractiveness lost and their possessor rendered unhappy for years.

Why, then, consent to rest under this cloud of embarrassment?

There is an effectual remedy for all these defects.

It is Burdock Blood Bitters. This remedy will drive out all the impurities from the blood and leave the complexion healthy and clear.

Mrs. Katherine Henry, Port Sydney, Ont., writes: "Two years ago my face was so covered with pimples I was ashamed to go out at all. I tried several remedies, but they were of no use. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I got a bottle, and by the time it was used I could see a difference. I then got two more, and when I had used them the pimples were completely gone. I can highly recommend B.B.B."

BLOOD OF THE VIKINGS.

The Men Whose Descendants Conquered Normandy and England.

The vikings and their followers who swarmed up the Seine and the Thames and whose descendants conquered Normandy and then England were bred of long years of independence and property rights, while those they overthrew were dependent and nonland-owners. They were the hardiest and boldest travelers of their time.

The Norwegian sealers still cruise about the sea as far north as it is open, and the history of polar exploration has been associated with Norway from Othar in King Alfred's time to Nansen in our own. In the Shetland islands the people still talked Norwegian in the last century, Greenland and Iceland were colonized from Norway, and from Iceland comes a literature in old Norwegian, still the language of the people, which ranks with the hero tales of the east, of Greece, of Germany and England.

The Orkneys, the Shetlands, the Hebrides and the Isle of Man were possessions of Norway for hundreds of years, and for more than 300 years Norwegian kings ruled in Dublin. Many of the Danes who conquered England were Norsemen, and the conquerors of Normandy were mostly of the Norwegian viking breed.—Price Collier in Scribner's Magazine.

Men and Oaks.

Once as I was botanizing under an oak I found among a number of other plants of similar height one that was dark in color with tightly closed leaves and a stalk that was very straight and stiff. When I touched it, it said to me in firm tones: "Let me alone. I am not for your collection, like other plants to which nature has given only a single year of life. I am a little oak."

So it is with a man whose influence is to last for hundreds of years. As a child, as a youth, often even as a full grown man—nay, his whole life long—he goes about among his fellows, looking like them and seemingly as unimportant. But let him alone. He will not die. Time will come and bring those who know how to value him.—Schopenhauer.

An Unlucky Ring.

Cynicus—I once knew a fellow who gave a girl an engagement ring of opals. Sillicus—Gracious! Wasn't it unlucky? Cynicus—You bet it was! She married him.—Judge.

Success is sweet; the sweeter if long delayed and attained through manifold struggles and defeats.—A. Bronson Alcott.

Proud, of Course.

One very cold day Tom, in his first trousers, was walking out with his tiny overcoat turned back to its utmost limit.

"Tom," said his father, "button your coat."

The boy demurred.

"Look at mine," said his father.

"Yes," said Tom, ruefully, "but everybody knows that you wear trousers."—Current Literature.

Decorated.

He—What have you done with the Jack roses that I sent you yesterday? She—Why, the young man you said would suffer a personal injury if he did not keep away called last evening, and I gave him the roses as a sort of "red badge of courage."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Colds Settled In The Kidneys

Lumbago, Backache and Rheumatism Was the Result—Now Enthusiastic Over Cure Obtained.

CHATTERTON, Ont., March 27. — The kidneys are extremely sensitive to sudden changes of temperature, and much pain and suffering is a frequent result, as all who have had attacks of lumbago and rheumatism know.

The writer of this letter was a great sufferer until she found that by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills she could regulate the action of the kidneys, and thereby remove the cause of lumbago and rheumatism.

Mrs. John Lancaster, farmer's wife, Chatterton, Ont., writes: "We would not want to do without Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in the house, for we have proven their merits in so many cases. I have weak kidneys and whenever I catch cold it settles in the back and develops into lumbago. I used to suffer terribly from lumbago and rheumatism, but find that by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and applying Dr. Chase's Backache Plaster that I obtain the greatest relief, and am soon all right again. My daughter has also used the pills with splendid results, as has also a neighbour woman who suffered greatly from constipation."

LARGE PROFIT FROM THE BY-PRODUCTS OF A FACTORY

Progress Has Been Made in the Utilization of By-Products For Use on the Farm

Many people can still remember the great piles of bone and carrion that once greeted the eye of the prairies around the packing centre of Chicago—a gigantic waste and a nuisance. Buzzards and dogs were there by the thousand. The stench was awful. Then the nuisance itself prompted ways and means for profitable disposal of the bones. Fertilizer was made from them—at a good profit. Then followed means for making profit from the other wastes—hoofs, horns, hair, etc. Now hundreds of commodities are made from what was formerly waste, and the directors of the great packing firms will tell you that meat is often sold at a loss, the profit from the by-products making up for it.

For another example, take the steel industry. From the blast furances there used to escape gases that were a menace to the health of the community. They lighted up the heavens for miles around as they burned. Pure waste of fuel that was, for nowadays those same gases, refined of course, furnish enormous horse power in the way of gas for the engines that run the machinery of the mills.

The Big Waste on the Farm.

There is a waste right at home that might be turned to good profit. The next time you drive to or from town, notice the piles of manure—either in the barnyard or on the field—waiting to be spread, and they'll do a lot of good, but they mean a big waste if they're not spread soon. All the experiment stations tell us that exposure of the manure to the weather for six months means a waste of a half of the plant food in the manure.

This means a bigger loss than most of us realize. The average farm produces 100 tons of manure in a year. It is worth at least $5.50 a ton in crop-increasing, according to the latest reports. So 100 tons is $550 worth. Six months' leaching loses one-half, or $250 worth.

What's the remedy? Frequent spreading. Manure spread on the field either dries out and stops fermenting and losing ammonia, or else the plant food is leached into the soil where it belongs.

But the job is a nuisance. Sure it is—by hand. What about a spreader? That's the idea. Make the job easier and it will be done oftener. The spreader will do the work twice as well, too, making the manure go much farther and breaking up the lumps. Some of those new wide spread machines beat the manure twice and spread it way beyond the wheels.

Spreader Saves $366 on 16 Acres.

The present high prices for farm products make a spreader pay for itself faster than ever before. One Nebraska farmer experimented and found a total gain of $122 for spreader over hand work on six acres of corn and ten of meadow. That was at a time when corn was 50c, and hay $10. The gain would be about three times $122 or $366 now—with prices as high as they are.

Without a doubt the liberal use of spreaders would do more to boost crops in this country than any other one thing. They'd turn a big waste into a big profit— and mighty quick, too.

STARTING A LIBRARY.

A Selection of Ten Books That Might Serve as a Basis.

Laura Spencer Porter, seeking to show how the ordinary person can begin founding a personal library, makes this suggestion as to ten good books to begin with:

"For those who are beginning a library and have little money to spend I would suggest that there be bought, say, one book each of ten great authors. It does not matter who the authors are so long as they stand high and their books are well known and standard ones. Let us take as an example the following ten, chosen at random from a catalogue of standard writers: Emerson, Eliot, Bronte, Ruskin, Carlyle, Dickens, Thackeray, Lowell, Shakespeare, Keats, and as a selection of ten of the books of these ten writers let us take in the same order Emerson's 'Essays,' Eliot's 'Mill on the Floss,' Bronte's 'Jane Eyre,' Ruskin's 'Sesame and Lilies,' Carlyle's 'Heroes and Hero Worship,' Dickens' 'David Copperfield,' Thackeray's 'Pendennis,' Lowell's essays 'Among My Books,' a complete volume of Shakespeare or any one of the Shakespeare plays, preferably 'Lear' or 'Romeo and Juliet' and Keats' 'Poems.'

"Here you have ten books by ten master minds, books widely varied in subject, style, treatment. Let those ten suffice for a time. Read them."—Woman's Home Companion.

HUMAN SOLDER.

The Reason Blood From a Cut Clots and Plugs the Wound.

Why is it that the boy who cuts his finger with a jackknife making a willow whistle does not bleed to death? As a matter of fact, he may if he is what the medical profession call a "bleeder," a condition of things by no means rare and one which every surgeon who undertakes to do even the most minor operation must inform himself about. The bleeder or hemophiliac, as the doctor calls him, is always in immediate danger of just this kind of accident because his blood is lacking in the clotting principle known as fibrinogen.

This principle is a gift from good Mother Nature, or a kind Providence, if you choose, and exists for no other purpose than the saving of human life. When a wound deep enough to injure a vein or artery is made through the skin the blood pours out in considerable quantity, but in a few minutes the current lessens and a congealing mass begins to appear. This means that the fibrin is catching the blood corpuscles and holding them fast like fish caught in a net. The semisolid clot thus formed is the solder which a plumber fuses upon a leaking pipe.

To be sure, this is not a perfect mechanism, for if bleeding is coming from a fair sized artery the blood will spurt out into space, and no clot can form since it is too quickly washed away. Here, however, by another conservative process the blood pressure is reduced, as a result of which the artery begins to contract owing to the elasticity of its walls and to influence of the nervous system, and in this way the hemorrhage will finally cease.

The clot left in the wound soon begins to contract. Water (serum) is forced out, and the remaining substances hold the wound firmly as if in a splint. Then come the blood corpuscles, bringing the materials necessary for reconstruction of the "blood pipe," and in a few days new tissue, penetrated by fine hairlike blood vessels, which can be seen only by a high power microscope, begins to form. In a relatively short time only a thin "scar" remains.—New York World.

A Broken Pledge.

There used to be in Albany an eccentric character named Pete, who pledged himself to be neither shaved nor shorn until Stephen A. Douglas came to the presidency. He did not keep his resolution, however. One day John Morgan, a negro, who had acted as barber for many governors and who described himself on a sign over his shop door in Greene street as a "tonsorial operator and capillary abridger," had a slip pasted on the mirror in front of his "operating chair" on which he had written, "Douglas not elected, but Pete's hair is off."

Amounts to the Same Thing.

Two young Clevelanders met on the street. One of them said:

"Well, I understand that our old friend Griggs has gone and married a wife."

"It's not true. I understand nothing of the sort."

"What? Well, what did you hear about it?"

"I understand that a widow has gone and married our friend Griggs."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Foreign Relations Can't Vote.

"What is your opinion of our foreign relations?" asked the patriotic citizen.

"They don't do you any good," replied the local politician. "What you want is a lot of relations right here in your own country that'll vote the way you tell 'em to."—Washington Star.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Colour and Lustre at Once

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

MODERN WARFARE.

Manning the Trenches and Locating the Enemy by Dust Clouds.

A column of infantry, marching four abreast—the regular marching form—will pass a given point at the rate of 175 a minute. At that rate it will take a division, which contains about 10,000 men, about an hour to pass.

A division, which is the largest body known in the organization of the American army, will fully man two miles of trenches. The regulation distance in the manning of a trench is a yard to a man. There are three lines, however, needed to fully man such defenses—the firing line, which is down in the trench, a yard between each man; the support, which is back a short distance, and the reserve, which is behind the support. These three parts of the defense are of equal size.

In locating an enemy dust clouds are often excellent indications. A low, thick cloud indicates infantry, a high and thin cloud indicates cavalry, while a broken cloud indicates artillery or wagon trains. An experienced scout can closely estimate the character and strength of an enemy solely by the dust cloud.

An aeroplane to be perfectly safe must keep at an elevation of at least 4,000 feet above the ground.

Although the telegraph and telephone have become generally used in battle for purposes of communication, for distances under half a mile the old fashioned courier and horse are still exclusively used. These have been found a swifter and surer means of communication for short distances than either telephone or telegraph.—Washington Star.

THE ENEMY IS BRINGING UP ADDITIONAL REINFORCEMENTS

RUSSIA IS ON VERGE OF ANOTHER REVOLUTION

COUNTER REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENT OF RUSSIA IS GROWING RAPIDLY

People in Petrograd and Moscow Are Living on Restricted Rations —Ultimatum From Germany —An Inside Story From Joseph Shaplen.

BOLSHEVIKI IS DEAD

Joseph Shaplen, who has been in Russia seven months, and who obtained the first authentic declaration of the names and plans of the Bolsheviki through an exclusive interview with Leon Trotszky, has succeeded in penetrating the armies of the warring factions and reaching Stockholm. From this neutral city he cabled to-day the following comprehensive dispatch on present conditions in Russia. All direct despatches from that country have been subjected to delays of many days and even weeks for some time past.

Counter Revolution.

(United Press Service.)

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

STOCKHOLM, June 10.—The counter revolutionary movement in Russia is growing. The Bolsheviki are living their last days. Unless the present regime is overthrown by the combined efforts of other revolutionary democratic parties, there will be a counter revolution, similar to the one which triumphed in Ukrane.

Skoropadsky, aided by the Bourgeois and Cadets is ruling Ukrane, and has virtually restored the old regime. Mannerheim in Finland, and Krasenoff in the Don region, have triumphed in a like manner.

In a similar way the provinces of the Baltic region have been occupied while the provinces of Phskoff and Minske are under the banner of Austro-German imperialism. Russia is threatened by imperialism in the north, west and south. The Turks are again advancing in the Caucasus at Tiflis, with the Germans, who are advancing from the north.

With masked cunning, by friendly notes through German Ambassador Mirbach, Germany is gradually approaching the heart of Russia, in order to pierce it at a desirable moment.

A Final Turn-Over.

An allegiance of German and Russian counter revolutionaries, acting for two fronts—the inner and outer—are preparing for a final and complete counter revolution.

Last week in Moscow a plot was discovered in which hundreds of reactionaries planned to kill the republic and restore the monarchy through simultaneous uprisings in Moscow and Petrograd and other centres, in co-operation with German bayonets.

The German command, of course, is taking no official part in these plots, but is splendidly informed of the position and is ready to appear as protection for the new reactionary regime at the proper moment.

It is still impossible to foretell the immediate developments, but it is certain the brief rest is nearing its end, much as the Bolsheviki seek to lengthen it.

Already a Corpse.

The Bolsheviki themselves admit: "We are already a corpse, but there is no one to bury us."

The Bolsheviki regime due to methods of violence similar to the old Czarism, in an effort to preserve itself, is universally hated. The proletariate are leaving the Bolsheviki en masse. All factory workers in Petrograd have organized. Their conference demanded a re-united democratic front, abrogation of the Brest-Litovsk treaty and the formation of a Socialist party in order to restore and inaugurate social reforms and end civil wars.

The Bolsheviki planned to dissolve the conference, but got cold feet. The

The Enemy Losses Were Very Heavy

Germans Are Anxious to Straighten Out a Couple of Bad Kinks in the New Line

SUNDAY'S ATTACK

(By Henry Wood—United Press Service).

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, June 10.—The present drive on the Montdidier-Noyon front, according to military critics, constitutes the northern area of a vast encircling project aimed against Paris. This movement, starting from the Avre of Montdidier, and being pushed south-west as far as possible towards the capital, would co-ordinate with a sudden enveloping attack from Chateau Thierry, thus seeking to envelope the American and French troops between Montdidier and Chateau-Thierry. They still have a minimum of about fifty unengaged divisions (600,000 men) for their present effort. The determination and resistance of the French who are holding the enemy on the wings and only permitting comparatively slight progress in the centre, has gained sufficient to enable the Allies for the first time since the beginning of the drive in March to bring up reserves before an appreciable amount of ground was lost.

(United Press Service.)

(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, June 10.— Foiled in their effort to penetrate the Oise Valley from the north, and likewise in their more recent attempt to reach the right bank of the river from the east, the Germans have launched a third great attack between Montdidier and Noyon for the purpose of reaching the Oise from the west. The German Staff apparently is obstinately convinced that the Oise Valley offers the most likely opportunity for advancing towards Paris.

The Present Attack.

The present attack also was for the purpose of linking up Montdidier salient, created by the Germans in their March offensive, with the Chateau-Thierry salient created during the past two weeks' advance. Unless the Germans can straighten out their lines between these two pockets, a further advance along either one would be exceedingly difficult.

Initial Gain.

Sunday's attack, launched by Gen. Von Huber, was followed by the same tactics which characterized the Boche's offensive efforts. They made an initial gain through a surprise attack—by concentrating troops far in the rear and rushing them up during the night. Then, following a brief but intense bombardment, from midnight until four in the morning, during which gas was used extensively — the German infantrymen rushed to the assault in successive waves.

Despite the Huns' effort at secrecy and their use of gas, French artillery was able to maintain a counter preparation throughout the enemy bombardment, while French infantrymen, falling back under the first inevitable shock, put up their first definite resistance in their covering zone, just outside the range of the Germans' mounted trench mortars.

Fierce Attacks.

The desperation with which the Germans launched their new assault is indicative of their realization of absolute necessity of ending the war before the Americans' full strength is felt. Their realization unquestionably has been hastened by the discov-

OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE

French and American Forces Gave the Germans a Hard Battle All Day Yesterday—Prisoners Captured

HEAVY LOSSES INFLICTED

PARIS, June 10.—New German attack on the front between Montdidier and Noyon continued last night with undiminished violence, the War Office announced. On the French front the enemy attacks time after time were broken up by the French fire.

In the centre the enemy, bringing up reinforcements, made further progress reaching the southern part of Ouvilly Wood and Ressons-Surmatz. French and American troops continuing their attacks in the region of Brussiares on the Marne front, gained more ground and took prisoners.

On the French right wing along the front of the new attack, bitter fighting continues. The French took more than five hundred prisoners in various engagements. Prisoners report unanimously that the losses of the Germans thus far in the battle, which began yesterday, have been extremely heavy.

The Statement Follows:

The German push was continued yesterday evening and last night. On the French left wing violent attacks were renewed on several occasions, but they were broken by the French fire and by the counter attacks of our troops. The town of Courcelles was captured and recaptured and finally remained in our hands. On the right French forces maintained their positions to the south-east of Ville. Here there was bitter fighting. The French took more than 500 prisoners in the course of these various engagements. On the centre the enemy endeavoured by bringing in fresh forces, to continue his progress. He was successful in reaching the southern edge of Cuvilly Wood and Ressons-Sur-Mats, on the Plateau of Bellinglise. Further to the east the fighting was continued in Thiescourt Wood. According to unanimous reports of prisoners the battle, up to the present time, has cost the enemy enormous losses. To the north of Rheims there has been fairly spirited artillery fighting. French forces completed the operation upon which they embarked yesterday to the east of Hautebraye and took 150 prisoners. Between the Rivers Ourcq and the Marne, French forces repulsed several German attacks east of Vinly. Continuing their progress in the region of Brussaires, French and American troops gained ground, brought the number of prisoners up to 250 and captured 30 machine guns.

The Machinery Was Destroyed

Bernstorff Realized Worthlessness of Hun Promise and Made Preparations For the Inevitable

ONE INSTANCE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

SCHNECTADY, N.Y., June 10.—Prussianism and the idea of an enduring peace among nations can never be brought into harmany. A compromise cannot even be considered," Robert Lansing, Secretary of State, declared here to-day in an address as Honorary Chancellor of Union College for 1918. Instance after instance, from his own experience the head of the United States Foreign Office were cited to prove his beliefs, he asserted: 'Americans, even those intelligntly aquipped, have but vague ideas of the attitude which made Prussianism possible."

A Case in Point.

"It is a fact not generally known," said Secretary Lansing, "that within six weeks after the Imperial Government had, in the case of the Sussex, given this Government its solemn promise that it would cease ruthless slaughter on the high seas, Count Von Bernstorff appreciating the worthlessness of the promise, asked the Berlin Foreign Office to advise him in ample time before the campaign on submarine murder was renewed in order that he might notify the German merchant ships in American harbours to destroy their machinery because he anticipated that the renewal of that method of war would in alal probability bring the United States into the war."

PARIS, June 10.—"It was a perfectly satisfactory day," said Premier Clemenceau last night. In these words the French Premier accurately summed up the prevailing impression.

Latest advices from the battle front show that on the whole the enemy clearly suffered in the day's operation, very severely.

Enemy Attacks Are Beaten Off

Americans Captured a Couple of Positions—American Artillery is Active on Noyon Front

LINE ADVANCED

(United Press Service.)

(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, June 10.— While the fourth phase of the German offensive is breaking out between Noyon and Montdidier, the Americans continue to hold firm on the Marne front.

In addition to beating off two enemy attacks on Bouresches (five miles west of Chateau Thierry), and an assault against Hill 204, they advanced and occupied the edge of the wood west of Vaux, two miles west of Chaeau Thierry, and penetrated a portion of the outskirts of Chateau-Thierry, which was still occupied by the Germans. Later they returned to their own positions from this latter advance.

The Boches continued to shell Belleau Wood (five miles west of Chateau-Thierry) but the marines were still holding that place. The American lines in Picardy west and northwest of Montdidier were bombarded in connection with the German artillery preparation for the attack between Noyon and Montdidier. The American artillery responded to the enemy fire with a strong counter bombardment.

TOO EARLY TO FORECAST

Sir Eric Geddes Discusses the Submarine Warfare Off the American Coast

"SPORADIC RAID"

(By Arthur E. Minn — United Press).

LONDON, June 10.—"It is too early yet to forecast what the presence of a German submarine off the American coast may pertain," said Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, in an interview with the United Press to-day.

"On one hand it may be merely a sporadic raid similar to that carried out by the U53 earlier in the war. Or it may mean the beginning of a serious submarine campaign off the American coast. The vigorous and successful British anti-submarine campaign in our waters has made submarine operations very costly to the Germans, and perhaps they calculate on getting better results along the American coast. In this, however, they will undoubtedly be disappointed, since all our experience over here has been placed at the service of the American administration, which will thus be able to base its anti-submarine measures on practical results.

"There is no indication that there has been a sudden increase in the number of enemy submarines; on the contrary there is no doubt we are sinking submarines faster than the Germans are building them."

An Advantage.

In response to questions, Sir Eric then outlined the course of German submarine strategy since the outbreak of the war." At first the submarines operated fifty miles or so from the British coast," he said. "After a little time our defences in that vicinity became too good for them to combat, and they were forced to within ten miles of their coast, where for some time they managed to sink a number of coastwise and unattached and merchant ships. Again our defences overcame them and forced them to operate far out to sea, whereupon we introduced the convoy system and foiled them once more. Now they are trying the same thing off the American coast, where they will be defeated by the same tactics as over here."

Sir Eric pointed out that there is some advantage in forcing the submarines to operate further from the German bases.

"The longer they have to travel to their operating zone the less fuel and supplies they will have, and consequently the less time they will have to spend in the operating zone."

Types of Submarines.

In reply to a question regarding the type of submarines operating in American waters, the First Lord declared: "Possibly a submarine of the converted Deutschland type is being used. I do not believe she is of the much talked of giant submarine type, but is probably of a type with a long cruising and operating radius."

Sir Eric said it is possible the Germans might have been able to establish fuel depots on the American coast in some isolated point, but he does not believe a submarine base has been established.

"A submarine base means more than a fuel depot," he said. "It includes a repair dock. After a submarine has been out for three weeks it usually needs overhauling. It is pretty difficult to establish such a base on a hostile coast. There would be much more chance of establishing it on a less carefully guarded neutral coast."

Attack Transports.

Geddes thought it was difficult to say what classes of ships submarines would attack in future, but believed any attacks on American troop transports would inevitably rebound against Germany by increasing America's determination and adding to the severity of her fighting.

He plainly indicated his belief that this is the last desperate phase of the German submarine piracy. "It should not cause any additional anxiety regarding the submarine situation," he said, "but should only cause a searching of their hearts by the German people who have been tricked into believing the submarines will win the war for them."

THE PRESENT OFFENSIVE

Hindenburg's Latest Attack is Reproduction of 1914 Campaign —Attempt to Outflank the Allies

OFFICIAL BULLETINS

LONDON, June 10.— The German attack is directed immediately against Compiegne or part of Compiegne, as against Paris, according to the unanimous newspaper comment. In the opinion of some commentators in the morning newspapers, the section attacked is a vital one because of various detached heights which lie across the head of the valley of the Oise and its great railway and road to Paris. Any important gain in this direction would, it is remarked, bring the enemy out into the level country towards St. Just and Olermont and enable him to avoid a frontal attack on the forests of Compeigne and Villers Cotterets, which are of great value to the Allies for defensive purposes. Such gain it is held, would probably compel a readjustment of the Allied front other object of the new attack is to other object of the new attack is to be the attempt to outflank the French line in the Soissons sector.

British Official.

LONDON, June 10. — German troops last night attacked British positions in Aveluy Wood to the north of Albert, the War Office announced to-day. Enemy was repulsed. Text of the statement reads:

"We carried out a successful raid yesterday on a German post in the sector north-east of Bethune.

"A hostile attack during the evening upon one of our posts in Aveluy Wood was repulsed."

Line Improved.

Canadian Press:

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, June 10.—Considerable local improvement of the British line just to the south of the Somme was effected last night through a slight advance carried out in the neighbourhood of Bouzencourt. Otherwise the night was generally quiet and the situation unchanged. Raids and outpost actions comprised the remainder of the infantry activity. The enemy shelling, which was so heavy on the British right wing Saturday night and Sunday morning preceding the attack against the French, has again dropped to normal.

Strategy of 1914.

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, June 10.—Von Hindenburg's new offensive between Montdidier and Noyan is an attempt to capture the important French communications centre at Compiegne and duplicate Von Kluck's famous advance on Paris during the early weeks of the war.

Von Hindenburg is returning, in fact, to the original German strategy of 1914. In all its essential details this month's advance to the Marne is no more than a reproduction of the drive directed over the same ground in the summer of 1914 by the Saxon General, Von Hausen, while the present advance toward Compeigne is a re-acceptance of the strategic policy of Von Kluck.

Both Von Hausen and Von Kluck are now in retirement because of their failures. Their impetuous efforts were overcome by Gen. Foch's famous counter offensive south of the Marne, and Gen. Foch now faces the same situation that confronted Marshal Joffre in Aug. 1914. Even the time element is operating now as it did then when the Germans sought in 1914 to capture Paris and so found the way in the west before Russia

REGISTRATION COMPULSORY.

In spite of the notices, official and otherwise, that have been published during the past few weeks in regard to the National Service Registration, there are people who still ask the question, "Do I have to register?" The attention of these individuals and of all citizens is called to the most instructive article on the subject by Mr. F. H. Dobbin, Registrar for West Peterboro, which appears elsewhere in this issue, and which besides covering the duty of citizens in regard to the matter thoroughly, gives some idea of the immensity of the undertaking.

Two of the chief points touched on by Mr. Dobbin may be reiterated in these columns. In the first place, readers of The Examiner should thoroughly understand that every man and woman living in Canada, whether a British subject or not, must register, if he or she has reached age of sixteen. The only residents of Canada who are exempt from registration are those who are under sixteen. As Mr. Dobbin points out, even the sick and the bed ridden must be registered, although, of course, provision will be made to have the registration taken at their homes. There are heavy penalties for failure to register, and there are also heavy penalties for giving false answers to the questions.

A second important feature of the registrar's instructions is the desirability of having as many people as possible register during the week before registration day, which is Saturday, June 22nd. Arrangements are being made to have the booths open each evening during the preceding week, and it is strongly urged that every person who can take advantage of these evening sessions will do so in order to lighten the work on Saturday as much as possible. There is no need of waiting until the last day to register, and by attending to this most important duty early in the week you will materially help the officials. There will be registration bureaux in all parts of the city and county and no one will have to go far from home to carry out his duty.

As intimated on Saturday, The Examiner will be glad to answer any inquiries from citizens who are in doubt as to any phase of the registration proceedings. If there is any point concernig which you wish to secure information, a letter addressed to the Editor of The Examiner will be answered in the following issue.

And once again, remember, if you are sixteen years or older, YOU MUST REGISTER.

WHAT ABOUT WOOD?

According to the monthly bulletin of the Commission of Conservation, one of the chief duties of the Fuel Commissioner appointed in the various municipalities is developing the demand for and supply of wood and other coal substitutes to the greatest possible extent. Is Peterborough as a city doing anything along this line? This is a pertinent question at the present time, when the prospects for next winter are far from bright and when the advice that comes from those who are closest in touch with the situation is the securing of a supply of wood.

"So far as wood fuel is concerned," says Conservation, "experience has shown that in many cases the establishment of municipal wood yards offers the most practicable solution of the problem to supplement the efforts of the regular dealers. This has already been done by a number of the municipalities of Eastern Canada, but the situation justifies the further extension of this movement."

The present aspect of the coal situation is set forth by the Conservation Commission as follows:

A sense of false security is one of the most subtle and dangerous conditions that afflict society. During the winter of 1917-18, Canada and the United States narrowly escaped a fuel famine. Owing to the entrance of the United States into the war, matters were decidedly worse in 1918 than in the year previous, in spite of the efforts to remedy the situation. The coal was not available because transportation in the United States was held up for weeks at a time, in order to facilitate the shipment of troops and war materials.

There are indications that we may experience the same shortage next winter. Already large shipments of coal are being stalled in American railway yards. This, in turn, is making itself felt at the mines. Most coal mines have no storage yards, and, if cars are not available to remove the output, the mines close. As a result, labour conditions at the mines are being seriously upset. The scale of wages is based on the tonnage mined, and any falling off in production results in a serious hardship to the miners. It has been stated that miners who formerly earned $50 to $60 a week are now earning only $10 to $12. During the past winter, many of them would have been almost destitute if the mining companies' stores had not advanced them credit for goods. The continued lack of work is driving great numbers of miners into other industries, and, even if transportation improves, it will be difficult to get them to return to the mines.

These conditions should be faced fairly. A false feeling of security, with its inevitable corollary of lazy indifference now, will mean hardship and suffering next winter. Central Canada, from Montreal to the western boundary of Ontario, is entirely dependent on the United States for its coal supply. Every consumer should during the summer put in the maximum permitted by the Fuel Controller, namely 70 per cent. of his normal consumption. In addition, wood and other fuel to replace the 30 per cent. deficiency should be procured.

SERIOUS CONDITIONS.

The resolution passed by the farmers' convention in Toronto last week in regard to conditions on Canadian farms is a serious one, and the state of mind of the farmers is evidenced by the decision to cable Premier Lloyd George asking for the facts as to the need of men compared with the need of food. This suggestion, made by Mr. H. R. Cowan, of Peterborough, was approved of, and President Wood of the National Council of Farmers, will be asked to carry out the proposal.

The charge that many farms have been left without a man on them, and that a large number of farms will soon pass out of cultivation, will surprise many city dwellers who, although they realized that the farmers would be under a disadvantage because of the cancelling of exemptions, had no idea that the conditions were as bad as the statements made by delegates show them to be. The resolutions passed by the convention were as follows:

"1. That because of the working of the order-in-Council of April 20th, relating to the M.S.A., many farms have been left without a man on them; the stock not is being cared for, and an alarmingly large number of farms wil soon pass out of cultivation.

(2) "The farmers, knowing the seriousness of the situation, are losing confidence in the Government, and a serious condition of unrest is prevalent in the country and is growing.

(3) "That the order-in-Council modifying provisions of order-in-Council of April 20th is not working out satisfactorily."

NO CAUSE FOR GLOOM.

The German drive on the Aisne seems to be definitely at an end; the pressure of the allied reserves has checked the on-rush of Hindenburg's forces, and for a time the storm on that sector is over. That there will be other blows against the allied lines in the near future, cannot be doubted, in fact one has developed now north of Montdidier, but everywhere throughout allied countries there is confidence in the valour of the fighting forces and faith in the judgment of General Foch. The gallant fighting of the American troops on the Chateau Thierry front in he pas few days, is a happy omen, the significance of which will not be under-estimated by the German leaders, as intimated by the London Times, which says:

"It means that the last great factor between autocracy and freedom is coming into effective play on the battlefield. It means that they have but to hold the gap a little longer before their comrades from across the ocean come in armies pledged never to sheathe the sword until it has swept Prussian militarism from the earth, and established the reign of justice and peace. There can be no reflections more heartening for the allies or more dismaying to their adversaries."

The New York Journal of Commerce sizes up the situation as follows:

"What is the object of the last German drive. One or all of these three things: To cut out a free passage to the Channel ports; to command an unobstructed road to Paris; to divide, defeat and demoralize, the allied armies. To the attainment of the first end no tangible progress has been made; towards the second, the advances are much more impressive on the map than they are in reality, for the sufficient reason that the third and vital, and indeed the controlling, achievement can be safely claimed to be as far off as ever. The German High Command have to make the most of the impression they have made on the war map. A long list of captured villages, let alone, 'extensive munition depots, railway trains, and hospital establishments,' with Soissons in their possession and Reims about to follow, sound enough like the certainty of coming victory to arouse the lagging confidence of the German people, and to damp the spirits of those among their enemies who, like them, regard the show rather than the substance of events. But it may be confidently asserted that the German Headquarters Staff are in no position to share the jubilation they are trying so hard to excite. To their vision, the force of allied resistance remains unimpaired and any apparent diminution of it has to their certain knowledge been effected at a totally disproportionate lessening of the weight and capacity of their own offensive."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The United Farmers of Ontario, who imagine htey have had troubles in the past, are going to find out now what troubles really are. They are about to start a paper.

Wonder if the Food Controller has noticed the advertisement of the Toronto baker who calls attention to the merits of his bread at meal-times and in between—not much help in a wheat-saving campaign.

Three days leave home after fourteen weeks in quarantine at Kingston, is not very generous treatment for the Peterboro soldiers in the depot battalion, especially as most of them have been warned that they are to be moved east for further training.

The letters from Lieutenant Lorne McIntyre, of the Royal Flying Corps, and well-known to hockey fans as a member of the season before last Peterboro Junior O.H.A. team, which appeared on Saturday, were among the most interesting The Examiner has published from the western front. The story of the thrilling battle with Richtofer's famous circus, was a most engrossing narrative.

Lieut. McIntyre is one of the many Peterboro hockey players who are in the big game overseas. Incidentally it may be mentioned that Roy Cherrett, the captain of last season's juniors, who does not reach the draft age for another year, has joined the Royal Air Force as a cadet, and is now on the reserves, waiting for a chance to begin training.

THISTLES WIN GOOD GAME FROM THE RIVERSIDES

Exhibition Battle at Riverside Park Provided Good Ball —Unassisted Double Play in Ninth With Bases Full Saved the Game For the Winners—League Opens Next Saturday.

The quality of ball played in the exhibition game at the Riverside Park on Saturday between the Thistles and Riversides, augurs well for the success of the City League which opens this week. The Thistles secured the decision by an eye-lash, beating Manager Solomon's team 6 to 5, after an exciting game, an unassisted double play by McLeod, Thistles' second baseman, after the Riversides had loaded the sacks, withonly one out in the ninth, providing a sensational wind-up to a good battle.

The twirlers, Neary for the winners, and Kirn for the Thistles, had the edge on the batters all the way, and with perfect support there would have been very little scoring. The winners got away to a good start, scoring all their runs in the first three nings, and after that were held safely by Kirn's slants, while the Riversides kept hammering along until an eighth inning rally gave them four runs. They went right back in the ninth for more and filled the bases, but McLeod dragged down Smyth's torrid liner, and the game was over.

Riversides scored in the first on Sheehy's clean single to left. Guerin's infield out, Neary's low throw to second, and a timely single by McCarney, but Thistles evened up in their half on a pass to McLeod, the latter's stolen base and Neary's safety.

In the second, the Thistles chased four runs over, Jackson singled, and Moore was safe on Kirn's fumble. Cupoli hit to Kirn, who tossed Jackson out at third. Field threw wild to second in trying to complete a double play and Moore and Cupoli moved up a peg. Mahood walked, filling the bases, and then Cherrett pasted one over Murphy's head in left, driving in two runs. McLeod fanned but McCarney missed Murphy's drive, and two more counters came over. Neary's strike out ended the innings. A pass to Jackson and a couple of errors gave the Thistles their last run in the third.

The Riversides did not score again until the eighth. Kirn was walked to start with but was forced by Sheehy. A single by Guerin, Smyth's fielder's choice, Cherrett's miss of McCarney's grounder, an infield out, and Murphy's failure to hold Phelan's fly, gave the Solomon outfit four runs.

Westfall and Kirn singled to begin the ninth and after Sheehy had popped to Cherrett, Guerin was hit, filling the bases. Almost anything would have tied the score and with the infield playing in Smyth tried to drive one over their heads. McLeod made a beautiful catch of the hard smash, touched second for a double play, and it was all over.

The snappy fielding of McLeod and Cherrett for the Thistles was a feature, McLeod handling nine chances without a skip, while Cherrett had one fumble in ten chances. Mr. A. Johnston umpired satisfactorily.

The score:

THISTLES.

Shocker To Take His Regular Turn

Pitcher in Deferred List and All St. Louis Glad.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Urban Shocker has succeeded in proving to his home draft board at Detroit that he is entitled to a deferred draft classification because of dependents, and in consequence there is joy in St. Louis. Shocker, according to unofficial records, has won four games for the Browns, losing one. Last week he let the Tigers down with three hits, beating them, and his work ever since he became available for service following his injury in the opening game of the season at Chicago has been magnificent.

The fact that Shocker will be retained by Fielder Jones probably until the end of the season renews confidence that the Browns have a chance this season. The last batting averages showed them to be leading the league in club hitting, with the splendid percentage of .282. At the Polo Grounds they appeared to be one of the fastest teams afoot in the American League.

Jones at that time said his team had the ability to go a long way in the race this year if it received any kind of pitching. He expected to lose Shocker, and seemed to think that the difference between a winning and losing flinging staff was wrapped up in that loss. Now that Shocker will take his regular turn for the Browns, and with Sisler hitting his usual .350, and stealing all bases in sight, it might be well to keep an eye on old "Barbwire" and his underlings.

THE KING OF ENGLAND.

No British Commoner Has the Legal Right to Talk to Him.

It is not generally known that there is no right of personal audience of the king of England, and yet it is a well recognized point of constitutional law.

No commoner in the land can claim any such privilege as of right under English law. The matter is one of special privilege even to the members of the house of commons who may have occasion to consult the king on state affairs. Even in such cases the audience is not personal to any member of the house.

"Freedom of access," as it is constitutionally called, is allowed to members of the house of commons through the personality of the speaker. The speaker claims the privilege from the crown through the lord chancellor at the opening of every parliament, the form of request being that the commons "may have access to his majesty's royal person whenever occasion shall require."

The title of speaker, as applied, somewhat to the bewilderment of the ordinary mortal, to the one member of the house of commons who never by any chance makes a speech, really marks his duty of representing his fellow members in this way in necessary interviews with the monarch. He is the speaker for them all.

In the case of members of the house of lords the privilege of audience is personal, as the peers are individually hereditary counselors of the crown. It need not be exercised through the lord chancellor, who, indeed, is not necessarily a member of the house of lords at all.—London Cor. New York Sun.

War of the Three Petticoats.

A slighting reference by Frederick the Great to Mme. Pompadour, who was the ruling power in France for a score of years in the days of Louis XV., was one of the chief causes of the Seven Years' war, called by a witty Frenchman the "war of the three petticoats" from the fact that Mme. Pompadour of France, Maria Theresa of Austria and Catherine II. of Russia were on the same side in it.

Conditions In India Vividly Portrayed By Rev. Dr. Wilkie In St. Paul's Church Sunday

Speaker Says the People of India Know in Their Hearts That Their Own Religion Has Failed Them

POWER OF PRAYER

A vivid and colourful picture of conditions in India was delivered yesterday morning at St. Paul's Church by the Rev. Dr. Wilkie, head of the Presbyterian Church in India. Dr. Wilkie has been thirty-nine years in India and is a fluent linguist in many of the dialects of that country.

He says that people of India know in their hearts that their own religion has failed them. They have made enormous sacrifices for religion and yet they still continue in their abject slavery.

The Holy Man.

One day I was walking along a country road when I noticed one of those so-called holy men who swarm by tens of thousands all over India. He had the usual ochre robe on. I gave the usual salutation in Hindustan, but he at once said "Good morning" in English, I went over to the tree and sat down with him. This man came of one of the very best families in India, his wealth was fabulous even in that wealthy land. He had gone to Calcutta University and from there he had gone to Oxford in England, yet he had returned to his native land, given up home and wealth to become a wondering holy man, why? Because early in life he had become a follower of a Hindu prophet who was trying to get in communication with God. That was this young man's great aim. He said he was disgusted with Christianity in England.

"Churches in England are as thick as mushrooms and bibles are on every table," he said.

I asked him if he had ever read the bible.

"No" was his answer.

"Why should I the Christians don't believe in it. You have a form of worship of Sunday and are atheists on week days. What part does religion take in your social domestic and political life", he demanded of me.

"Can This be True?"

I am sorry to say that this bright young man did not become a Christian, he had become prejudiced against Christianity because of the acts of the so-called Christians in India and England. Oh, how I wish that he had met some of the real devoted families in England. But some of the Hindus realized that their religion is not right. They respond to our teachings wonderfully. Every half mile or so, you see one village after another. And this extends for hundreds of miles. And yet in that large field they never had had a chance. When me try to tell them of the love of God, they say:—

"Can this be true. How is it He told you and not us. Are we not as good as you."

What are we to answer to that.

If we are to judge by your periodicals and newspapers, India has but little place in your hearts. The most serious conditions exist today in England, the most serious since British "raj" began not leaving out the Indian meeting. This can be blamed for the agitation for home rule. A hundred years ago when the missionaries began their work in India, the Brahmins said we were wasting our efforts.

"See that sand hill," said one Brahmin. "Shoot your rifle into it and you will make as much impression as you will on the people of India."

A Low Caste Man.

Today we have pulled the haughty Brahmin down from his high estate which they had occupied for centuries. No wonder they hate us, no wonder they will enter any plot to utterly destroy us. There is the case of a low caste man who has reached the highest honours. Years ago he was so low that on some streets he was not allowed to walk. He would consider it a great privilege to go round by the back of a Brahmin's house in order to get by. But unfortunately for the Brahmin, the British Government does what is fair for all classes. His talent was recognized and he was sent to college. He received the highest honours and is now in control of the huge city of Lucknow. Such is British fair-play in India. Do you wonder that these Brahmins hate us and will attempt anything to overthrow us. And Mrs. Besant an Englishwoman mind you has come to India and added fuel to the fire.

Home Rule in India.

Worst still home rule in India is backed up by a certain class in England. Democracy is the cry here, it is the cry all over, what has democracy done for Mexico, for Russia? When a country is unprepared to receive it, democracy means either oligarchy or anarchy. Only 2 per cent of the people of India want home rule. The other 98 per cent are absolutely against it. And yet this 2 per cent have the audacity to say that they represent the sentiment of England. In England the agitation is even worse than it is in India. So bad has it become that the British Government have sent out Mr. Samuel Montague, former secretary of state for India to see what can be done. There is also social and religious unrest in India. Every religious movement is towards Christianity. The educated men of India are so thoroughly ashamed, that they refuse to recognise their own religion. In order to keep these young men to the old faith a famous Brahmin has thrown out all the old Hindu gods and now only one God is recognised.

You know Hinduism rests on the caste system and if the caste system is destroyed, the caste system falls. Yet this famous Brahmin has advocated this in order to hold the young men. He has also added the transmigration of souls. That is that a man has eight million, four hundred thousand births. Also another one, you can marry one woman or you can marry a dozen, if you can keep them or they can keep you which amounts to the same thing in India.

This licentiousness was granted so that the young man would not grasp Christianity.

Power of Prayer.

Dr Wilkie went on to tell what prayer had done in India.

"I would rather have your prayers than all the gold in Canada" he said.

If we have any success in the missionary field we owe it to the prayers of the people at home. We have tried to imitate the Indian method of teaching and so far have succeeded. At first the Christian converts were dreadfully persecuted, but now since there are so manw (we have now over 4,000,000) they know if they harm one they are insulting the whole body. All of our Christian converts are very poor. As a consequence, we have not a self-supporting mission in the length or breath of India. Some are actually so poor that they can obtain only one meal a day. We try to settle them on free land. Already we have bought over 1800 acres. New modes of agriculture are shown them and now many of them are wealthy and are leaders in their own community. Dr. Wilkie showed a white sheet which was one blur of names, each name representing a village. His district contains over 9 millions of people.

"More people than there are in Canada, from Vancouver to Halifax, and that is my task" concluded Dr. Wilkie.

CONQUEST OF THE EARTH.

Man's Battle For Fruitful Fields Against Nature's Barriers.

Nature has set up four kinds of barriers to man's conquest of the earth—mountains, forests, deserts, rivers. The first he cannot remove; so he bores holes through them for his railways. The second he has, most unwisely, largely cleared away altogether. The third he is beginning to treat like the forests. The fourth he is shifting to suit his purposes and to regulate their flow at will.

Man flies now over all boundaries. He cuts through isthmuses to remove the barriers between the seas.

Into the deserts man sends railroads, telegraph lines, irrigation engineers. The Great American desert marked upon the atlases of our fathers has ceased to exist. The vast desert of northwestern Canada has become a prairie of waving wheat. The Landes of Gascony are now much more than half covered with pine trees. Over 22,000 square miles of the Algerian desert has been made fruitful by artesian wells. The Australian desert is rapidly being irrigated and turned into grazing land. Almost 70,000 square miles of desert in India have been reclaimed. Operations are now in progress for reclaiming 19,000 square miles of the delta of the Tigris and Euphrates, and more than 4,000 square miles of the Gezireh plain between the Blue and the White Nile are being transformed into cotton plantations.

Thus is man by obliterating natural barriers improving upon nature.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Dickens' Full Name.

Charles Dickens was christened Charles John Huffam, or Huffham, as it is erroneously entered in the parish register. But when he became famous he dropped the last two Christian names, as he desired to be known as plain Charles Dickens, a wish respected on his tombstone in Westminster abbey, by his biographer and friend, John Forster, and by the scrupulously accurate Dictionary of National Biography.

Ceremonial Citron.

A valuable and somewhat curious variety of citron is cultivated along the shores of Albania, western European Turkey. It is known as the "casenta" or "esrog" (Hebrew). It is a small citron, weighing not more than twenty-five drams, just large enough to be held in the hand, and is thus used in the religious ritual by the Jews all over the world during the celebration of their feast of tabernacles. Such citrons, if sufficiently small, without blemish and possessing somewhat extended nozzles, are valued at from $4 to $10 each. These citrons are mostly exported from Parga, Turkey, and not from Corfu, as is generally supposed. A few are said to grow near Diakovto, Greece.

BEDLAM LET LOOSE WHEN PETERBORO' MAN GOT UP TO DEFEND THE NEWSPAPERMEN

Farmers Will Ventilate Views in Their Own Paper—Shares to the Amount of $25,000 Auctioned Off at the Big Meeting in Toronto

ONTARIO EDITORS SCORED

TORONTO, June 10.—The daily press of Toronto was roundly condemned by the farmers' convention held Friday and Saturday in Toronto, and the one speaker who attempted to defend the papers was shouted down. A resolution was passed that the farmers should secure a paper of their own and $25,000 was promised to be used for this purpose.

The suggestion was made that a well known weekly farmers' paper should be bought out and that a joint stock company should be formed by the U.F.O. with the share at $50.

"Do you want a weekly or daily?" queried the chairman of the committee.

"Daily," they yelled.

"A daily will cost more," said the chairman.

"It will cost a million," said another.

"I'm a lover of literature," said a man at the back of the hall. "I can't find anything interesting in the daily press. Let us have a daily paper and get something worth reading." (Cheers).

J. J. Morrison, secretary of the association, drew the attention of the meeting to an editorial which stated that the most of the farmers had voted for Laurier at the first election.

"Did you not vote for the Union Government at the last election?" he asked.

"Sure we did," declared some of the delegation, but their words were drowned out in a loud chorus of no's.

"The city press is in the hands of certain interests that are definitely antagonistic to the farmers," declared one of the speakers. "Unless we can get some mouthpiece our educational work cannot be carried out."

Bedlam Let Loose.

A perfect bedlam was let loose when H. B. Cowan, editor of the Farm and Dairy of Peterborough, attempted to defend the editors of the city papers. "The farmer may have reason to complain of the dailies in the city, but it is largely due to the misunderstanding that exists between the city people and the farmers," he said. "I don't know of a single editor who is knowingly unfair to the farmer."

At this point Mr. Cowan was interrupted for several minutes while the farmers shouted for him to sit down or retract what he said.

"The trouble is that the reporters are city trained men," he said.

"But they are coming out to help on the farms," shouted a delegate.

"Surely the editors are acquainted with Canadian history," said a second.

"Let us clear up the misunderstanding," pleaded Mr. Cowan.

"You can't do it," shouted the farmers.

Finally Chairman Halbert prevailed on them to hear the speaker.

"Mayor Church wanted to have a stand in with the city people, so he said that the farmers should be compelled to sell milk at lower prices," said Mr. Cowan.

"We shall sell our cows first," declared a farmer.

"No paper can live on its subscriptions," asserted Chairman Halbert. "It lives on its advertising. The business men will strangle your paper by not advertising in it. The only way is to make the business houses finance your paper by allowing no other paper in your home."

Subscribe For Newspaper.

Mr. R. W. E. Burnaby suggested that the Ontario farmers' paper be run along the same line as the Grain Growers' Guide.

"We have got to have a clean paper," he said, "but I want to tell you it can be a pretty dirty paper and still be one of the cleanest papers in the country.

"How many are prepared to subscribe $50 or more?" asked Mr. Burnaby.

Five men stood up, and upon a second appeal about as many more arose.

"Come on now, you clapped loud enough," urged the speaker and the number of those standing was augmented by two score.

"If more don't stand up you may as well all sit down—you'd get only enough money to get out one issue."

The final number who arose was probably 150, and cards were sent around to secure their names.

Large Congregation Heard Commissioner

The week end services conducted by Commissioner Richards of the Salvation Army, were of a very profitable character. The Guards, Corps Cadets and Scouts, all did well together with their leaders on Saturday night, and highly pleased the Commissioner, who commended them.

The lecture in the afternoon was a splendid effort to bring home the value of a child to the audience.

Mr. G. N. Gordon was the chairman and filled the bill nicely. Chief Thomson moved, and Mr. Coleman seconded a hearty vote of thanks to the Commissioner, for his splendid address.

The night meeting was splendid indeed, and resulted in a number kneeling at the mercy seat asking God's forgiveness.

The Temple Band and Songster Brigade will do a united concert in Victoria Park to-morrow night.

THE RESTAURANTS.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

As one who takes his meals at the restaurants and hotels, I am in accord with your views against curtailing the hours in which meals may be served at restaurants if it can be shown that it would be detrimental to the public.

The proposed by-law allots to them the same hours for meals, if not longer hours, as those enjoyed by the Standard hotels, which furnish accommodation for the public in every respect while that furnished by restaurants is confined to meals only.

I see that one of the restaurant proprietors writes an almost pathetic letter on behalf of his mid-night customers who seek meals at that hour. He would have us think that he had no selfish purpose to serve in penning such an epistle. He does not produce any credentials to show that he possesses more knowledge than our Council does in passing by-laws for the conduct of public places. It would be interesting to know how many there are of those midnight boarders who cannot be accommodated in any other way. What better consideration are they entitled to than the honest day worker who takes his midday meal along with him when it becomes necessary and their name is legion compared with the night worker! The midnight customers usually consist of another class, among whom may be found youths who should be at home and in bed, instead of consuming food that should be conserved for those who are fighting our battles at the front, in compliance with the government regulations.

The foreign element has a monopoly of the restaurants, and there is no reason why that element should be a law unto itself, which no citizen of this country or of the Empire at large asks for or enjoys.

Yours, etc.,
Canadian.

Two Lodges Paraded To St. Andrew's Church Sunday Evening

In Spite of the Downpour There Was a Large Representation

THE SERVICE

"The Brotherhood of Man", was the subject of a splendid sermon given by Rev. Mr. Roward, last evening to the Lodges of the Woodmen of the World and Independent Order of Foresters, who held a joint church parade to St. Andrews. Regardless of the inclement weather, the two lodges had a splendid turnout which occupied the main portion of the church.

The Sermon.

Using as his text, James 1-27: Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: To visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions and to keep himself unspotted from the world; Mr. Rowand spoke of the need of personal visitation to homes of those in trouble and sorrow before visitation by proxy and help given by cheque. He quoted a case of a lady in the city who when asked to visit a home of one of her less fortunate sisters, shrank from the clergyman's request and sent instead her cheque. The real need in the home was personal visitation, and so in life he said too often the duty is shirked and a proxy sent. For these shirkers it is possible a proxy may be sent to Heaven.

Interesting Addresses

At the close of the service the lodge marched back to the W. O. W. hall where splendid addresses were given by Brothers W. G. McKee, J. W. Buyers, Wm. Madill, G. W. Powell and A. Allison who spoke for the I. J. O. F. and E. Lebar, Sergt. F. J. Waterman, J. W. Worth, R. Waram and F. Sutcliffe members of the Woodmen of the World. On motion of W. G. McKee, P. C. R.; seconded by F. Sutcliffe, Mr. A. Graham, occupied the chair. In a short address, Mr. Graham spoke of the fortitude shown by the men who paraded in such weather and of the appreciation felt for this.

Vote of Thanks

A hearty vote of thanks to the pastor, officers and choir was moved by R. Waram and seconded by A. Allison, S. P. C. R. The proceeding closed with the singing of God Save the King.

No Plowing Match But Field Contest Will Be Continued

The directors of the County Plowmen's Association met at Mr. John Smithson's on June 6th to consider the advisability of continuing the annual plowing match for this year.

Owing to the increasing amount of farm work to be done, and the great shortage of suitable labour it was the opinion of the members that few farmers would have time to enter the senior classes or come to see the contest.

It was decided not to discontinue the organization, which has met with good success since its inception four years ago.

The five acre plowing contest will be continued and will be divided into two classes, one for boys under 21 and the other for men. The same prizes for each class will be offered as in the previous year, viz.: 1st, $15; 2nd, $12, 3rd, $10, 4th, $8; 5th $5.

Two well known local farmers will be chosen to do the judging. Further particulars will be given later.

Johnson Paudash Will Take Part In Kingston Celebration

Fine Record of Indian Family —Fought With British Since Wolfe's Time.

(Kingston Standard, June .)

Lance-Corporal Johnson Paudash, D.C.M., M.M., of the 21st battalion, came to the city yesterday and was at the meeting of the "Over the Top" Celebration committee last night. Lance-Corp. Paudash expressed a desire to take part in the celebration of the veterans and will be here on Dominion Day.

The career of the 21st hero is a short, though splendid one. For generations his family, full-blooded Indians, have been a fighting family, and took part in all the great battles in which the British fought in Canada. As far back as 1759, when Wolfe defeated Montcalm on the Plains of Abraham, the Paudash family were in evidence. They were sturdy members of the Mississauga tribe, and left their marks of heroisms in history. With Wolfe was Chief Ogemahbee, niece, an ancestor of Lance-Corp. Paudash, while at Bunker's Hill, his great-great-grandfather, Chief Kechnebesh, fought with the British. His great-great-grandfather, Chief Kechwas with the British troops in the battle of 1812, and fought valiantly, winning several medals. The grandfather of the present-day hero was W. G. Paudash, who saw service at Windmill Point in 1837, and was decorated for bravery.

Lance-Corp. Paudash's father, Robert Paudash is the last hereditary chief of the Mississauga tribe. He is a veteran of the war of 1866, and won a medal in that engagement, being decorated by Queen Victoria. He, at the invitation of his son, is coming to the city and will take part in the "Over the Top" celebration on Dominion Day. War relics of all descriptions are in the possession of the family, and these will be exhibited at the celebration.

Lance-Corp. Paudash joined the 21st battalion here in 1914. He was conspicuous as a sniper with the battalion, and was severely wounded in the knee, although he was never in hospital. He won the Military Medal and Distinguished Conduct Medal for bravery, and although broken in health is ready to do his bit again if needed. He was in every action the 21st was in since Looge, and in each battle did splendid work. He was under Major Wolfrain, well-known to Kingstonians, and more than once won the plaudits of Major Wolfrain, Major H. E. Pense, D.S.O., and other officers of the 21st. It was with regret that he was forced to go to England on account of the wounds he received and he emphasized this to his officers. The following letter written by Major H. E. Pense, D.S.O., to Lance-Corp. Paudash, shows how his worth was realized by his officers.

21st Battalion.
B.E.F., France.
14th March, 1918.

Dear Paudash,—You may rest assured that we were all pleased that you have been given a rest, after years of the most faithful service to the battalion, and that your work has been, in small way, acknowledged by the decoration which you have been awarded. I regret that I was on leave when your transfer to our reserve battalion was put through. I well remember the day at Auchy-au-Bois when you came to my room and asked me to do what I could to prevent you being returned to England. I might say that I have not treated our conversation as confidential and have told Colonel Jones what you had to say on that occasion.

There are gone too many of us left who feel towards the battalion as you do, and I hope that the day is not far distant when it will be possible for us to have a chat together, preferably in Canada.

Hoping that you are enjoying the change in England and expecting to hear from you soon,

Sincerely yours,
H. E. PENSE,
Major.

could develop her major offensive in the same manner. Von Hindenburg is now attempting to reach Paris in the hope that he can end the war before the Americans begin. There is this difference, however, between the situation then and now. The Allies had no large force of reserves protecting the road to Paris in 1914, while Gen. Foch's principal reserve strength is at present concentrated south-west of Compeigne strongly blocking Von Kluck's old pathway to the Capital. At no point south of Amiens are the Allies better prepared to resist the Germans' advance than between Montdidier and Noyon. Every hundred yards gained by Von Hindenburg in this sector can only be at a cost in casualties equalling the highest slaughter of German man power during the Picardy offensive. Gen. Foch has a splendid railway service running into Compeigne for the rapid movement of troops.

But with Von Hindenburg's ferocity in insisting upon the slaughter of his own man power to advance his line to Compeigne, it is possible Gen. Foch may decide to retain this town and make a place for a certain number of German lives.

The Germans began Sunday's attack with ten divisions (120,000 men) but suffered such heavy losses they were forced to engage another division before night.

Auto Crushed In Trying To Dash Past Street Car At Corner

Shortly after 8 o'clock this morning Mr. Edgar Burnham, of the Montreal Biscuit Co., had a narrow escape from serious injury. He was turning east onto Charlotte Street at Park Street, and, thinking he could easily pull ahead of the C.G.E. car, which was about to turn south on to Park Street, he went full ahead. Seeing his mistake, he tried to back up, but the Ford was struck by the street car, and jammed in between it and a telegraph post. As a result, both running boards and mudguards were torn off the automobile, which was otherwise crushed. It was held in such a position that the street car could not move on the curved track without further damaging it. Inspector McCann brought up jacks and had the street car lifted off the rails to one side, thus freeing the Ford.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, June 10.—The Associated Press war summary this afternoon says: Comparatively slow progress, attended by losses described as enormous, is being made by the Germans in their latest effort to break the Allied front in France. The advance against the line from Noyon to the eastern suburbs of Montdidier, coming quickly after the force of the offensive on the Aisne had been spent, has encountered stern resistance, and it is only over a comparatively short section of the line that the enemy has made appreciable gains. The deepest penetration reported so far is approximately two and three-quarter miles.

CARRY ON, MATES

(From the Outlook.)

'Ere am I sweating my bloomin' soul out
All for a moldy bob a day. A bob
A day, aye a bob a day and night as well,
No eight or ten hours a day for poor me,
With a 'arf 'oliday thrown in as well.
Not an hour in the bloomin' twenty-four
Can I call my soul my own. Sentry-go
And fatigue, fatigue and sentry-go, till
You prop yer eyelids with matches to keep Them from shutting right down, or for a change
You sweat up and down a muddy bloody
Trench with a few ton weight on your aching back.
Mud to the middle, pulling one foot out
And then the other, feeling like a dam' fly
Stuck in the bloomin' fly-paper. Strike —you say!
Not bloody likely! The rations and "ammo"
Must get up the dam' line to feed ourselves
And our friend Fritz, if I drop dead in my Muddy bloody tracks. Then for variety
You shin over the bloomin' top, yer 'eart
In yer mouth and 'ate in yer 'eart, over
That devil's spit, No Man's land, to pay our Afternoon-tea call to old Fritz, or else
We're busy welcoming visitors that
Come without asking, with machine gun,
Rifle, bayonet and bomb. What a life,
All for a blinking, moldy bob a day!
Mates of mine, who make the "iron rations"
For old Fritz, you are 'ome in old Blighty
With women and beer and baccy galore.
They say you strike; well, may Gawd strike them
What told you to? What, mate, would you stay
Yer pal in the back, and join 'ands
With old Fritz against me, me, your old pal,
Me, who gives my life and strength and blood
To keep you, the gals, and kiddies safe at home?
Strike me pink! you can't do it, not on yer life!
For Gawd's sake, play the game, don't fail us now
When we've gripped tight with the devil and strain
Every nerve for the strangle 'old, to crush him
Once and for all; don't stab me in the back
And help him free again. You can't by the blood
Of those mates of ours who've paid the price.
Who have gone West. They'll curse you from 'eaven
And 'ell as I shall curse you from this bloody
Battered line,
Carry on, pals of mine!
If there is a grievance—wait, 'old yer 'and.
Beware of 'ot air and the German gold behind it.
Death makes our vision clearer over ere.
And when this bloody war is over I'll come
And side by side we'll stand and see fair play
And clean up old, long-outstanding debts.
But now, for Gawd's sake, mates, don't fail me.
Carry one! Carry on!

ENEMY LOSSES VERY HEAVY

ery during the recent attack, that American troops are able to cope victoriously with the best Germany can produce. The Germans attacked with their average density every two kilometers (one and a quarter miles), concentrating their fiercest efforts along the valleys of the Metz, midway between Noyon and Montdidier, with the evident intention of penetrating along the Metz to its junction with the Oise in the vicinity of Compiegne.

Fell Back.

Following their early resistance in the covering zone the French fell back to their first principal line of resistance, where the heaviest fighting is now going on. Owing to an extremely heavy artillery concentration, the French were able to inflict terrible losses on the Germans from the moment the attack began.

Her Stately Carriage.

The play was over. The actors, who had lived long on dreams of a full house such as had faced them at this performance, hastened to the box office, where they expected to witness the manager enact the role of the ghost in a beautiful, heart throbbing drama called "The Postponed Walk of Hamlet's Father." But they were late. The manager had walked ahead of time with the money, and, like Mother Hubbard's bowwow, the members of the company "got left."

One thing, and only one thing, remained for the actors to do, walk back to the city with silk and money blest. It was discouraging, but—

"Say," said the low comedian to the woman who had won storms of applause by her representations of Ophelia, Portia and other characters of equal note, "you shouldn't mind this. Just think, as you walk, of the critic who praised your stately carriage!"

He laughed at his joke, but the actress turned up her nose, drew herself up to full height and strode on—with the stately carriage in evidence, but unavailable for locomotion.—New York Press.

Assault Case Was Dismissed

William Thompson, King street, wore a black eye to the police court this morning as evidence of an assault which he alleged had been committed by H. Fredenberg, his next door neighbour, on June 5th. The blow had followed a passage of words over a disagreement between the children. The defendant was said to have been the aggressor, threatening Thompson with a beating. With only the fence between them, Thompson replied that if Fredenberg was not so old he would get what he was looking for.

The defendant shortly afterwards struck Thompson on the eye.

Magistrate Dumble dismissed the case, and Thompson remarked, on going out, that there was not much use calling upon the police in such cases.

COUNTER REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENT OF RUSSIA ETC.

conference is planning a general strike unless the Bolsheviki yield. There is no doubt that the Russian revolution is facing its final battle in counter revolution and German intrigue. This will decide the fate of democracy in Russia. The forces at the disposal of the Soviets are too weak to meet success. Both proletariate and the people are deserting the Bolsheviki, they finally realizing the terrible consequences of the Brest-Litovsk peace treaty.

Serried Bayonets.

There is complete disorganization of Russia's financial and economic life. The Bolsheviki remain in power only because of their serried bayonets.

It is clear as daylight that they will be unable to organize the democracy against its foreign and inner foes or solve the colossal economic problems.

Only the combined democratic elements will be able to organize a real army to end the disorganization of the whole of Russia. It is not yet too late to accomplish this through a united democratic government, but the Bolsheviki prefer to swallow, daily, ultimatums from Germany.

Petrograd and Moscow are now quiet. The former is virtually starving, the people getting about an eighth of a pound of bread daily. Soon, however, something will burst. The workmen themselves are preparing to overthrow the Bolsheviki to save the republic before the growing counter revolution restores the monarchy.

THE AD. KILLER.

The man who stops his little "ad."
Is not so very wise, bedad!
Because his advertisements tell
The public what he has to sell;
And if his "ad." is not on deck,
The people pass him up, by heck!
And none of them will hesitate
To trade with merchants up-to-date
To stop your "ad.," we would remark,
Is just like winking in the dark;
You may know what it means, but gee!
Nobody else can ever see.
So do not for a moment think
That when you cut out printer's ink
You're saving money on the side;
'Tis merely business suicide.

LONDON, June 10.—Already there is an agitation for a Government investigation or a far-reaching character into the charges made by Noel Pemberton-Billing in the Maud Allan libel suit, and the approval with which this movement is meeting by press and pulpit would seem to show that the famous case, far from ending with the acquittal of Pemberton-Billing, will have an echo, and a telling echo at that, in the halls of Westminster.

FIXED IT IN THE DEED.

A Real Estate Agent's Kindness to One of His Customers.

J. Cooper Props, formerly a real estate agent in Eaton, Ind., a few years ago had practically concluded a sale of a residence in that town to a farmer who desired to retire, when the customer suddenly discovered that there was no cellar beneath the dwelling. The house suited him perfectly, and his wife also was highly pleased with it, but both of them demanded a cellar before taking it, even though they previously had gone as far as to tell Mr Props to draw up the deed.

"Well, I'll tell you what I'll do," said Props. "Of course there's no cellar under there now, but I'll fix it in the deed—write it all out and everything so there can't be any mistake—so that you have the privilege of excavating for the cellar at any time you please and without interference from any source."

Mr and Mrs Farmer said they "guessed" that would be all right, after their right to construct their own cellar had been carefully safeguarded in the deed by elaborate phrases the paid over their money and took possession. But to this day, Props says, the look at him in a dazed and puzzled way every time they meet him in Drumgoole's News.

What's In a Name.

How we like to personalize ourselves with names! Take, for example, in case of the muskrat, an animal of most clean feeding habits whose flesh is sweet, tender and of delicate flavor in the winter months muskrat meat is in considerable demand in the markets of the middle Atlantic states as it sells best as "marsh rabbit or water squirrel." So, too the students of the old Latin quarter in Paris when they expressed a mild doubt of the possibility of rabbit pie at so modest a price were reassured by the suggestion that it might be the "rabbit of the roofs."—Youth's Companion.

Breaking the News.

"Sis won't be able to see you tonight Mr. Jones," said her little brother. "She's had a terrible accident."

"Is that so? What happened?"

"All her hair got turned up."

"Good heavens! Was she burned?"

"Naw; she wasn't there. She don't know about it yet."—Lippincott's.

Opinion of an Actress.

Miss Ellen Terry at a reception talked about the ingenuous men who ask her to help them get on the stage. "The fact is," she said, "a woman under thirty has no chance as a actress. And every actress knows it," she added, "believes she is under thirty."

Cards Also Result From Attending U. S. Universities.

LONDON, June 10.—To the General Assembly, Rev. Dr. J. A. Macdonald brought, with regret, a story from South China, of the inroads being made by the vices of Christian countries. He declared that he had been told that Chinese girls who had attended American universities had brought back with them the practice of holding and attending card parties and dances.

He had personally attended banquets at which women were present with the men, and at which women had been among the speakers. This he declared to be an evidence of the great social cataclysm which the nation is undergoing.

THIN, NERVOUS PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Weak, thin people—men or women—are nearly always nervous wrecks; thus conclusively proving that thinness, weakness, debility and neurasthenia are almost invariably due to nerve starvation. Feed your nerves and al lthese symptoms due to nerve starvation will disappear.

Eminent specialists state that the best nerve food is an organic phosphate known among druggists as Bitro-Phosphate, a five-grain tablet of which should be taken with each meal. Being a genuine nerve builder and not a stimulant or habit-forming drug, Bitro-Phosphate can be safely taken by the weakest and most delicate sufferer, and the results following its use are often simply astonishing.

Weak, tired people regain strength and vigour; thinness and angularity give way to plumpness and curves; sleep returns to the sleepless; confidence and cheerfulness replace debility and gloom; dull eyes become bright, and pale, sunken cheeks regain the pink glow of health. Bitro-Phosphate, the use of which is inexpensive, also wonderfully promotes the assimiliation of food, so much so that many people report marked gains of weight in a few weeks.

CAUTION:— Although Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh. It is sold in this city by McDermid & Jury and all good druggists.

The creating of a French-Canadian brigade at the front will be made possible by the number of French-Canadian youths now going into khaki. They ought to be helped by such an appeal to their racial pride. The French-Canadian brigade may distinguish itself like the Twenty-second Battalion.

IN DUEL TO DEATH

Brave Old Buck Proved Himself True Knight.

Exhibition of Woodland Chivalry That Impressed Hunters in the Florida Everglades So Much They Spared the Victor's Life.

A couple of hunters on the border of the Florida Everglades were surprised to hear the wild snorts and whistles of a buck in fight, mingled with the plaintive bleats of a doe in distress—a combination of sounds that was unaccountable. The men crept cautiously up, and in five minutes reached the edge of an open glade.

In the center crouched a doe, wild with terror. By her side was a fawn only a few hours old, still too weak to follow its mother while the old buck, with bristling hair, and antlers lowered, stood by, snorting in rage and defiance. His eyes, green with rage, followed some object moving in the palmetto scrub on the border of the glade.

Looking carefully, the hunters saw a young panther passing backward and forward in an effort to turn the flank of the defense and get at the fawn. A wiser beast would have abandoned the attack as soon as such a defender went on guard, but this panther was evidently in the full flush of his first strength, and without experience of the prowess of an old buck at bay.

Forward and back he crawled, spitting and snarling, only to find the buck always between him and the doe. At last he crouched for the spring. The buck, snorting grimly, braced all his muscles for the coming crash; he appreciated his danger, but dared the worst. The doe whimpered and closed her eyes, but did not desert her fawn.

The panther rose in the air and came down within ten feet of the buck. Then the buck went into the air, and falling with his feet together on the struggling cat, seemed to stab him through and through. Immediately the buck rose again and landed a dozen feet away. Then he lowered his head and plunged at the panther.

There was a confusion of flying dirt and grass, and again the deer sprang away. There were now deep cuts on his head and neck, and his antlers were splashed with red.

The panther now tried to creep away, but again the buck leaped, stabbed with his feet together and sprang away. The cat now lay gasping, while the buck watched him with his hair stiffened into a mane and eyes that nearly bulged from his head. Then the hunters walked forward.

When the buck saw them he must have realized that he was completely in their power. His proud crest fell, and he lost all the swelling part of the victory; but still he showed no intention of deserting the doe, but moved off and stood beside her. She crouched down again with the fawn.

The hunters walked over quietly and examined the panther. He was very badly cut up. Both shoulders were broken, and the antlers had passed repeatedly through his body. During the examination the buck stood quietly in plain view, and no gladiator saluting Caesar and conscious of being about to die ever showed more dignity.

Without a word the hunters walked off the field and left the old knight alone in his glory. Had he not shown knightly qualities—the chivalry that protects the weak, the courage that braves all odds in a good cause, and finally a dignified submission to what seemed the inevitable?

The Farmers Will Strike If Police Try To Interfere

Defy Authorities To Lay Molesting Finger Upon Member For Scoring Government—Challenge Threat of Inspector Kennedy to Ban Further Meetings of U.F.O.

WOULD STARVE THE CITIES

TORONTO, June 4.— The moment Inspector of Detectives Kennedy arrests any farmer for speaking against Union Government there will be a general farmers' strike, J. J. Morrison, secretary of the United Farmers, and individual members said so in discussing the ultimatum of the police.

"Just let him arrest one of us," declared the secretary "Say, do you know what would have happened if the police had interfered with our meeting? We would have called a general strike among the farmers throughout the Province." And he tapped his forefinger against the reporter's chest by way of emphasis.

"We know the power we have in our hands," he continued. "All we need to do is to stop marketing our produce for a single month. We will lay it up on the farms, and what do you suppose would become of you people in the city then? Suppose we cut off the milk for a month? What would you do then?"

"Do without milk, I suppose," suggested the reporter.

"Of course you would," said the farmer. "And you would do without other farm products if we quit sending them in, as we will if our organization is prevented from discussing questions of the day. You would simply starve, that's all."

Will Defy the Police.

"Are there any other meetings to be held in the near future?" asked the reporter. "No, none that we know of just at the moment."

"Will the police declaration prevent you from holding another big meeting if you see fit to do so?" "Of course not. We'll hold one the minute we think it is necessary, and if the police arrest one of our members we'll hold up the city's food supply."

Farmers Will Stick.

One or two members of the United Farmers backed up their secretary in his strike declaration. According to them the first farmer arrest would precipitate a food crisis in Toronto.

"Would the farmers generally stand together?" one of them was asked. "You bet we would. You can talk about your labour organizations, but the farmers are the best stickers of them all. You ask the milk retailers who buy from us how many price cutters they find among the farmers."

Make Owners of Halls Responsible.

As a result of sentiments uttered against Union Government at the convention of the United Farmers of Ontario in Massey Hall recently, the Board of Police Commissioners at their next meeting will discuss the better regulation of public halls in the City of Toronto. These halls are under the jurisdiction of the commissioners, and any owner who allows his premises to be used for the purpose of holding meetings contrary to Section 17 of the Dominion order-in-Council, respecting criticism of Britain's and Canada's prosecution of the war, can be severely dealt with.

Kennedy Laughs at Threat.

Inspector Kennedy laughed at the farmers' strike threat. "Why," he declared, "these fellows are only a few disgruntled politicians. They don't represent the farmers. All the respectable farmers are at home looking after their farms. These men are the Laurier chaff after all the good grain has been winrowed."

"The United Farmers ask why you waited till the convention was over to caution them?' interorgated the reporter. "As I said before, all the respectable farmers are at home. Everybody doesn't read orders-in-Council, but these men know the law now and there will be no excuses if the law is broken."

"But why didn't you lay down the law to them the first day?" pressed the reporter. "I have nothing to say as to that."

"You don't take the threatened strike very seriously?" "No."

"And if similar anti-Union Government statements are made at a future meeting you will make arrests?" "Yes if the law is broken."

"The Educational Link"

is a special department appearing every Saturday in

The Mail and Empire.

It is believed to the only attempt in Canadian daily journalism to provide a weekly department relating to public education. While surveying the whole field of education, it devotes particular attention to the Province of Ontario. Its aim is to be helpful to Inspectors, Trustees, Teachers, Parents and others in developing and using our school system to the greatest possible benefit of the rising generation, and to connect all the nation's activities directly with public education.

Some idea of the scope of this department may be gathered from the titles of a few of the topics recently discussed in leading articles: "The Administration of the Public Schools," "A Real Boys' Parliament," "A New English History and Education," "Essentials of Public School Education," "School-room Confinement and Health," "The First English Medical Woman," "Truancy in the Public Schools," "Uniformity in School Books," "Some Rural Views on Public Schools," "Athletics, Books, Intelligence," "Mr. Martin's Attack on Education," "The Food Production Campaign," "Boys and the Cigarette Habit," "Lessons From Denmark Schools," "Ontario Legislature and Education." The Educational Link is indispensable to all in any way actively engaged in education.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take one tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

NO TIME FOR THOUGHT

CHAPTER LXXXIX.

The days fairly flew by. Night after night we danced at the casino. I became quite popular (due to my wardrobe, I thought). George was pleased. Julia Collins furious, yet she hid it all under the most suave manner. Only occasionally, when she thought herself unobserved, did she show her true feelings.

"Shall we move on?" George asked me one night. "Have you had enough of this?"

"Oh, yes! Let us go to-morrow."

"Why are you in such a hurry?"

I made a laughing excuse, but the truth was that I wanted to get away from Julia Collins. I did not try to deceive myself; I was intensely jealous of her—jealous of her influence over George. Then too, Clark Huntington had begun to annoy me. Whenever he saw George with Julia, he would at once seek me out, and his half-veiled remarks anent their friendship caused me much unhappiness.

I should be glad when we left for Newport. I should miss this gayety of Narragansett—the free and easy sort of atmosphere—but I should gain more than I missed, in having George to myself.

We were to leave the next day but one. That night I had a violent headache, and went to bed early. George went over to the casino, as usual. I lay thinking over all that had happened since I married George. My nerves were on edge. I commenced to cry. I felt that my husband didn't really love me, and that I never could have children to comfort me. Need I go on with it? Had I not the right to live a happier life than that I saw before me?

Of course I exaggerated, as young immature women are apt to do. In thinking of the unhappy things in my married life, I neglected to weigh them in the balance with all that had come to me. They loomed so large, I had no room for fair thinking. I had tried to please George—tried to make myself attractive to him, and, also attractive to others in order that he might see them admire me.

I felt that I was almost a new being. From a loving, spontaneous girl, I had become a reserved, hard-hearted, deceitful and often utterly wretched woman. If only he would change back into what he was, or seemed to be, when we were married—when he seemed to love me.

Then I thought of his confession: that he had married me because he saw the possibility of making me over to suit him. If he should be disappointed in that, he would cease to care for me in any way. I must try, in every way, to please him—try to become like those women he so admired for their poise, their self-possession, under all circumstances.

It was just beginning to grow light when George came in. I had not closed my eyes, but I kept quiet and he thought I was asleep. The next morning he made me remain in bed. "Sleep until noon. We will have plenty of time to get across to Newport before dinner," he said kindly, as he darkened the windows.

Scarcely had the door closed, than I fell asleep, soothed and comforted by his kindly tone.

Two Wrongs Never Make a Right.

Often, at this time, when I felt that I could not go on—that all joy was being crushed from my life—I would think of what mother used to say.

"Two wrongs never make one right," she would say when we argued with her. "There is always duty to perform." To mother, duty meant much. Had it not been for her teachings, I surely would have given up when my misery seemed too heavy for me to bear.

At times, I felt that if George were consistently neglected and cruel to me, I could soon learn to bear it; but, every now and then, he would be so kind, so thoughtful, that my hopes would rise and I would have a brief period of happiness. Always, I was either in the depths, or floating on the clouds. There seemed no middle path.

He called me about one o'clock and was so solicitous, so tender, that I fairly ached to throw myself into his arms and tell him to love me—beg him to take me away from all these people he used to know, and to whom he compared me to my disadvantage. But, instead, I dressed quickly, and braced myself to say good-bye to Mrs. Collins and the others I had met. "We should see them often; "It is only a lark to go over to Newport," Clark Huntington said.

But when George and I were ensconced in our charming new quarters, and I knew we had left some of the causes of our unhappiness even a little way behind, I said to him:

"I shall be very happy here, alone with you, George."

"We shan't be alone! I know almost everyone in Newport. I want you to rest to-night. To-morrow I shall introduce you to some of my friends."

"It is no use," I said to myself, as he left me to smoke.

It may seem strange that all this gayety did not appeal more strongly to one so young as I. Had I been really happy, it probably would. But I blamed all my unhappiness upon the life George led before we were married—upon the friends he held up to me as patterns.

Burial of Sir John Moore.

The death of Sir John Moore at Corunna is probably the best remembered fact in all the checkered history of the peninsular war, for a good reason. There are poets, like Shenstone, whose fame is secured by a single quatrain. The poetical reputation of the Rev. Charles Wolfe, who eight years after the event wrote "The Burial of Sir John Moore," rests on that one production alone. Ascribed, before its author's name became known, to such well known poets as Campbell and Byron, the poem took firm hold of a nation's heart. Dying of consumption at the early age of thirty-two, Wolfe's memory will ever be kept green by just that one piece, which "Ingoldsby" parodied, which a million schoolboys have recited, which Lord Byron pronounced to be "the most perfect ode in the language."—London Spectator.

ORIGIN OF STARS.

It May Be That the Nebular Hypothesis Is All Wrong.

The nebular hypothesis is that the stars were formed by the cooling and cohering of the gaseous nebulae. These "filmy veils of luminous gas," which are visible to the naked eye in the Milky way, are supposed to be star stuff. Many of these clouds have in their centers tiny spots of bright light, the supposed beginnings of new stars and suns.

In 1910 astronomers at Lick observatory discovered that the older a star becomes the faster it travels through space. Then the question arose, Can nebulae be stars in formation when their speed is even greater than the oldest stars?

The astronomers began to doubt the old theory. Some years of hard work at Mount Hamilton and at the University observatory in Chile were required. Now the velocities of forty nebulae are accurately known. The incredible speed of these nebulae suggests that they are older, not younger, than the stars. It is possible that they are disintegrated stars and not stars in the making at all.

The director of the Lick observatory says: "The effect upon our ideas of the connection existing between planetary nebulae and the stars is revolutionary. Apparently the stars have been evolved from planetary nebulae.

"What, then, are the nebulae if they are not star stuff? That is what the astronomers at Lick have set themselves to determine."—Exchange.

Unique Engineering Feat.

When railroad building was undertaken in Alaska following the discovery of gold a unique engineering feat was performed. At a point eighty miles out of Skagway the survey had been made for the road along the shore of a lake, but it was found to be so irregular and broken by so many coves that the plan was adopted of getting a better line by lowering the level of the lake. This was done by cutting an outlet channel, through which fourteen feet of the lake drained off. But presently the new channel, having been cut through a sandy hill, gave way, and the escaping lake water wore an enormous canyon through the country and reduced the lake level again over seventy feet. A fine, level roadbed was secured over what was formerly the bed of the lake.—Argonaut.

When Knights Were Bold.

When knights were clad in complete armor from top to toe it was essential that they should bear some sign by which their followers could distinguish them in battle, and this was the function of their armorial bearings. Knights who omitted to wear their own arms ran considerable risk, and it is related that at the battle of Bannockburn the last of the De Clares owed his death to his omission to wear his bearings. He was slain unrecognized, whereas had he been known he would have been held prisoner for the ransom or as a hostage.

An Extreme Case.

"They tell me your daughter is very musical," said the visitor.

"Yes," replied Mrs. Piecestaff. "The fact is she is so very musical that we cannot induce her to practice either her singing or her piano lessons, the amateur quality of the work grates so on her sensitive nerves."—Judge.

DESERT SIGNPOSTS.

Rude Rock Heaps by Which Indians Located Running Water.

In traveling over the plains of western Texas, writes a contributor, I have now and then come on two little isolated heaps of rock that at first glance seemed not at all remarkable. After a time, I noticed that one heap was generally about three feet high, and the other about a foot lower. The two were always within a few feet of each other, and usually on an elevation or plateau that had a view of the country for five miles or more.

The rocks were roughly heaped together, as if left by children at play. I sometimes wondered if they could be the ruins of an ancient stone building; but that was improbable, for there was scarcely another stone in sight.

Years later I learned the actual significance of these rock heaps from an old Indian whose mind was stored with all the legends and customs and deeds of his people. According to him, when the Great Spirit lapped up the mighty rivers of the plains, he left springs and water basins here and there for the antelope and the Indian. These the antelope easily found by scent, but the Indian had to search long and anxiously for them. Once found, they were seldom lost—thanks to these rude rock heaps.

I watched the old fellow crouch down behind the taller heap, sight over the low one, and mark the farthest object in a straight line, which in this case was a clump of bushes on the horizon. We rode toward these bushes and found—not water, as I had expected, but two other heaps of rocks. Sighting as before, and taking a rock faced cliff toward the southwest as a goal, we rode two miles farther, and there, trickling out from beneath the cliff's rocky brow, was a spring of fresh, clear water.

The old Indian said that whenever a band of Indians came upon a new spring, they built these rock heaps along their trail; since then I have followed some half dozen of these rude signposts, and found them to lead either to water, or to places that showed traces of a former watercourse.—Youth's Companion.

The One Universal Language.

The one universal language is not Esperanto but music. Everywhere the same musical score is played. The masters of different countries may have characteristic national qualities, but music lovers everywhere find delight in a composition it matters not from what land or clime the composer hails. Whether played in Germany or Italy or France or at home, your favorite music sounds the same.—Leslie's.

A Good Start by Henry.

The Most Expensive Sport.

"The most expensive sport of all," said Lord Wimborne on one occasion, "is not polo, but yachting."

TRICKY TRANSPORTATION.

His Travel Was Enlivened by a Musical Accompaniment.

When war is in the air on the continent of Europe a man who is liable for military service often finds it very difficult to escape from the country. In the Wide World Magazine T. J. Thomas tells the story of the escape of one Petru Cocan from Hungary when on account of the Balkan crisis the decree had gone forth that no man between the ages of sixteen and fifty-two should leave the country without a passport.

Cocan, who was a Roumanian by birth and had lived in America, could not get a passport. He then went to the agent of a transatlantic line and bought a ticket for America on the assurance that the agent would get him out of the country. After several days of suspense Cocan, with three other fugitives, was sent to a place near the border, where they were met according to agreement by a band of Roumanians disguised as gypsy musicians, four of whom carried huge bass viols. The backs were removed from the viols, and in each there was a small seat. Cocan and his fellow fugitives took their places, the backs were fastened on the viols, and again the musicians set out for the border. All passed the guard safely except Cocan. His bearer got into a dispute with a soldier of the guard, the quarrel waxed violent, the bass viol fell to the ground, the back came off, and Cocan landed in a ditch by the roadside. He was arrested and sent home again.

He tried the same trick again, but on a different road and at a place on the border far removed from the first attempt. This time he made his escape, but as the musicians were crossing the border the soldiers of the guard demanded a tune, and Cocan endured the agony of sitting inside a bass viol while it was played upon. The noise in the narrow space was deafening.

After his many adventures Cocan arrived safely at Canton, O.

HAUGHTY DUSKY ROYALTY.

When This King Waved His Toes the Insulted Guest Fled.

There was much ceremony observed at the African king's court, says John H. Weeks in his book, "Among the Primitive Bakongo." No one approaches him without first seeking his permission, and no one is allowed to sit on a chair in his presence except his sons and nephews.

Ordinary men approaching the king had to kneel three times—once just inside the last entrance to the king's inclosure, then near the door of the "palace" and lastly immediately in front of his majesty. And the last time they knelt they put the palms of their hands together, rubbed their little fingers in the dirt and then transferred the dirt from their little fingers to their foreheads or temples and clapped their hands. This ceremony they repeated three times at the last kneeling place, and the king answered by putting the palms of his hands across each other, with the fingers of the right hand well above the thumb and index finger of the left hand, and waving them. If the king did not answer thus or if he thrust out his foot and waved his toes, which was an insult, the sooner the man retreated the better for him.

If a man omitted to send or take the king a share of his trading products he would not be favorably received and might expect to see his majesty's toes wave instead of his fingers. Well to do chiefs who failed to send him occasional presents were also coldly received, and the waving toes reminded them of their delinquencies. No written account was kept, but the king, like all natives, had a remarkable memory for what was owing him and never forgot when a debt was to be paid or a present was due. Chiefs and noblemen had to render homage to the king the same as ordinary men, but not every time they went into his presence.—Washington Post.

This is the happiest country in the world today.

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends the Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Trouble, Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidences of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead, get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation, and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Wills and Edmund Kean.

Irving used to tell with dramatic effect a story about W. G. Wills, the dramatist, who, among other services, wrote for him the play "Charles I." When Wills was a boy ten years old he was taken to see Edmund Kean play Macbeth. In the murder scene he was so affected by the realistic power of the actor that, seized with a severe attack of nausea, he hurried from the box. Ten years later he was lunching at a chop house in Fleet street when a man entered, sat down at a table near him and ordered a meal. He was a perfect stranger to Wills, who, after a few minutes' propinquity, was again seized with a fit of nausea, from which he had not suffered since as a boy he was at the theater on the occasion mentioned. He was obliged to leave the room. When some minutes later he paid his bill the waiter said to him: "Did you see that gentleman at the table near you? That's Edmund Kean."—Cornhill Magazine.

Toys During the French Revolution.

The toys of the French revolution period were characteristic of that terrible time. There are tops whose shadows cast the profile portraits of Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette. These are turned in boxwood and are indeed interesting reminiscences of toys with the impress of history. The children of the revolution and their tiny Phrygian caps and danced the horrible carmagnoles in their play. Little models of the guillotine were made to "work," and the bodies of pigs with heads of Louis XVI. were decapitated. Models of the Bastille were popular. Playing cards with figures of revolutionary heroes were made when kings, queens and aristocratic knaves were taboo.—From "Toys of Other Days," by Mrs. F. Nevill Jackson.

DON'T NURSE WORRY.

Particularly if It's Your Own Fault the World Looks Black.

When you feel down in the mouth and long to go away and hide yourself forever; when you imagine that no one in the world is treating you right; when you are satisfied that your employer is tardy in recognizing your genius; when you can't divorce yourself from the idea that you are doing the work and the other fellow is getting the credit; when the time you spend at your work seems interminable and the time away from it seems woefully short; when all the sky seems to possess a leaden tint, when everything irritates you like salt on an open wound; when the laugh of a child grates on your nerves; when the food you eat disagrees with you—

Straighten up and take an inventory of yourself. Maybe it is with you that the fault lies. Perhaps the rest of the world is but a mirror. Don't imagine you are carrying the world on your shoulders. The browbeaten man is too often a creature of his own making. He insists on carrying the Old Man of the Sea on his back when the world is willing to relieve him of the burden. It is surprising how many worries we can banish by making up our mind resolutely that we will not give them room in our thoughts.—Indianapolis News.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Snowfoot

By Alger Ray Perrine

"Give us an exhibition, Mr. Ducre, won't you?"

"Oh, I'm past all that, lads."

"No, no," pressed an eager, excited coterie of schoolboys. "There's some new fellows here and we've been bragging about your acts."

"All right, I'll see if Snowfoot has forgotten his lessons. Don't let any of you fellows get the circus fever out of this, though. The glare and glitter don't last long, and I wasted the best years of my life in the sawdust ring and you see what I've turned out to be."

"The jolly friend of everybody!" shouted an enthusiastic chorus of voices.

"Yes, but a shiftless rover, never settling down, Jack-of-all-trades, a meal today, none tomorrow—Houpla! Snowfoot!"

Everybody in town knew Snowfoot. He was a big built, gentle but strong and steady and belonged to Widow Brayton. Everybody, too, knew Widow Brayton and pitied her, for she was desperately poor and an invalid. There were two children, Ned a lad of eleven and Alma just turning sixteen. When the father died these two had stepped into the breach so far as their limited capacity of earning could count. Alma was receiving a mere pittance in a sort of apprenticeship to the village milliner. Ned, young as he was, earned ten dollars a week with old Snowfoot.

This was how he did it: A Mr. Dalby, sickly and a cripple, with his wife and a hired helper, ran a small farm a short distance from the Brayton place. There were fifteen cows, and he made a proposition to Mrs. Brayton to have Ned help milk these and supply the milk to regular customers. Mrs. Brayton had Snowfoot and a wagon, Ned was a loyal, enterprising lad, worked early and late and it looked as though the family was on the road to better times.

"As soon as I am able to trim hats instead of sewing braid only, we shall have all kinds of money, mother," Alma used to say.

Paul Ducre had dropped into Ferndale one morning early when Ned stood leaning in dismay over Snowfoot on the public street. Snowfoot had collapsed when some equine ailment came suddenly upon him and was lying prone upon the ground between the shafts, writhing and gasping.

"He's a goner" an old timer had pronounced.

"Let me see. I know considerable about horses," said Paul, coming up. He examined the eyes and mouth of the animal, took a pencil, wrote the names of two ingredients on a chip of wood and said: "Go to the drug store mix these powders in a quart of hot water and hurry back as fast as you can."

Ned sped away with the prescription. He returned with a steaming jar. Deft and skillful, the stranger administered the medicine. In five minutes old Snowfoot was regarding him with a look as though he fully comprehended his attention, and when he at length gained his feet he lovingly laid his cheek against Paul's shoulder.

They became great friends, those three. Then a new token of interest came into Paul Dacre's life. He naturally met Alma and they became quite friendly. Head-strong, erratic, ne'er-do-well as he was, there was something beautiful in his love for Ned and old Snowfoot. Paul did odd jobs in the town, but every morning he was on hand to help Ned get over his route.

As to Alma, he idolized her, and told her so. "Some day I'll make a fortune," he declared. "I'll make you all rich and you'll have so many suitors you can pick some prince or major general for the husband you deserve."

And now Paul, homeward bound, was surrounded by a crowd of juvenile admirers. He pretended to whisper in Snowfoot's ear. Immediately the clever animal he had trained in old-time circus tricks started running around in a ring. Paul described a running jump, to land squarely upon the back of the horse. A dozen times they sped around the ring. Then Paul made Snowfoot steal a handkerchief from his pocket, locate a hidden ear of corn and nod his head seven times when asked how many days there were in the week.

Paul stood spellbound with dread and doubt, when, late the next afternoon, he went up to the house to accompany Ned on his evening delivery rounds. Ned was seated on the step of the wagon, a picture of disconsolate dismay. From inside the house came the wailing of Mrs. Brayton. Alma came out wiping the tears from her eyes.

"Oh, Mr. Ducre," she cried, "Snowfoot is gone!"

"Gone!" repeated Paul, aghast.

"Yes, there was an old debt of poor dead father. It was beyond our power to pay it. Our creditor promised to wait, but two hours ago he appeared with the sheriff and a writ. They seized the horse, auctioned him off, and a man taking a string of horses to sell at the stock yards in the city bid in Snowfoot and drove him off."

Paul was speedy activity personified. He hurried to a neighbor and arranged for a horse until his return. "I'll get back Snowfoot if I have to go to jail for it!" he declared, and was off on the trail of the man with the market-bound string of horses.

It was the next morning when Paul reached the city and located the horse market at the stock yards, close on the heels of Snowfoot. He found where his favorite and some twenty other horses were housed in a pen, to be sold at auction the next morning.

Paul had but one idea, to make away with Snowfoot. He would wait till dark. Then his old friend should find freedom. Paul put in the time wandering about the great yards to finally come to a great building arched over with glass and just being completed. It was a vast auditorium, built to house farmers' conventions and stock shows. At one end was a stage. Nothing was yet set in place, and pulleyed ropes and platforms were suspended from the roof rafters, from which workmen were suspended putting in chandeliers and otherwise perfecting the lighting system.

About the middle of the building stood a well-dressed, important-looking man, holding his little four-year-old daughter by the hand. He was giving orders as to certain construction details to the contractors, and, Paul learned casually, was head officer of the cattle exchange, a man of enormous wealth who made a hobby of improved live stock.

His restive little daughter, a bright, lovely little midget, had taken advantage of her father's preoccupation and had run about fifty feet to the other end of the building. She had clambered up the steps leading to the stage and was running up and down the platform, pleased at the hollow echo of her pattering feet on the smooth boards.

"Hi, there!" suddenly rang out a frightful yell aloft. Within a flashing second of time the scene was one of indescribable confusion. The flaring lamp of one of the overhead workers had exploded. The dripping contents had scattered everywhere; up aloft the whole inside framework was ablaze. The burning liquid, dropping to the floor, had set a great heap of shavings, block and bench frames on fire.

Paul chanced to be near the stage. As he saw an impassable barrier of fire shut off the entire front end of the building he heard the vain shouts of the agonized father, beaten back by the curtain of fire, pleading for the rescue of his darling child. The brick wall behind the stage was solid. The fire was advancing to lick up the new framework. Paul ran to the child.

"Little one," he said hurriedly, "for papa's sake will you do just as I say? If I set you on my back with your arms around my neck, will you hold fast—fast?"

"But won't I burn?"

"You won't burn, darling. You shall be safe with your father in a jiffy, if you just hold on and never let go."

It was well that the old skill of his one-time trapeze experience held Paul Dacre in good stead now. The little one kept her word like a Trojan. She did not even whisper as, half way up one of the long ropes, a sweep of cinders came against them like a blast. Then they were at the rafters. Seizing a board, Paul smashed out a broad sash. Now they were on the roof. He drew up the eighty-odd feet of rope, let it trail down over the roof, and inch by inch descended down the slant, over the edge, and the gathered crowd cheered and grouped about the hero rescuer and the little child.

Paul Dacre did not have to steal Snowfoot to get him back home. He could have redeemed the animal had it taken thousands, for the father of the little Evaline could not sufficiently show his gratitude. He offered Paul the charge of a stock farm at a high salary. He even came down to the Brayton home to visit him. And Alma began to see the nobleness of character in the ex-circus rider. And little Evaline was showing Alma how she had clung to Paul the day of the fire, and putting out her hands drew the face of Alma close to her own.

And as it nestled there, the chubby hand drew that of Paul in loving contact, and Alma's eyes met those of Paul, and the revelation of perfect love was complete.

This Letter From Newcastle

IS A MESSAGE OF GOOD CHEER TO PEOPLE SUFFERING FROM NERVOUS AND KIDNEY TROUBLES.

NEWCASTLE, Ont., June 10.— Mr. Wilmot had been treated in hospital and at medical springs but found that cure only came when he used Dr. Chase's medicines.

His kidneys were deranged, circulation was bad, so that he suffered from cramps and the nerves were upset. By the combined use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills he was enabled to entirely restore the system to health, and thereby get rid of the many annoying symptoms.

Mr. B. W. Wilmot, Newcastle, Ont. writes:

"For the last eighteen months I have suffered from nerve and kidney troubles My hand would cramp up and also my side, and at times my hands were utterly useless. My kidneys pained and my liver was also deranged. I took doctor's medicine, was in a hospital, and even went to medical springs, but I must say that nothing has done me so much good in so short a time as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney Liver Pills. Since using this combined treatment my cramps have completely stopped and I feel a great deal better. I may also say that the word constipation need never be mentioned since the goodness of Dr. Chase's medicines has been found out by the public. You may use my letter and my name if it will aid others to profit by my experience."

Lumber Raft to Cross Sea.

One of the marvels of the age, according to the marine authorities, an invention which will make possible the towing of 216,000 cubic feet of lumber safely across the Atlantic ocean, has been completed at a provincial port.

No matter how severe the storms or how dangerous the undertaking, the big raft is so constructed that it will be able to make the long trip without any possibility of loss or damage. Most of the machinery used in this initial craft can be used over again, and so the cost of construction, estimated at close to $30,000, will not affect the business end of the undertaking.

The lumber, said to be sorely needed on the other side, is valued at $150,000. The big raft has been under construction for several months, 70 men being employed all the time on the work of building it.

The Poultry Flock.

Reports recently gathered concerning 5,298 flocks of poultry show that the average number of hens per flock is 107, as compared with 146, in 1914. This information, which was obtained by an incubator manufacturer in the middle West, indicates that shortage of supply has been an important factor in producing present high prices for poultry and eggs.

When Napoleon Died.

July 10, 1821.—The news has just arrived of the death of Napoleon. He died on the 5th of May. I was much astonished at the way the news was received. The hero which the whole French nation had worshiped, whom all Europe had trembled before, it might have been an ordinary actor who had died. Really one could feel great disgust. A mighty man indeed he was with all his faults. The first I heard of it was cried about the streets, "La Mort de Napoleon a St. Helene, Deux Sous." Oh, the irony of it!—"A Diary of James Gallatin In Europe" in Scribner's Magazine.

Decrease in Birth Rate.

The Frankfurter Zeitung says, under a Berlin date line:

"The political committee on population of the House of Deputies, formed for the purpose of considering Dr. Porsch's bill on measures to be taken against the decrease in the birth rate, has met. The Ministry of the Interior has submitted a memorandum on the subject. The Government announced through the committee that the Reichstag would consider measures to combat sexual diseases, and also that the comparative decrease in the number of births in war time is much larger than the number of those fallen. Even after the war the birth rate will not attain its former figures.

"The following have been urged as necessary measures: Pay reforms, housing organizations, providing of inexpensive house furnishings for young married couples, premiums for children. A subcommittee has been formed to consider the question of providing furniture."

The Mainzer Anzeiger tells of a plan the city of Bonn has adopted for encouraging marriages by bounties payable in food supplies:

"If one of the newly-married couple has resided in Bonn for at least six months, the Bonn Food Bureau gives them a single supplementary supply of 30 pounds of potatoes, 2 pounds of wheat flour, 2 pounds of grease, 5 pounds of sugar, 2 pounds of malt coffee, 2 pounds of butter or some other fat, and 10 eggs."

Population of Soo.

The assessment of Greater Soo this year is fourteen and a half million dollars, $250,000 more than last year's assessment of the Soo and Steelton. The population of the city is 19,283, which is one thousand more than last year.

Sorrow in the Sanctum.

When an editor laboriously cuts down a candidate's eight column speech to two columns the candidate is mad at him for printing so little of it, and everybody else is in a like frame of mind toward him for printing so much.—Ohio State Journal.

The Difference.

"Say, papa," asked little Roy, "what is the difference between an optimist and a pessimist?"

"An optimist, my son," replied papa, "thinks the times are ripe, while a pessimist thinks they are rotten."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Size of an Atom.

"Radium emanations," said Professor William Crookes in a lecture in London, "are due to the breaking down of the atom of radium, and electricians are constantly flying off with about two-thirds the speed of light (182,000 miles per second). These electrons are now looked upon as being absolute units of negative electricity. To try to illustrate their size is difficult. Imagine one drop of water magnified to the size of the earth (8,000 miles in diameter). An atom would then be about the size of a walnut or a cricket ball. Now magnify the cricket ball or atom to a cube of about 100 feet each side. The electron would be about the size of this dot (.)—one one-hundredth of an inch in diameter. The mind cannot conceive such figures."

No Humbug! Lift Off Corns

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift a corn or callus off with fingers

For a few cents you can get a small bottle of the magic drug freezone recently discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Just ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone. Apply a few drops upon a tender, aching corn and instantly, yes, immediately, all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you lift it out, root and all, with the fingers.

Just think! Not one bit of pain before applying freezone or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the surrounding skin.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes, also hardened calluses on bottom of feet, just seem to shrivel up and fall off without hurting a particle. It is almost magical.

Ladies! Keep a tiny bottle on your dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

The Precious Parcel

By WALTER JOSEPH DELANEY

"A precious parcel, Miss Lane," spoke Hall Barton, secret service man "It represents the best roundup of the department for ten years. See," and the keen-eyed, pleasant-faced sleuth flipped over half a dozen bundles of greenbacks and then rolled them up in three manilla paper coverings and placed the package in front of the pretty stenographer employed by the Merchants' bank of Woodville.

"What am I to do with it, please?" she inquired.

"Just lock it up somewhere and I will call for it in a day or two." Then his voice dropped to a whisper and the janitor, putting the place in order, failed to catch the import of the subdued tones.

The detective smiled, and Nellie smiled, too. She nodded her head intelligently and arose and placed the package in a drawer and locked it.

"I will have the cashier place it in the safety vault in the morning," she said, but her visitor did not seem in the least anxious about a package which, judging from the contents, represented a large surface value.

It was after banking hours, but Nellie had some pressing work that would keep her late at her desk. Mr. Gregory Valle and his son, Clinton, had gone to a bankers' convention at the county seat and would not return until later.

"Young Mr. Valle told me that I was to bring you a hot supper from the hotel when I come on watch duty at nine o'clock," the janitor said.

"Mr. Valle is very thoughtful," murmured the young lady.

"And he will call when the eleven o'clock train comes in to see you home safely, he told me."

Nellie muttered and flushed. She more than liked Clinton Valle. It was a strange circumstance, her present environment. Gregory Valle, after operating his old established bank on a humdrum basis for a quarter of a century, had decided to put in plate glass and marble counters and electric lights. Of course an up-to-date stenographer and typist must follow. Nellie Lane had been hired from the city and a jewel of industry she proved. At the very first Clinton Valle had fallen in love with her. Now Clinton feared and Nellie suspected that the precise and cold-blooded father would replace her with a successor to break up their budding love romance.

Not that Mr. Valle did not value Nellie at her true worth, but she was poor, and his son could take his pick among a choice bevy of heiresses, and money was the god of the old banker.

The janitor pulled down the shades and left the bank. He was to return in four hours. Nellie got out a great pile of papers and began to work. She was fully engrossed in her task, an hour later, when she started, paled and stared with a thrill at three men.

"Don't scream or stir, or get hysterics, little one," spoke their leader smoothly. "We're here to do a job and all you've got to do is to keep quiet. She's your special care, Jim," and tranquilly one of his pals slouched into a seat opposite Nellie, revolver in hand.

"We have three safe hours," resumed the leader. "Get out the tools. Of course the stuff is in the vault. Rig up the oxyacetylene torch and we'll burn out the locks."

Nellie was helpless to defy or baffle the cracksmen, but she thought hard. She knew that aside from the regular funds, the bank carried all the cash tax collections of the district, amounting to half a million dollars.

"What's pleasing you?" projected the main burglar, as Nellie indulged in a gleesome chirp of a laugh.

"I was thinking you'll waste your time," replied Nellie coolly. "There are two more doors to get through and a double safe to—to—"

"Crack?" grinned the burglar.

"Yes," nodded Nellie. "Besides, you will spoil the beautiful locks and you look wicked enough to carry off a lot of stuff belonging to cranks and not that. There's money enough lying loose outside here to satisfy any reasonable robber."

"You're an original one!" chuckled the admiring cracksman. "I suppose you'll show us where this aforesaid money is?"

"I will," assured Nellie, promptly. "If you promise to go away and not try to get into that vault."

"And how much loose change do you let us gather up?" propounded the fellow satirically.

"Oh, about two hundred thousand dollars. There's a key. Open that drawer over yonder and be satisfied with what you find."

The leader took one look at the package the secret service man had left with Nellie.

"Fellows, here's a royal fortune!" he shouted delirously to his confreres. "Little girl, you're a jewel," and disappeared with his followers and the "fortune," in question. And Nellie with a placid smile resumed her work. She wondered how soon the looters would discover that the money in the package was counterfeit, just found with a gang the secret service men had broken up.

Nellie called up the police and told her story. She had saved the bank a heavy loss, that was sure, and Gregory Valle forgave her for being poor, which fact his bright-minded son took advantage of by asking Nellie to become his wife.

THE LAST SHOT.

Dramatic Incident That Closed the Franco-Prussian War.

There was probably no incident in the Franco-Prussian war of 1870 more dramatic than that which marked its close. Herr Forckenbeck, president of the Prussian chamber of deputies, was sent with a colleague to Versailles to congratulate King William upon his election as emperor.

Bismarck, who had just concluded the terms of peace with France, invited them to supper and in the course of the meal said:

"This night at 12 o'clock the last shots will be exchanged between our troops and the French, and I have conceded to the French the honor of the last shot."

Forckenbeck and his colleague left their host before midnight, drew out their watches, stood underneath a lantern of the Hotel du Reservoir and waited. First there was a cannon shot from the German lines; then a solemn stillness; then followed the last reply from Mont Valerien. The tower clock at Versailles struck 12. The French war had ended.—Exchange.

English laboratory tests indicate that radium may be used as fertilizer. If $150,000 worth of radium is used to treat a cancer, how much would be needed to treat a rundown farm?

A "war tax" for Americans for a war in which they are not engaged will be an anomaly. That it may be necessary throws light on the interdependence of nations under modern conditions.

BEST TOOLS FOR GARDEN

Laying Hens Are More Profitable Than Ever.

Frequent Change of Pasture Protects Lambs from Disease and Ensure Steady Gains — Annual Pasture Has Proven Satisfactory.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

MOST gardeners use a hoe, rake, spade, and digging fork in their gardens. The three last are used chiefly during spring preparation of the soil and again in the fall during the harvesting of the crop. The hoe, however, is used almost all summer.

Most people in buying tools simply take what is offered, never considering that in using the heavier types sold in many stores much energy is spent in handling these, that could be used more profitably in doing other garden work. Besides, it is expected that women and children will do much of the garden work this season and it is necessary to give them implements suited to their strength.

For these reasons it has been urged on the gardeners to buy a hoe called the triangle, onion or beet hoe, with a cutting edge 4¼ inches wide. This hoe is light to handle and does very satisfactory work, especially close in around the plants in the row. With it should be used the "Buco" type of cultivator with the two outside tynes removed. These two tools will do better work than any of the ordinary hoes with a great deal less expenditure of strength and in shorter time.

Where one has a larger garden, say 60 x 100 feet, it will be well to invest in a wheel hoe to help out the two above-mentioned tools. With the "Buco" to make a deeper mulch after a heavy rain or continuous tramping over the soil, the small hoe for close weeding, the wheel hoe makes it much easier to maintain a good mulch during the dry season, thus conserving moisture and advancing plant growth.—A. H. MacLennan, B.S.A., Ontario Vegetable Specialist.

HOT WEATHER POULTRY CALENDAR.

The hen that laid 123 eggs in 1917 made the same profit as the 123-egg hen in 1914.

The hen that laid less than 123 eggs in 1917 made a smaller profit than in 1914.

The hen that laid more eggs than 123 in 1917 made a larger profit than in 1914.

In view of the high price of feed can the farmer afford to keep the poor-laying hens in 1918?

The rooster, unless kept for next year's breeding, is too expensive a luxury to keep—and he'll help relieve the meat shortage.

The market for the cull stuff promises to be good this month—and by marketing in June the distribution is more equalized.

The good layer of the yellow-legged breeds at this season loses the color from the feet and bill and these latter becoming almost white. The sleek plumaged, fat yellow-legged hens are usually very poor layers. It will pay to cull them out now.

The abdominal cavity, or the space between the pelvic bones (situated under the tail) and the end of the breast or keel bones should be relatively soft and flexible. If it is full of hard fat the hen is usually a very indifferent layer.

As a rule the earlier maturing pullets are the earlier and most profitable layers. By marking these the best breeders may be selected.

In grading up a laying flock purebred eggs should be purchased. From the chicks good female breeding stock may be secured. The male may be secured in very many cases in Ontario, from eggs secured by children taking part in school fairs. Watch the school fair winners this year.

It saves work to let the hens feed themselves—a hopper may be built at home without great expense.

Keep hens that lay over 100 eggs yearly and feed them carefully; kill the rooster and sell infertile eggs; gather the eggs daily and keep in a cool place in clean baskets; send the eggs to market quickly and regularly.—Prof. W. R. Graham.

Summer Forage for Lambs.

Frequent change of pasture is beneficial to, and relished by, all classes of stock and this applies with special emphasis to the case of sheep. It is true for two reasons. Sheep are subject to parasitic disease which may be prevented to a large extent by not pasturing on any one area for too great a length of time. In addition to this they are possibly more fastidious about their food than some other farm animals. It is not practicable on every farm to arrange for a succession of pastures during the grazing season. However, the same area will sustain considerable more sheep if such an arrangement is feasible. Rye sown early in the fall furnishes a good deal of pasture in the late fall and early spring. After the rye is eaten off in the spring rape may be sown on this land and will come along for pasture in June or July. Alfalfa and red clover are satisfactory pasture crops and will serve until the rape is ready. An annual pasture consisting of one bushel each of wheat, oats and barley together with eight pounds of red clover provides a good pasture for the early summer months, and the clover coming along in the autumn will give a nice picking. This annual pasture may be sown any time early in May. Without a great deal of additional labor it is possible to have a succession of crops ready for seeding throughout the entire season. The increase in health and condition of the flock will amply repay any such outlay of time and expense.—J. P. Sackville, B.S.A., Ontario Agricultural College.

College professors of the country are arising in a body to demand higher pay. They can't ask for shorter hours without siding with their natural enemies, the students.

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS

A tendency to rheumatism once established in the system is manifested by the return of the acute pains with every spell of bad weather. This is the reason so many people still think that the trouble is due to cold or damp. The fact is known, however, and acknowledged by all medical writers, that with the appearance of rheumatism there is a rapid thinning of the blood, and that the rheumatic poisons are only expelled from the system when the blood is restored to its normal condition. Enriching and purifying the blood by means of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the best known cure for rheumatism. Lumbago, it may be remarked, is merely a form of rheumatism attacking the muscles of the back and loins and is similarly cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. At the first twinge of either of these troubles these pills should be taken and the poison that causes the trouble will soon be expelled from the blood. Here is proof:—Mr. M. Syapaack, Arnes, Man., says:—"I was almost crippled with rheumatism and suffered greatly from the almost constant pains. I tried several medicines, but without benefit. Then I was advised to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after taking them for a couple of months every vestige of the trouble had disappeared, and I have since enjoyed the most perfect health. In view of my own experience I believe there is no case of rheumatism Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will not cure."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Rack, Pace and Amble.

The rack is a gait of the horse between a trot and a gallop or canter, in which the fore feet move as in a slow gallop, while the hind feet move as in a trot or pace. It is usually an artificial gait, but is sometimes hereditary or natural. There is much confusion of terms in respect to this gait, due to the fact that the gait itself is somewhat varied, according as the racker carries the one or the other fore foot foremost in the galloping motion of the fore feet; that many confound the rack with the pace, the words often being used synonymously, and that many have mistaken the use of the words "pace" and "amble." There is abundant evidence that the American pace of today is the amble of Europeans of the last century and earlier. The motion of the hind feet is the same in the trot, the pace and the rack. In the trot the diagonal hind and fore feet move nearly simultaneously. In the pace or amble the hind and fore feet of the same side move nearly simultaneously.—Boston Globe.

A DISH OF SNAILS.

They Have a Flavor Wholly Different From Any Other Food.

It is a mistake to think that snails are eaten only by the French. They have been known and used to a certain extent by the English ever since the days when snails boiled in milk were esteemed a remedy for consumption, and it has been said that a certain breed of snail now found in Surrey, England, was imported by one of the earls of Arundel for use of his failing wife.

One of the recipes for cooking snails is indicated by the verse of Edmund Spenser, which runs:

With our sharp weapons we shal thee fray,
And take the cas thi that thou nest in.
We shal thee flay out of thy foule skin,
And in a dish, with onyons and peper,
We shal thee dresse with strong vynegare.

If you have never eaten snails, and the majority of persons who will read this have not, it is difficult to comprehend what the snail tastes like. It is difficult, if not impossible, to describe a flavor or a scent without comparison to something already known by the person to whom one would transmit the information, and it is said by an authority on snails that they have an original kind of flavor, not in the least like anything else. To be at his best the snail should be young and in vigorous and robust health. If improperly cooked he will be tough; if properly cooked he will be tender.

Snail culture in France is profitable. A single snail can produce sixty little snails in a season, but birds like them, frost kills them and some may run, or crawl, away. A French newspaper recently published the information that half a million "first quality" snails, the price of which averages about $1.40 per thousand, can be produced on an acre of land. It is necessary to feed them only once a day, but they have good appetites, especially after a rain, for cabbage and other green vegetables.—Washington Star.

GOT RID OF BRONCHITIS.

Mr. W. H. Walker, Calmar, Alta., writes: "I am pleased to say that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has done much good to myself, wife and children. My eldest girl, seven years old, had bronchitis and the doctor who attended her did not seem to do much good. We got Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for her and she soon got well. We always keep this medicine in the house now ready for use and find that it soon cures coughs and colds."

OPENING OF COURTROOM

Interesting Ceremony Took Place This Afternoon--New Courtroom is All That Could Be Desired

THE ADDRESSES

The opening of the June sittings of the County Court at one o'clock this afternoon was preceded by the formal dedication of the new Court-Room. With His Honour Judge Huycke on the bench were Warden Anderson and Canon J. C. Davidson. Members of the Bar present were as follows: D. W. Dumble, K.C.; Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, E. A. Peck, F. D. Kerr, O. A. Langley, J. H. Burnham, M.P.; W. J. Johnston, J. L. Goodwill, L. J. McElderry, Joseph Wearing, and G. N. Gordon.

It fell to the lot of Mr. D. W. Dumble, K.C., dean of the Peterborough Law Association, to introduce the subject with an interesting historical resume of the Court-House Building since its inception in the early days of Peterborough.

It was a significant occasion, and it was not without a feeling of strangeness that the members of the Bar endeavoured to adapt themselves to the new and pretentious surroundings. Mr. F. D. Kerr, as president of the Peterborough Bar Association, addressed the gathering, and reminded those present of the great conflict that is raging, in which the Peterborough Bar is largely represented by past and present members. Mr. Dumble was characterized by Mr. Kerr as the nestor of the Peterborough bar.

Mr. J. H. Burnham.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., who followed, commended the action of the Peterborough County Council in contributing such a fine Court-Room. Mr. Burnham said he was pleased to know that His Honour Judge Huycke was worthy of the Court-Room, and the Court-Room was worthy of the Judge.

In reply, His Honour Judge Huycke complimented the County Council on the happy consummation of its task. "It is to Warden Anderson and his colleagues whom we are indebted for such pleasant surroundings," said His Honour Judge Huycke.

His Honour also expressed his appreciation of the action of the Mayor and city officials in permitting the use of the City Hall while the old Court-House was being reconstructed.

"I hope in the days to come, as in the days that are gone, that the principles of right and justice will be upheld in this Court-Room," said His Honour in conclusion.

Warden Anderson made an appropriate reply, in which he expressed his appreciation of the kind references to the work of the County Council.

Canon J. C. Davidson also made a very acceptable reference to the event, and concurred in the approval

Germans Suffer Terrible Losses Due to the Heroic Resistance of the French

Hindenburg Throws Battalion After Battalion Into the Melting Pot---Maximum Advance For the Enemy is Three Miles in One Day--Fighting of the Fiercest Character Continues.

BALANCE IN FAVOUR OF THE FRENCH

Canadian Press:

PARIS, June 11.—All advices from the battle front to-day show that the enemy is putting forth every possible effort in his design to push toward Paris, throwing division after division into the "melting pot." So far he has succeeded in two days of fighting in carrying forward his line at the maximum point of advance at Vignemont, a distance of six miles. In this he has been materially aided by a considerable number of tanks, which the artillery was at first unable to demolish. The balance seems in favour of the French. The German Army as a whole has been engaged for the past three months with slight facilities for renewal. The resistance that is being offered by the French forces in this battle has not been surpassed for determination during the whole war.

DIFFICULTIES IMMENSE.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, June 11.—(By the Associated Press).—Difficulties confronting the enemy are very great in nature of the country he the now entered in his new drive. The Terrain comprises sharp hills, deep valleys and thick woods. Where his most pronounced progress has been made, in the centre of the battlefield ground, forms a sort of hollow, through which runs the main road from Senlis to Roye and the Compiegne-Roye railroad.

CANNOT LAST FOR EVER.

Special o the Examiner:

PARIS, June 11.—In summing up its comment on the military situation, "Le Journal" says: "The enemy's effort is a gigantic one, but it cannot last for ever. He is now bringing into action about 190 divisions. The time is not far distant when all of these will have reached a dangerous state of exhaustion, and this at the same moment that the young and vigorous American army, impatient for action, will have been formed. Experience shows that an offensive is bound to play itself out in not more than three and a half months."

COUNTER ATTACKING.

(By Henry Wood—United Press Service).

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, June 11.—The Germans engaged between 25 and 30 divisions (240,000 to 300,000 men) in the new drive up to midnight, feeding in battalion after battalion with a prodigality unequalled in any previous phase of the offensive.

The heroic French resistance, which necessitated this feeding in, changed completely the enemy's plan and character of German tactics from those which largely ensured the success of previous drives. The counter attacking continues at every point on the entire front from Montdidier to Noyon. Almost every minute the French keep the Hun first line troops almost constantly engaged, thus preventing them from being superseded by recruiting waves of fresh troops. In every counter attack the French succeeded in taking prisoners along the entire battle front, who unanimously declare that the German losses are frightful. French troops participating in these counter attacks also find heaps of bodies of Boches everywhere.

Artillery Activity.

French cavalrymen, fighting afoot on the summit of Laflemont Plateau, who succeeded in establishing, after their position had been entirely surrounded, declared that previous to their departure, they repulsed fourteen infantry assaults.

The battle is accompanied by one of the fiercest artillery duels. Owing to the Germans' slow advance, they have been able to bring up their light guns, but their heavies are still firing from their original positions, which are constantly under French bombardment. Despite the incredible amount of material engaged and the unequalled masses of men constantly fed in, the Germans at the most extreme point of their advance last night had averaged only five kilometers (about three miles) penetration a day.

The French airmen continue to maintain an incontestable superiority, bombing and machine gunning German columns and inflicting the heaviest losses which the aviators themselves are able to see.

The railway station at Roye was observed in flames, following a bombing raid.

THE GERMANS ARE MAKING A SUPREME EFFORT TO ADVANCE

Present Drive is Becoming the Fiercest and Most Cruel Battle of the War—French Expected Present Attack

HEAVY ENEMY LOSSES

(By Henry Wood—United Press Service.)

WITH FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, June 11.—The new German drive between Montdidier and Noyon, is rapidly becoming the fiercest and most cruel battle of the war. Into it, the Germans apparently are determined to throw their last reserves, in a supreme effort to separate the allied armies and reach Paris, before America's full participation wrests from them the last hopes of eventual victory.

Already, the steady flow of American, Italian and British divisions into France, coupled with terrific losses inflicted on the Germans since March 21, practically has wiped out numerical superiority with which the Germans opened the offensive.

Expected Attacks

It is certain that if the Allies hold out two months longer the Americans at the present rate of arrival, will give them an incontestable and crushing superiority. As a consequence, the French are resisting in the present battle with extreme energy, equalled only by the prodigality with which Germans are rushing up their last resources. No longer is it a secret tha the French expected the present attack and were as fully prepared as affectives and material would permit.

It is likewise known that the Germans knew the French expected and prepared for the attack, yet, facing the heavy losses which such a situation necessarily must entail the enemy unhesitatingly attacked. They rushed up reserves to replace their losses until more than twenty divisions (240,000 men) have been fed into the battle to date.

Still Holding

On both wings, where the French are doggedly holding out villages like Courcelles, have changed hands every few hours day and night since the battle began. The last carrier pigeons from Le Flemont which was completely encircled, brought word that the French there were still holding out although they now possibly have been submerged.

The Germans still are making their

French Troops Are Putting Up a Stubborn Resistance—No Change in the Situation

BRITISH ADVANCE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, June 11.—The British last night carried out an operation in the east of Amiens by which their line south of Morlancourt was advanced a half mile on a front of a mile and a half, the War Office announced to-day. Two hundred and thirty prisoners were taken.

THE STATEMENT READS:

Last night another minor operation was undertaken with complete success by Australian troops in the region of Morlancourt. The line south of the village has been advanced to a depth of nearly a half mile on a front of over a mile and a half and 233 prisoners, 21 machine guns, and a trench mortar were captured by us.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, June 11.—The German drive between Montdidier and Noyon continued unremittingly last night, says to-day's official report. On their left the French offered effective resistance. They recaptured the village of Mery. The principal German effort was directed against the centre. Attacking with heavy forces, the enemy drove back the French as far as the region of Aronde River, but by brilliant counter attack the French hurled them back all along the front and re-established their line south of Belloy at St. Maur, south of Marqueglish and Vandelicourt.

THE STATEMENT FOLLOWS:

Late yesterday and in the night the Germans continued to exert pressure in the direction of Estrees, St. Denis and Ribecourt. On our left our resistance was effective. The Germans were able to capture neither Le Ployron nor Courcelles. The village of Mery was recaptured by the French at ten o'clock last night. The principal effort of the Germans was exerted along the front of Belloy and Marqueglise. By a powerful attack, delivered with a great number of effectives, the enemy succeded in driving back the French to the vicinity of the Aronde River, but by a magnificent return of courage, the French hurled back the enemy all along the front, re-establishing their positions on a line south of Belloy, at St. Maur, south of Marqueglise and at Vandelicourt. On the right the French are engaged in renewed struggles north of Dreslincourt. The Germans, who had concentrated very heavy forces in this region were able to reach Antoval Compaigne, compelling the French troops to withdraw their line of resistance to the west and south of Ribecourt.

On their right the French are engaged in violent combats with large forces concentrated by the enemy, who was able to gain ground. The French withdrew their line to the west and south of Ribecourt.

ILLUMINATING CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN ALDERMAN F. H. DOBBIN AND MR. J. H. BURNHAM, M.

Member For West Peterborough Disapproves of Mr. Dobbin's Met of Addressing Women in Connection With Patriotic Fund bursements—Has No Complaint Regarding the Local Patri Committee.

MR. BURNHAM RECEIVES UNSIGNED LETTE

The following letters, supplied by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., are self-explanatory. The first is a letter written by Mr. Burnham to the press. The second letter presumes to be from Mr. F. H. Dobbin, who is in charge of the local branch of the Patriotic Fund. Both letters follow:

To the Editor.

Sir, — As the following came to me unsigned I will reply to the sender through the press, and, presuming the sender to be Mr. Dobbin, I have less hesitation in acknowledging it. Mr. Dobbin should never have been allowed to administer a fund which is dispensed to women. So many women have come to me at different times, complaining bitterly of his gross rudeness and heartlessness, and so many women whom I had wished to send to the Patriotic Fund Office positively refused to go because of Mr. Dobbin, that I know what I am talking about when I say that women should not be required to interview him. He seems to lack the elements in his nature of good faith, and on no condition would I care to place reliance upon what he says without corroborative circumstances.

My remarks at Hamilton, as Lt.-Col. Hendrie, the chairman, explained through the press, were directed to the insufficiency of the income provided for the soldiers' dependents considering the enormous rise in prices, and I can say further that after what The Globe called my "slashing attack" on pensions in the House of Commons, pensions were raised from $480 a year to $600 a year and all else pertaining to them as well, and instead of a 99 per cent. disability getting an 80 per cent. pension and a 79 per cent. disability getting a 60 per cent. pension, all the intermediate classes of disabilities are now provided for.

Excepting Mr. Dobbin, I have no complaint to make regarding the local Patriotic Committee. But it is because of criticism of the insufficiency of systems that they are improved, and the Patriotic Fund may well be (as I understand it is to be) taken in hand by the Government and properly supplied with funds.

J. H. Burnham.

Letter to Mr. Burnham.

J. H. Burnham, Esq., M.P.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Sir,—By resolution of the distribution committee of this branch of the Patriotic Fund, I am directed to ask your kind attention to the following, based on a recent public utterance made by yourself at Hamilton, Ont.

The committee respectfully brings forward the contention that had remarks been made by some one identified with public activities, matter might have been allowed go without remonstrance. But w the statement is made by the sit member of the House of Comm from his Riding, and who is ass ed to be well informed, and statement concerns the function this committee and of the secre it is then right that such shoul referred to and attention drawn variation from known and recog facts.

Your opinion as to the adeq of allowance to dependents is ent your own, and in no way does committee ask to circumscribe opinion and statement. But it say, that you might take into sideration the known facts b basing your statement on ge lines, and the facts, so far as branch of the Fund is concerned as follows:

That the city and county placed at credit of the local br $90,000 ($6,000 less than last ye

That this amount has to mee allowance until February 1st, 19

That no other source of reven open to the branch, save tha public effort would be made to an additional sum, and to add sum to the total and increase allowance. That course is al open. But those in touch with a are not hopeful that such an a would be successful.

The allowance made by this b ("pittance," you call them) w as to family responsibility, in th lowing sums:

Per year and month. From Fund.	Other sources.	Tl in

...FIRE PREVENTION.

...Installment of fire waste is one ...of the greatest problems, says ...Commission of Conservation, and ...an impressive statement there ...is no argument, especially in view ...of fact that millions of dollars ... values were destroyed last ...year by fires for which neglect of sim...precautions were responsible.

...Every council should remember ...things when the revised building ...comes up for consideration ...The changes in the bylaw rec...mended by the Fire Chief, insur...ance experts and contractors, are de...signed to remedy the conditions com...plained of, and there should be no ...delay in passing the measure. It ...is in the right direction, and ...should have been taken years ago. ...The complaint that such legislation ...is like building, is ridiculous—it ...will stop jerry-building. People ...who put houses built will be glad ...that precautions against fire ...have been taken.

...The revised bylaw should be adopt...ed without delay. It is not enough to ...have fire-fighting apparatus; to ...quote "Conservation"—"trained ...firemens may extinguish fires ...but are helpless to prevent ...conflagrations."

...ONDITIONS IN RUSSIA.

...An authentic light on condi...tions in Russia for many months has ...been published by the despatch from ...Mr. Shaplen, correspondent of the ...New York Times, which appeared in yes...terday's Examiner. Mr. Shaplen, who ...was for seven months in Russia, ...managed to elude the different ...parties and to reach Stockholm, and ...is full of Russian affairs at first ...hand. The most definite information ...he has come from that stricken ...country. His belief, and it must be ...remembered not only that he is a train...ed observer, but is also a Russian by ...birth, is that the day of the Bol...sheviki is almost at an end, and that ...a great German scheming, and Ger...many, too, if necessary, a ...counter-revolution is fast ...developing that will sweep the Bol...sheviki out of existence, and ...restore a monarchy. Germany, he ...says, is taking no official part ...in it, but is ready to take ad...vantage of the situation, and with ...her sounding is gradually ap...proaching the heart of Russia in or...der to get it at the desirable mo...ment. Mr. Shaplen confirms the fact ...that the Soviet regime has been practi...cally abolished in Ukraine, in Finland, ...in the Don region, while similar ...progress has been made in the Baltic ...provinces.

...Apart from an allied stand...point encouraging, as it does ...not much chance of the Rus...sians coming back as a factor in the ...war against Germany. Mr. Shaplen's ...letter on the other hand shows that ...Germany will be unable to or...ganize democracy against the for...mer Tsars, but adds a ray of ...hope in the statement that only the ...anti-democratic elements will be ...willing to raise a real army to end ...the domination of the whole of ...Russia that it is not yet too late ...to do this.

...ALLIED BLUDGEON.

...There is significance in the state...ment of General Foch, commander-in-...chief of the allies, that "a purely ...defensive attitude does not result in a ...victory which augurs ill for German ...plans and is an omen of brightest im...port for the success of the cause of ...democracy. General Foch does not do ...much talking for the newspapers — ...which makes his striking article in ...The Field" a matter of supreme im...portance. In it can be read the strat...egy that is being followed by General ...Foch and more important still there is ...more than a hint of what is in store ...for the Germans.

...The German general staff even with ...the aid of the "sharpened genius" of ...Ludendorff, will not be able to find ...much encouragement in the follow...ing statement from the Generalissimo ...of the Allied Armies:

...To maintain our position is not ...synonymous with being victorious, ...and even prepares for a defeat. If ...we remain where we are and do not ...fix the direction of attack, to guard ...against the plans of the enemy and ...prevent him from carrying out the ...same manoeuvre we must undertake ...to carry on and sustain numerous ...combats, each with determined ...aim.

...But since there remains no ...doubt that decisive attack is the ...very keystone of a battle, all other ...other actions which make up a bat...tle must be envisaged, considered, ...organized, provided with forces in ...the measure in which they will pre...pare, facilitate and guarantee de...velopment of a decisive attack char...acterized by its mass, its surprise, ...its speed, and for which in conse...quence, it is essential that there ...shall be the maximum reserve ...force possible of troops of manoeu...vre. The reserve—that is to say, the ...prepared bludgon—is organized, ...and kept carefully instructed to exe...cute the single act of battle from ...which results are expected, namely, ...the decisive attack.

...Reserves must be husbanded ...with the most extreme parsimony, ...so that the bludgeon may be strong ...enough to make the blow as violent ...as possible. Let loose at the finish, ...without any lurking idea of saving ...them, with a well-thought-out plan ...for winning the battle at a point ...chosen and determined, reserves are ...thrown in altogether in an action ...surpassing in violence and energy ...all other phases of battle, an action ...with proper characteristics, mass, ...method. All our forces really par...ticipate, either by preparing it or ...by carrying it out.

...In this, our supreme aim, we ...must not be deceived by appear...ances. Although theory falls when ...applied by feeble hands, and when ...accessories obscure the main princi...ple, history and reason show us ...that in battle there is a single ar...gument which is worth while, name...ly, decisive attack, which is alone ...capable of assuring the desired re...sult—the overthrow of the adver...sary."

...The prepared bludgeon," of which ...General Foch speaks, may even now ...be preparing to execute its mission— ...if the commander-in-chief deems the ...time is ripe—or it is possible it may ...be months before the blow falls. But ...the menace of that stroke hangs over ...the German armies, and the terri...torial gains at great cost that they ...have been able to make will lose their ...value in the occupation of having, ...sooner or later, to face the storm ...that one of these days General Foch ...will let loose on them. The state...ment from the allied leader is one ...of the best bits of war news the al...countries have heard in months.

THE NATIONAL WASTE.

During the past fortnight attention has again been called to the necessity for still further economies, Sir George Foster in speaking of the cost of the war to Canada, said we had no idea of the burden that was resting on the country and would be for years to come. "The gospel of thrift," he said, "must sift into the Canadian people; it is making progress but the goal is not yet reached." There seems, in fact, to be a general agreement upon this point. It is when the question of ways and means is discussed that differences of opinion arise. During the past two weeks, however, two or three events have impressed upon us the necessity and advisability of further increases in taxation. There is no lack of evidence of ability to bear a much heavier burden than is at present imposed. Taxation in Canada is much lighter than in Great Britain, but even there it was reported the other day that musical instruments, which if not luxuries, are, at least, not articles of necessity, are in greater demand than ever before.

In our own case in Canada, while imports have been heavily taxed, the income tax even as revised this year, merely touches the surface, and the individual who restricts his expenditures to necessities or near-necessities has a large margin still. In fact, were this not the case, there would be no necessity whatever for such government regulations as those regarding the consumption of food and other restrictions of expenditure.

President Wilson, in addressing a joint session of Congress on the 27th of May, emphasized the same point. "Only fair, equitably distributed taxation," he said, "of the widest incidence and drawing chiefly from the sources which would be likely to demoralize credit by their very abundance, can prevent inflation and keep our industrial system free from speculation and waste. We shall naturally tax, therefore, I suppose, to war profits and incomes and luxuries for the additional taxes."

There could be no more direct acknowledgment of the fact that economy is more satisfactorily realized by taxation than by any other means, and by cutting off the income of the individual unnecessary expenditure is prevented at its very source. This is the case with the income tax, and once the machinery for collection is created in Canada, an increase in the tax will involve little or no increase in the cost of collection. Taxation of the incomes of corporations is the next great source to which the President referred. In this case, income is obtained immediately after its acuisition and before it is distributed among individuals. The war profits tax or excess profits tax is merely a special case of the business profits tax, which is considered a fit subject for a special high rate of taxation.

In the report of the Cost of Living Department on millers' profits, the fact that millers' profits have increased enormously since the commencement of the war appears to be clearly established, but the method of dealing with these excess profits that is recommended by the report is not that of legislation of a regulative character, but as the report states: "It is clear the only way to reach the profits of the milling companies is to increase the tax on the net profits on total investment for the year." The same point is brought out in the speech of President Wilson mentioned above. "Profiteering that cannot be got at by restrictions of conscience can be got at by taxation."

The simplest and obviously the most effective method of restricting private expenditure, is taxation, which taps springs of extravagance at their very source. The best judge of individual necessities is always the individual himself, and a more satisfactory result can be secured by permitting the individual to decide upon what he shall expend his income, than by prescribing it by government regulations.—The Financial Post.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Petitions against the closing of restaurants on Sunday are being largely signed, as might be expected.

Every bushel of wheat saved from normal consumption on this continent will provide bread for at least one soldier in Europe until the next harvest.

Sir Eric Geddess' statement in regard to the submarine situation is cheerful reading.

It is the accumulation of littles that make the large totals. Every slice of bread and every spoonful of sugar saved is a contribution, however small, to the winning of the war. Let even the children be taught this fact and trained to show their patriotism by avoiding waste.—The Presbyterian Witness.

Labour Frowns On Strikes During The World Conflict

Wants "Labour Managers" Appointed—Seeks Fuller Co-operation With Capital

Canadian Press Despatch.

ST. PAUL, June 11.—Autocracy, militarism, and its most dangerous supporting weapon, irresponsible diplomacy, must perish; democracy, justice, freedom, and absolute confidence, between governments and people must be established and triumph," is the verdict of American labor upon its country's participation in the war, expressed yesterday by the report of President Samuel Gompers and the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor to the annual convention in session here. "No strike should be inaugurated which cannot be justified to the man risking his life on the firing line in France."

With equal emphasis, insisting that just labor policies govern war production, the report declares:—"Those contributing to production should have a part in its control. In looking toward the future, we feel keenly that the nature of social development will depend largely upon the principles which workers shall demand as the basis for relationship. The present war is an extraordinary opportunity to determine those principles. As a war necessity we are seeking the principles which will assure the most efficient co-operation. This co-operation must come from the two primary forces of society—the possessors of creative labor power and controllers of capital."

The report renews its declaration that labor cannot be classed as a commodity, and demands "equal right to representation and equal voice on all agencies determining matters affecting their interests and welfare, whether in private or government employment.

The report suggests that all producing enterprises be equipped with a "labor manager" as well as a chief engineer and other executives, and said that "there ought to be in charge of all labor problems of production a high powered trained labor man."

The report cites the insistence of its officials for the maintenance of the eight-hour day. "Labor turnover" the report attacked as even less desirable for the worker than for the employer, and advocates as a remedy its labor manager plan. It recommends to permanent industrial establishments regular conferences between committees of employes and the management, to meet all problems. Discussing the question of workmen's compensation, the report notes the "development of favorable sentiment for the enactment of health insurance laws."

The report announces also that the Executive Council, in accordance with the instruction of the last convention, has adopted a resolution recommending to affiliated unions that no individuals be admitted to union membership unless they are citizens of the United States.

"The American labor movement faces the difficult problems of the future with an organization numerically stronger and more effectively united than ever before," the council's statement concluded.

LEMON JUICE TAKES OFF TAN

Girls! Make bleaching lotion if skin is sunburned, tanned or freckled

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle, sunburn and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very, small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons, and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of Orchard White for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles, sunburn, windburn and tan disappear, and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

Buggy Demolished By A Street Car

About eight minutes to twelve today, the C. G. E. car crashed into a buggy, smashing it beyond repair. The gates at the G. T. R. depot were down but were raised a little to let a buggy through. The C. G. E. car which was standing there also made a dash for the opening and the derail diverted it off the track for a considerable distance. It crashed against the buggy and reduced it to matchwood.

In the buggy were Miss Susan Dickson, Miss Molly LaFlamte and Miss Mary Patterson, R.R. No. 2.

The horse and buggy belonged to Samuel Dickson of R. R No. 2. The girls and horse miraculously escaped injury.

FOR BABY'S TENDER SKIN.

A child's skin is tender as well as beautiful and eczema may be caused by chafing of clothing, the use of poor soap, exposure to cold or sudden change of temperature. Probably no treatment for eczema has ever proven so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this applies particularly to baby eczema. This ointment is delightfully soothing, stops the itching and consequently prevents scratching. Gradually the sores are healed up, and the skin is left soft and velvety.

FORWARD MOVEMENT LAUNCHED AT THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Important Resolution Presented a This Morning's Session--Theories Thrown on the Scrap Heap.

HUN DOCTRINES

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Ont., June 11.—The forward movement launched last night at the General Assembly under such enthusiastic circumstances was the chief matter for consideration at this morning's session, and expectations are that it will continue to be a live subject through this afternoon.

Rev. Dr. Hanson to-day presented a resolution moving the adoption of the schemes set forth for the propagation of Presbyterianism and Christianity and for the advancement of plans by means of which it is hoped to obtain both men and money sufficient to attain the high ends aimed at.

International Politics.

Dr. Hanson in his address, which was concerned mainly with the issues of international politics, declared that the church has learned through the war to throw upon the scrap heap a good many principles and theories to which its members formerly clung.

In other days not long past he said the church had been accustomed to accept as final the scholarship and theories of Germany, but the church has found that Germany, who boasted most of her intellectual attainments has been guilty of not only the most atrocious acts of physical ferocity, but the gravest conduct of national and individual immorality. He denied the theories of those who point to Sir Oliver Lodge and others of such schools, saying that men are advancing this education evolution and that intellectual men bestir themselves about their sins.

The Great End.

"Man can attain the great end only by regeneration," he continued. "Formerly," he asserted, "it was as much as a man's ministerial life was worth to challenge any of the so-called ascertained doctrines produced in Germany and he expressed himself as pleased that the church is not now bound to such leadership.

Rev. Mr. Laidlaw seconded Dr. Hanson's resolution, but rather than allow insufficient time for the development of the proposition in the Assembly, it was concluded to allow the whole question to stand over until time is available for an unhindered discussion.

To-day was a day for the reception of delegates by the Assembly members of the Methodist church, of the Baptist church and of the Bible Society conveying their felicitations.

of those present with respect to the adequacy of the new Court-Room and its superior advantages.

Chief of Police Thompson recognized the occasion by having a quartette of his men appear in the Court-Room with their helmets on. This is an innovation so far as this city is concerned, but an accepted custom elsewhere.

An Imposing Room.

The court-room is a splendid compensation for the loss and inconvenience caused by the fire that swept through the central part of the Court House eighteen months ago. The lofty walls are finished in a soft white, that is carried through the partly vaulted ceiling, with its deep light well in the centre of the roof. The ceiling is broken by panels in the intersections of which are electric lighting fixtures which will diffuse their illumination by indirect rays. The very spaciousness of the room lends a restful effect, apart from the pervading impression of dignity which it subtly creates. It is worthy of almost any court in the country, and as the seat of Peterborough's County Judge takes a front rank with any of the counties in the province or even in the Dominion.

The furnishings are decidedly effective, and above all imparting a note of quiet richness that leaves nothing to be desired. All the appointments within the court proper are of quarter cut oak, in a slightly dark, natural finish. The centre of the arena, the Judge's dais, immediately arrests attention. It is of course raised above the rest of the room, with an expansive panel against the real wall, that is handsomely bordered with a carved design that is repeated in the face of the Judge's bench, and is also found in the juries boxes. It is all splendid but not showy, it satisfys the eye without a jarring note in the entire arrangement of the furniture parts that comprise a beautiful and harmonious whole.

A railing, also in quartered oak, defines the accommodation for the court, which occupies the west half of the room. Facing the bench is the prisoner's box; on the left are the grand jury seats, thirteen of them, opera chairs in an enclosed box, which is duplicated on the right side for the petit jury for which there are twelve chairs. The witness box is a handsome piece of furniture at the Judge's right. Below the bench is the desk, elevated one step for the Clerk of the Court, Mr. Sherry, and for the Sheriff, and below them the Court Crier sits. Long tables have been provided for the members of the bar and the press. Two dozen oak chairs are distributed at these tables. On the Judge's throne there is supplementary accommodation for at least two other judges for any occasion that may require these additional seats at the bench.

Floor of Basswood.

The floor is of white basswood to muffle footsteps in the room. The public will find comfortable accommodation in the 163 opera chairs in the gallery, which is raised step above step. The wood work in this section is of Georgia pine, in natural finish, and provides an inconspicuous background for the darker oak within the court space.

Council's Work Well Done.

The County Council is to be congratulated upon the results of its work. Before deciding upon the re-arrangement of the court room, and the fittings to be provided, the committee of which Reeve Anderson has been chairman, visited the court houses in Toronto and other cities in the province, adopting some of the ideas they observed, and generally improving upon the best they had seen. The county and city may take a pardonable pride for its County Court room. The lighting is perfect, and even the fastidious lawyers local and visiting, will surely find no grounds for other than the heartiest approval and commendation.

HINDENBURG IS PLAYING A DESPERATE GAME IN HIS LATEST OFFENSIVE

New Gains in Territory Will Make Terrific Inroads Into His Reserve Forces.

(By J. W. T. Mason—United Press Service.)

NEW YORK, June 11.—Von Hindenburg, is showing a bloody determination to pay General Foch's ghastly price for the capture of Compeigne.

The slow advance of Germans in center of Montdidier, Noyon offensive is causing the movement toward Compeigne to assume the same pyramidal from that Gen. Foch enforced on Von Hindenburg during the advance to the Marne. This means that General Foch is master of the situation so far as the future consideration of strategy is concerned. If Compeigne falls into German hands, Von Hindenburg will have been forced to turn his former Montdidier -Noyon position into a sharpe wedge which will add fifteen miles to the German front line for him to defend and six hundred men per mile.

MORE RESERVES NEEDED

The new line will require 90,000 more Germans than formerly for its protection. That is 90,000 more Germans will be removed from Von Hindenburg's reserves and placed in open battle line. The relinquishment of Compeigne to Von Hindenburg might well be considered worth the result plus German casualties which the French are exacting.

There is every reason to believe that in the northern sector, not since Von Hindenburg's spring offensive began, have the German casualties been so high. Proportionately to number of men involved as during the present drive towards Compeigne, the French have heavy masses of troops in the area and ground is excellent for defensive fighting.

A REALIZATION

Von Hindenburg may come to a sudden realization of recklessness of his blind search for territory, and may halt the Compeigne drive before it progresses much further. But the danger already done to him this week has been very great, General Foch can well afford to give up few villages that have fallen to the Germans, but Von Hindenburg cannot afford to add them to his collection of German cemetaries. These new graveyards are being filled with dead Germans. Secretary of War Baker, announced more than 700,0000 Americans already have been sent overseas to continue the war against Germany, Von Hindenburg and the Kaiser can see no answer to fact, but grim spectre of final defeat for Hoh-

Council Will Have Coal Report Ready For Labour Deputation

Fire, Water and Light Committee Last Night Arranged For New Lights and Hydrants—Have Several Wood Proposals, One of Which Will Be Investigated.

Anticipating the Trades and Labour Council's enquiry about the distribution and supplies of coal, the Fire, Water and Light Committee last night arranged to have as complete a report as possible ready for the next regular meeting of the council.

"I've a notion to send some of these letters from the coal companies across the line to the Labour Council so they could see for themselves the difficulties we are facing," Ald. Dobbin remarked.

Ald. Taylor—"We ought to get a report from Ald. Edgar, as Fuel Commissioner."

Ald. Dobbin—"We can get whatever the regulations permit him to make public.

The committee is working on several offers of wood but have nothing definitely settled yet.

TO BUY MOTOR OIL.

Quotations for motor oil on the basis of one barrel lots, were read as follows: Red Indian, 75c; Red Cross, 70c, and Express oil, 65c a gallon.

Ald Saunders moved, seconded by Ald. Worth that the chairman be instructed to purchase motor oil by the barrel and also a container for it.

SEWER BLOCKED UP.

The cause of the sewer backing into the basement at the fire hall was investigated by City Engineer Parsons, whose explanation was received last night. Mr. Parsons expressed the opinion that the sewer should be doubled from Rink street north on Aylmer street, to enlarge its capacity. There might be sand in it, he suggested, and he will look over it again for any blockading deposits

RUN OF MINE COAL.

The city is selling a quantity of run of mine coal, a remnant of last winter's supplies, and will approach the Fuel and Cartage Company for storage accommodation for shipments that are expected to arrive here.

An offer from W. H. Baker to sell the city 1000 cords of hardwood was turned down after careful consideration. It is mostly mixed wood, and the price looked rather steep to the council.

WOOD FOR NOTHING?

Ald. Taylor intimated that the council might be able to get wood for nothing, and Mayor Duncan added that he had been apprised of a similar idea which might be worth while investigating. The committee turned to other possibilities of wood getting, and forgot Ald. Taylor's big idea.

TO PURCHASE UNIFORMS.

The purchase of firemen's uniforms and caps was left to the chairman and Mayor Duncan with power to act. Another tender has been received but the committee turned it over to the sub-committee.

LIGHTS WILL BE PLACED.

Turning to lights, Ald. A. A. McIntyre asked for one at the corner of Bethune street and Aberdeen avenue.

Ald. Weir urged that lights be placed on Euclid avenue; this street has never been artificially illuminated. Cameron street near by will be included.

Ald. Saunders put in a word for Lansdowne street from Lock to Haggart street. Mr. H. O. Fisk reported that the east end of the street was in North Monaghan.

"There ought to be five lights on the north side of Lansdowne street," Ald. Saunders said, and moved, seconded by Ald. Worth, that the following lamps be located as recommended by Mr. Fisk:

Five on Lansdowne street, one on Romaine street, east of the G.T.R.; one on Romaine street, east of Aylmer, near the white brick house; one on Stanley avenue opposite house No. 139.

POISON IVY.

Mayor Duncan informed Ald. Saunders that he had been told of the presence of poison ivy on streets to the north of the Exhibition grounds, and asked him to investigate.

TO MOVE HYDRANT.

The Utilities Commission will be asked to place a hydrant on Concession street, halfway between Dunlop and Smith street.

The City Engineer reported that the hydrant in front of 532 Weller st. was entirely in the sidewalk, and should be moved out 2 1-2 feet. The cost of the work was estimated at $18.

Ald. Worth moved, seconded by Ald. Taylor that this hydrant be moved as recommended.

Ald. Dobbin—You never mention the three or four hydrants in the walk on George street, north of Brock street.

Ald. aylor—There is lots of light there.

SPRAY FOR THE ONION MAGGOT.

As onions constitute a valuable winter crop particular care should be taken this year to protect them from the onion maggot. Before they lay their eggs the adult flies may be destroyed by feeding up on the following poisoned bait spray: Sodium arsenate—one-quarter ounce; cheap molasses—one pint; boiling water—one gallon. The sodium arsenate is first dissolved in boiling water and the molasses is then added. When the mixture has cooled it may be applied from an ordinary watering can with a small rose. The idea is to deposit the poisoned solution on the growing crop in the form of coarse drops. The first application should be made when the plants are about three or four inches high and four or five further applications should be made about a week apart. Bright, calm days should be chosen for this work, if possible.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—By last night's issue of the paper I notice the new regulations governing the restaurants, and also read where it is impossible for the restaurants to operate on the short hours. Now what in the name of common sense does our Council mean? Can plainly see they all must have comfortable homes, and good meals, otherwise this regulation would never have gone into effect. Moreover, can plainly see they never spend many Sundays away from home, and what would they think if they visited another city of 25,000 population, and not be able to get a meal, only at appointed hours, especially if they happened into the city just after the hotel hours. The whole affair is most ridiculous and mighty inconvenient for a great number of local people, and many tourists, but the one it is going to hurt most is the working man, who if it was possible to secure a meal at the hotel, this would mean 75c. or $1.00, whereas something a great deal cheaper would do, and be more suitable to his finances. However, if our Council would look into this matter further, and see what other cities are doing, they will see it is anything but enterprising to make such drastic regulations. Am personally in favour of no serving of ice cream on Sunday, and strongly in favour of the government regulations, but can see no object in leaving our city without a proper and convenient restaurant.

Thanking you for space in your valuable paper. Signed:

...r, in fact almost all, the pay is $20 ...r month.

Could you not, in your position of ...credited usefulness, assist to raise ... additional amount to be distri...ted?

The foregoing in explanation.

The following in remonstrance.

When you undertook to say that ...any of the women do not know ...ers to go for any assistance in ...ir troubles," you could not have ...d in mind what this branch has ...ne, and is doing. And the com...ttee reach the conclusion that had you known the facts, you would have qualified your remarks, so far as this branch is concerned. For, whether you gave it a through or not, the Hamilton public, indeed the general public were right in assuming, that as you came from Peterborough, where the sitting member of the House, were well in the public eye, that at least you would speak personal knowledge gained in your own home town. This assumption, on the part of this committee, is well taken, when we consider the remarks made by the chairman of the Hamilton branch, in saying:

"Let Capt. Burnham go back to his own city and see what is being done there, and if the branches of the various organizations in that locality are dead, see that they awake to their responsibility before coming to a strange place to point out what, in his opinion, should be done."

So, in order to call your attention to the fact that this branch of the Fund is not dead, nor moribund, nor discrepit, I am to tell you what it has done in the way of activities, in addition to the distribution of the Fund moneys. And it is quite plain that you have not consulted either of the two parties most interested. On one hand the women, themselves, and on the other the committee. Else, surely, your conclusion would have been different. There is still time for verification.

This branch has:

For the last three years assumed and taken over the entire correspondence with all departments in connection with non-arrival of assigned pay and separation allowances. Over three thousand letters were written and despatched in the last year on this subject alone.

Has handled and cared for all applications for pensions from dependents, procured the necessary birth certificates, correctly issued the forms and closing the matters up quickly.

Has handled, as the local agency for the Soldiers' Aid Commission, the difficult work of securing employment for men returned from service. Is and has been the means of communication between the employer and the men needing employment. Some hundreds of men have been so placed.

Has unravelled all the snarls that grow up between the Paymaster-General and the beneficiary in the matter of delayed cheques, allowances stopped, and the many cares that annoy the dependents. No woman who has brought her troubles to this office but has had the entire matter taken off her hands and a thorough effort made to have matters rectified.

This committee, by itself and through the secretary, has handled hundreds of separation allowances declarations, thus avoiding the appeal being made to professional men for gratuitous service. Allowances that otherwise, well deserved, would have been denied. And in cases allowances being wrongfully paid, have been advised to the Board of Review for action.

Commending the work on behalf of dependents that has been done by this branch, the Board of Review says:

"I may say that the Separation Allowance Board is more than grateful to you for the accuracy and promptness with which in the past you have conducted investigations for this branch. The value of the work you have done can hardly be over-estimated."

This committee will not make public remonstrance to meet your statements, which, made on general lines, have been taken at Hamilton to apply here. The committee prefers that the men of the city, who have been identified in the work, in raising the funds and in all patriotic work besides, and who know the value of the service that has been given, and is being given daily, shall judge if this one of "various organizations are dead." And no doubt they will take your strictures at what they are worth.—Respectfully,

A New, Harmless Way To Banish Hairy Growths

(Beauty Topics.)

By following this suggestion any woman can, in the privacy of her own home remove every trace of hair or fuzz from her face: With powdered delatone and water mix enough paste to cover the not wanted hairs; apply and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off and wash the skin. This method is unfailing, harmless and quick in results, but care should be employed to get the genuine delatone.

It is always safe to send a Dominion Express Money Order. Five dollars costs three cents.
